UNWELCOME WEDDING GUESTS

Coal holes are obsolete in these days of wide skirts.

Striped Awning the Magnet That Modern Peeping-Tom and the Feminine Ubiquitous Unwelcome Guest Cannot Resist.

JUNE—magic month of blossoms, of dreams, fulfilled and yet to be, is upon us and with it comes the ever lovely bride and the negligible bridegroom, the not always lovely wedding and the wholly unlovely "Wedding Fan."

Not your sweet-scented, delicate bit of lace and ivory, dangling from the arm of the bride, or in a moment of fluttering consciousness, serving to shield her blushes from a too-curious world. Oh, dear no! Nothing of the sort!

The "Wedding Fan" is a pest, an unmitigated, unadulterated nuisance, from the standpoint of those on the "inside," at least, a public peeping-tom, a beast of prey, a vulgar pushing person to whom the sight of a striped awning outside the portals of a city church is the signal for commencement of his machinations.

Aye, more! He needs no striped canvas, no splash of scarlet velvet reaching across the pavement to start him on his journey of impertinence. Two lines in the penny paper of a June morning, and presto! the germ is alive, crying for quick liberation.

"The marriage of Miss Claribel Astor Vanderbilt, only daughter of Townsend DeLancy Vanderbilt, to Mortimer Spuyten Duyvil Tuxedo, will be solemnized at the Fifth Avenue Church of the Apostles on Wednesday next at 4 o'clock."

This is sufficient to awaken the germ in the "Wedding Fan" and cause it to demand to be taken out for a little exercise. Mostly it is a female germ, keen with the heritage of Pandora, for insinuating itself into forbidden places.

Sex curiosity, desire to borrow a thrill from the joyous exaltation of the young bride, a yearning to gaze on the trappings of a world in which she plays no part, to discern wherein lies the difference between her Eighth ave. "steady" and the titled fiance of the Fifth ave. heiress, are some motives. And the 'fore the contractin' parties, the keener the appetite of the 'umble fan or faness, for a "nose-in" at the show.

"Nose-in," "toes-in," any-way-to-get-in, is the motto of your chronic wedding "bug," to whom invitations are never counted among the requisites of sight-seeing in High Society. The fashionable church wedding, calling for "cards of admittance," has a lure all its own to one of these creatures of the polished brass front crew.

Imperturable, rebuff-proof, case-hardened against mere insults from minions, these determined devotees of Hymen, who by no other means than plain larceny, could possibly put their thumb-prints on the precious, engraved (they feel of it to see) pasteboard, yet somehow find their devious way, trusting to miracle or lie for an open-sesame, past the police, past the ushers, up the aisle and sometimes e'en to the sacrosanct precincts of the "family pew."

At a Fifth ave. wedding a fortnight since, a handsome, dignified "grand dame" and her pretty "daughter," both impeccably attired, were halted at the church door on their failure to produce the proper passports.

The "mother's" first cue was pretense at not understanding and with a supercilious eyebrow at the delay, swept on toward the center aisle. Usher No. 1 tapped her on the arm, meaning "Come across, or right-about-face." Did she weep? Oh, none of such!

Instead a great indignation inspired her and "daughter" added her pretty protest, not a bit overdone. Finally when the old dear found her progress permanently impeded, she condescended to open her dangling opera bag and search for those "really quite unnecessary cards."

Daughter joined in the quest and both exchanged ostentatious glances of puzzled (sic) dismay when the cards remained "hid out."

"Why, mother dear, I saw them in the limousine," said "daughter," but the ushers had ushered before—"no card, no see."

By this time groups of bidden guests, holding crested credentials, who had been pouring forth from motors, were frothing at the mouth.

"Why, I went to school with her mother," protested the "grand dame" as the bride's party went in but a few feet away. "Little Gladys here is such a friend of the groom's. Surely we can have seats without those stupid cards."

Surely they couldn't! The suspicious ushers, who possessed the instincts of headquarters detectives, with quiet but firm pressure on the shoulder, escorted those who had attempted to "horn in" to the vestibule, where the angry views of both became audible and culminated in a tirade of Bowery blasphemy, at the ushers, the bride, her parents and grandparents, the church and all future functions of the "Upper Ten."

"Can you beat it?" asked the ushers.

From all walks of life come the "Wedding Fans." With some, insatiable curiosity for all doings of the "beau monde," seems congenital and all ages, they are on the "qui vive" at the first notice of any function, whether wedding or funeral. These are the morbidly curious, as omnipresent as the innocent bystanders, always to be found, an anticipatory foot across the "dead line."

Sometimes it is the little dressmaker from an obscure side street, who dons her best regularly during the open season for weddings, and joins the pushing, gaping crowds about the awnings. She patiently awaits the coming of the bridal party to take note of the "smart" frocks, freshly turned out from the atelier of some Paris creator. It is largely a business proposition with her—she is after ideas.

More often it is the proprietor of some grand establishment on the avenue, who bee-lines to every fashionable church wedding, awaits her chance to squeeze in "along of a regular invite" and then pass as one of the family group. Once in the haven of a church pew, she drops devoutly to her knees, averting suspicion until the organ's bourdon begins that "here-comes-the-bride" thing.

All the world loves a lover and the striped attempts at privacy at the church portals are but calls to arms to the sentimentalists who evince an especial fondness for lovers soon to become merely married—instead of lovers. Perhaps, after all, the bulk of the "Wedding Fans" are of the sentimental persuasion.

When the ever-popular Alice Roosevelt was married a small girl dashed out from the crowds and placed a grimy hand on the bride's veil, then dashed back again to be welcomed with: "Did you touch 'er, dearie?" from the mother.

From a London crowd one sometimes received the personal verdict as was the case when one of England's oldest and best, a man of diminutive proportions, mated with a tall, stately beauty.

"Ain't 'e th' little white rabbit!" came from standersby. There are ways and ways of getting in—just as there are of getting out. For example some of the fans at May Goelet's wedding to the Duke of Roxburghe entered the church by means of the coal hole. Wide skirts have made this difficult for the feminine gender, however.

Claiming kinship, however distant, is a favorite "dodge." Your aggressive, burglarful fan stops at nothing to get in. A he milliner usually adopts these methods.

At a still remembered wedding in London, in which the contracting parties were closely affiliated on the one side with the shoe industry, and on the other with an Italian table d'hote, the desire of a certain male creator to get a "look in" led him to tell a "bobby" he was the bridegroom. It happened, however, that the "bobby" read the papers and he "jolly well outed the blighter" you may believe, "'s 'elp me if he didn't." The pretender's make-up was "tout en regle" but his accent was "nil," or something like that.

Keen with the heritage of Pandora for insinuating into forbidden places.

BOOK REVIEWS IN TABLOID

MRS. ALICE DUER MILLER.

Who occupies an equally important place in society, in suffrage and in the writing of melodious or frivolous lyrics, and who has at last in "Are Women People?" given the feminist cause a weapon of rhythmical humor.

Are Women People? The author of this collection of suffrage rhymes, is a popular society woman; she is the author of "The Modern Obstacle," "Calderon's Prisoner," "Less Than a Kin," "Blue Arch," etc. The question is asked, "Have suffragettes a sense of humor?" The answer is given, "Only two days before the writing of this letter the writer noticed in a New York paper of considerable reputation a cartoon in which the characteristic suffragette was depicted as a battle ax of an old woman with a shirt waist, grim eyeglasses and a face like a fist." The cartoonists, she says, are humorless as well as the humorists who try to be so humorous now, but who, from the standpoint of the modern woman, make such a dismal failure.

Introduction.

Father, what is a legislature?
A representative body elected by the people of the state.
Are women people?
No, my son, criminals, lunatics and women are not people.
Do legislators legislate for nothing?
Oh, no, they are paid a salary.
By whom?
By the people.
Are women people?
Of course, my son, just as much as men are.

Why We Oppose Schools for Children.

Because not one-tenth of 1 per cent of the children of this country have demanded education.
Because if we are educated we should have to behave as if we were and we don't want to.
Because it would make dissension between parent and child. Imagine the home life of a parent who turned out to be more ignorant than his (or her) child!

The Protected Sex.

With apologies to James Whitcomb Riley.

There, little girl, don't read,
You are fond of your books, I know,
But Brother might mope
If he had no hope
Of getting a share of you.
It's dull for a boy who cannot lead.
There, little girl, don't read.

The writer says that the time has come when the suffragettes are weary of having men, husbands, fathers or brothers patronizingly exclaim, say: "There, there, little woman, go home and get my dinner, and I will do all the thinking for you," etc.

How It Feels to Be the Husband of a Suffragette. By Him. The author is a well-known editor who believes that it is wise to style himself as another "anonymous" writer. The book is very attractively illustrated by May Wilson Preston. Among the interesting questions asked by Him is "Does it make the husband happier or unhappier to have the mater go out for suffrage? Does she devote too much time to the cause?"

One husband says that it's more fun —and a whole lot more inspiration— to have a suffragette wife, and then he very interestingly tells why. Even the unknown author says she is, too, has been asked if women should vote, and then before he had made his reply sufficiently clear and intelligible, she interrupted by asking "Are women people?" To which he very candidly replied "I believe they must be, or they wouldn't act the way they do."

The author says that he has a happy home and a suffragist wife and that they have lots of fun. (Publishers, George H. Doran company, New York city).

THE ALLIGATOR AND ITS ALLIES.

If you are interested in the alligator, this volume will be of special value to you. The author, A. M. Reese, professor of zoology in West Virginia university, and author of many interesting scientific books, has written this volume for the purpose of helping students of zoology, describing in detail the biology, anatomy and the development of the Crocodilia.

He describes the alligator in the first chapter from his personal observations —he makes a very instructive description of the skeleton, with short quotations from Reynolds'.

There is a chapter on the muscular system by a celebrated writer, and while the author has not verified the descriptions, it is nevertheless interesting.

The author explains something of the nervous system, as well as quoting from other writers, and in the last chapter devotes some time to the development of the American alligator.

There are sixty-five figures and twenty-eight plates. The book contains a bibliography and an index. (Scribner's Sons, New York and London).

THE SORROWS OF BELGIUM.

Mr. Leonid Andreyev, author of "Anathema," and other powerful dramatic scenes translated by Herman Berstein, which has attracted much attention, for this great Russian writer has written sadly and deeply of the sorrows of Belgium. He is a writer of great sympathy and it is with profound sadness that he tells of the sufferings in Russia as a result of this terrible war. He says that German militarism and German influences are responsible for the sorrows of the smaller and weaker nationalities.

In the introduction he says: "It is necessary for all to understand that the end of Jewish sufferings is the beginning of our self respect, without which Russia cannot live. The dark days of the war will pass and the German barbarians of today will once more become the cultured Germans whose voice will again be heard throughout the world. And it is essential that neither their voice nor any other voice should call us loudly 'Russian barbarians.'

It is said that the hero of the drama is intended to be Masterlinck and that one of the other characters is King Albert, which adds to the impressiveness of the drama.

It is to be hoped that this little volume of sorrow will be widely read and that it will have the power to impress upon all nationalities the horrors of war. (The MacMillan Company.)

FOR THE HOUSEKEEPER.

The Housekeeper's Handbook. By Sarah J. MacLeod, instructor in care of house, School of Household Science and Arts, Pratt Institute. The book is a very small one and yet it should be in every housekeeper's hands, for it contains the results in experiments in laboratories of the application of science to household problems, tells the housekeeper how to battle with dirt and yet save time and energy. Among the chapters are: "Importance and cost of Cleanliness," which is the first chapter and perhaps the most important—an interesting paragraph is as follows: "The very fact that people are willing to live in dirty, filthy surroundings shows that they lack some important factor in their make-up. Their lack of standard of cleanliness may be due to ignorance, or, worse still, it may be due to sheer laziness and lack of thought."

Another paragraph Mrs. Ellen H. Richards, the pioneer in this country of the application of science to the problems of the home, in her valuable little book, "The Cost of Cleanness," says: "Cleanliness is expensive, and that to keep just above the diphtheria level takes one-quarter as much as is paid for rent, and that for a really sanitary cleanliness there will be required a sum equal to nearly or quite one-half as much as is paid for rent, or 12½ per cent of the whole income."

There are three "d's"—dust, darkness and dampness—that the housekeeper should never forget, for in summer they offer all that is necessary for the growth of dangerous dirt or bacteria.

One of the most interesting subject titles in this little volume is "The Kitchen," "Ventilation," "How to Sweep, Dust and Clean a Room," "Household Insects and Pests," "The General Care of Clothing," etc. (Harper & Brothers, Publishers, New York.)

THE "MISS PAT" SERIES.

Miss Pat and Her Sisters is the first volume of a new series of fascinating stories for girls by Pemberton Ginther. The author, Miss Ginther, is a very popular writer and being full of fun she is regular tom boy from a girl's point of view, but they are really girls—lovely and lovable. The story tells how the three Kendall sisters fall heir to a fascinating old mansion and the numerous adventures they experience in trying to make a living out of it. The Table of Contents alone will prove to all girls that they are going to read about some splendid girls and enjoyable times, from the time they arrived at their new home, their first callers, the new library, Patricia to the rescue, the invading host, Miss Pat's temptation, Edward Francis appears and the open door.

Miss Pat at School is the second volume and describes a winter in Philadelphia where Patricia and Elinor went to cast their lot with the fortunes of the art students. Judith goes to school and declares that she is going to be an author as she scribbles between times. The next volume will tell you of the European trip taken by the three sisters where they go to pursue their several ambitions. These stories are so full of life and fun that even the old will enjoy renewing their days of youthful pleasure in reading this new series. (The John C. Winston company, Philadelphia.)

MISCELLANEOUS.

Sleep and Sleeplessness. By H. Addington Bruce, A. M., author of "The Riddle of Personality," etc. This volume, which belongs to the Mind and Health Series, asks the following questions. "What makes us sleep" "How many hours of sleep do we really need" and they are answered in a most satisfactory manner, telling the causes and the most approved modern methods of treatment. (Little, Brown & Co., Boston.)

A Text Book of the War for Americans. By William J. White, M. D. A book for the general reader who really wants to understand the many perplexing problems which are simply waiting for the right solution and which involves, directly or indirectly, the present and future safety and prosperity of America.

Dr. White has brought together in clear, logical, readable form the vital facts and arguments from the writings of different authorities, chiefly American, and has answered clearly and fully many of the important questions involved in the European war. The Table of Contents will give the reader an idea of the scope and importance of the subjects: 1. What evidence exists as to the real reason, the fundamental cause of this war? 2. What is the evidence as to the events leading up to the war in their relation to the culpability of Germany? 3. What has been the attitude of the German apologists in relation to Belgium since the violation of neutrality? 4. What about Germany's treatment of Belgium as expressed now? 5. What estimation does America today hold Belgium? 6. Is there any evidence which tends to show why the present time was selected by Germany to precipitate the war? 7. What are the principles represented by the opposing forces in this war? There are about 500 pages and twenty chapters which makes this volume most interesting and invaluable as a book of reference. (John C. Winston company, Philadelphia.)

The New American Government and Its Work. By James T. Young, professor of public administration, Wharton School of Finance and Commerce, University of Pennsylvania. (The MacMillan company, New York city.)

Aunt Sarah and the War. A tale of transformations. It is full of the new spirit which seems to have come over the men and women of England. The author, unknown, says that "those who, like the hero, have borne the hardships of the trenches; those who, like the heroine, have felt the heart wrench, will not soon return to the superficial and thoughtless ways of yesterday." (G. P. Putnam's Sons, New York.)

The Master Scientist. An Index to the Healing Power of Christ, and a Guide to Health, Plenty and Peace. By Anonymous Author. A striking testimonial to the merit of a book is the manner in which it has been received by leading clergymen of practically every denomination. Here is what Bishop Nelson, Dr. Wilmer, Dean Atkinson and Rev. W. W. Memminger, of the Episcopal church, united in commending the force of the book. Dr. Bricker, of the Christian church, and Rev. W. W. Landrum, perhaps the most widely representative of the Southern Baptist church, were so much impressed with the wholesome counsel of the book as to give it their earnest commendation.

The author of the book is a well-known business man and is a member of an orthodox church. He has treated the subject in a manner so broad as to give his argument peculiar force to any reader of any church. There is not a word nor a line in it that conflicts with the broad work of the orthodox church, but, on the other hand, much of it is based upon the very foundation upon which all creeds of Christianity rest.

(From Woman's Home Companion.)

Since the importance of a hot, nourishing luncheon at noon is well recognized, the only problem is how to get it. Five teachers in a suburban school near Chicago solved the problem.

Instead of bothering with a luncheon every day, each teacher furnished the entire luncheon for five, one certain day in the week, and the mothers rejoiced. One hot dish, often more, was brought in the basket. The primary teacher, who was free at 11:30 o'clock, immediately went to the basement, unpacked the basket and set the pan of creamed potatoes or baked beans on the shelf of the furnace, where the food would be piping hot when needed. Steak was often broiled, and always there was a hot drink. An oil stove was used where there was no furnace fire. Each teacher brought her own plate, cup and saucer, spoon, knife and fork, which were washed in a few moments and left in a small cupboard near at hand.

The arrangement was most satisfactory, and besides furnishing a hot, nourishing meal, eaten comfortably at a table, it was a relief to the mothers to be free from all thought of luncheons except one day in the week.

Lime Medication in Tuberculosis

In the N. Y. Medical Record of December 5, 1914, Dr. John North, of Toledo, says: "I have come to the conclusion that one of the most prominent causes (of tuberculosis) is 'lime starvation.' " In all cases of incipient tuberculosis there is a deficiency of calcium. Many do not eat food containing enough lime. " In such cases we must resort to lime medication."

Bickman's Alterative should be given a fair trial in such cases, because one of its chief ingredients is calcium (lime), in such combination with other remedial agents as to be easily assimilated by the average person.

Where its use is combined with proper diet, fresh air and hygienic living conditions, we believe it will prove beneficial in any case of tuberculosis.

It contains no opiates, narcotics or habit-forming drugs, so is safe to try. From your druggist or direct.

Militia Charges Crowd at Slaton Home; 26 Prisoners Now Held in County Jail

Men Under Arrest Deny They Were Violating Any Law, Offering Varied Excuses for Their Presence Near the Governor's Residence at an Early Hour Saturday Morning.

TWO VOLLEYS FIRED BY STATE GUARDSMEN, DECLARE PRISONERS

Militia Claim Someone in Crowd Fired Six Times at Soldier Stationed in Rear of Governor's Home—No One Injured — Riot Guns Sought by a Crowd.

After making an unsuccessful effort shortly after midnight Saturday morning to secure fifteen riot guns, which are kept for protection at the Hemphill avenue pumping station, a crowd of 200 men marched to the country home of former Governor John M. Slaton, near Buckhead. Here they were met by the state militia and in the encounter that followed twenty-six men, alleged members of the mob, were placed under arrest.

They are now at the Fulton county jail, but no charge has yet been docketed against them. The prisoners range in age from 16 to 42. They give various reasons for their presence near the home of the governor.

EXCHANGE OF SHOTS.

The militiamen claim, it is understood, that some one fired six shots at a guard posted in the rear of the Slaton home and within the district where martial law is in effect.

Following these shots, which are said to have been fired about 2 o'clock, Saturday morning, the prisoners state that the militia rushed two battalions into the niche of woods, and immediately forced them to retreat by firing two volleys into the darkness.

No one was hurt on either side.

The militiamen imediately were ordered to begin making arrests of every one in the neighborhood of the Slaton residence.

C. E. Webb, aged 16, of 51 Whitehall Terrace, was the first prisoner taken, according to his statements. He and his companion-prisoners say that in the combat with militiamen young Webb was knocked down twice, and that three of his jaw teeth were knocked out before he was overcome. Shortly on the heels of this arrest, which seemed only to infuriate the others, Herbert Jaffares, age 19, of 100 Oliver street, was made a prisoner by the militia.

CAPTURED NEAR HOME.

All the twenty-six prisoners were captured within a short radius of the Slaton home. The prisoners state that five pistols and one black rubber club, taken from them, and that a number of dynamite caps and fuses were discovered by the militia in the niche of woods directly in rear of the Slaton residence.

The twenty-six were carried by the militia to the stables of ex-Governor Slaton, where they were held prisoners until 10 o'clock Saturday morning, when they were transferred in a special car to Atlanta under guard of a militia detachment and county police, and incarcerated in the Fulton county Tower.

The prisoners say that Governor Slaton twice came out of his residence after daybreak to log them over, the first time about 6 o'clock and the second time thirty minutes later. Ex-Governor Slaton did not speak a word to these men, but to his horse stable, where the crowd was held.

Only a few of the prisoners now incarcerated in the Tower will tell for what purpose they were in the neighborhood. Some of the prisoners declare that they had been fishing at Bull Sluice. One of these midnight fishermen said that so many automobiles passed Bull Sluice that the fish were scared and couldn't bite, so he was returning to the city when arrested.

All the prisoners declare that they were not arrested together, but that they were arrested over a wide range of territory surrounding the Slaton residence, and that they were arrested throughout a period of two hours.

One prisoner says he was out buying cattle from some farmers in the neighborhood, when the militia stopped his taxi cab and arrested both himself and chauffeur.

NAMES OF PRISONERS.

The names of the prisoners are as follows: C. C. Voyles, age 25, and brother, T. R. Voyles, age 22, of 315 Wylie street, both metal sheet workers; T. M. York, age 29, and Aaron Keith, age 36, real estate dealers, with offices in the Austell building; A. E. Rudisal, age 20, and H. C. Peppers, age 30, both of 267 Formwalt street; L. R. Andrews, age 17, of Chattahoochee, Ga.; E. B. Barrow, age 26, 95 Whitehall terrace; Herbert Jaffares, age 19, 100 Oliver street; C. E. Webb, age 16, 51 Whitehall terrace; D. F. Meadows, age 28, 13 Fleming street; Ben Smith, 20 no address given R. R. Mitchell, age 19, and Claude Williams, age 21, both of 59 McDaniel street; Walter Fleischer, age 22, Howell Mill road; H. L. Gibson, age 20, 216 McPherson avenue; James Sturgus, age 19, of Bolton, Ga.; A. F. Lee, age 32, address not given; E. G. Smith, age 21, 10 Evans drive; J. W. Wynn, age 19, and W. A. Ragsdale, age 22, both of East Point, Ga.; E. Dallman, age 37, 82 South McDaniel street; Jack Benton, age 43, of Marietta, Ga., Mary Phagan's uncle; T. R. Bagwell, age 35, 185 West Fair street; George Cagle, age 27, of Capitol View; D. R. Miller, age 22, 103 Ponce de Leon place, a local builder.

Chief Beavers allowed the near beer saloons and locker clubs to reopen at 7 o'clock last night by revoking his order of Saturday morning closing them for the day.

Clamor of the Mob Does Not Represent State, Says Slaton

Will Exalt Georgia Wherever He Goes, Former Governor Asserts at Rotary Banquet to Gov. Harris.

Macon, which boasts of being "the heart of Georgia," Saturday, through the Macon Rotary club, joined hands with Atlanta in paying tribute to the first citizen of Georgia—Governor Nat E. Harris, forty years one of the Central City's leading citizens.

It was the Macon Rotary club that got behind the movement to bring more than 1,000 central Georgia citizens to Atlanta and participate in the inaugural ceremonies of one of their members, and when the great seal of state was delivered to the new governor at noon Saturday, the Macon multitude cheered lustily, and taking charge of the new chief executive, escorted him to the Hotel Ansley for an elaborate Rotary luncheon in his honor.

Many of the most prominent men of Georgia were around the banqueting board, among them being former Governor John M. Slaton, President Ogden Persons, of the Georgia senate; Speaker W. H. Burwell, of the house of representatives; United States Senator Hoke Smith, State School Superintendent M. L. Brittain, Adjutant General J. Van Holt Nash, Dr. W. N. Ainsworth, pastor of the Mulberry Methodist church, of Macon. Mayor Bridges Smith, of Macon, State Treasurer W. J. Speer, and Dr. M. Ashby Jones, pastor of the First Baptist church, of Augusta.

Jones Is Toastmaster.

With President Malcolm Jones, of the Macon Rotary club, presiding as toastmaster, several short speeches were made, among the speakers being ex-Governor Slaton, Governor Harris, Dr. Ashby Jones, Senator Smith and George H. Lone, managing editor of The Macon Telegraph, and chairman of the committee in charge of the celebration.

Governor Harris had always shown a great interest in the plan of procedure of the Rotary club in having each member rise and answer to roll call, stating his name and occupation, and this program was carried out at the luncheon Saturday.

Answering roll call, Governor Harris said: "My name is Nathaniel E. Harris. I live at Macon and for the next two years my business will be to be the governor of Georgia."

"My name is Hoke Smith. I am a resident of Georgia, and my occupation is that of a politician," answered Senator Smith, when his name was called.

Mayor of Macon.

Mayor Bridges Smith, one of Governor Harris' lifelong friends, said Macon was his home, and always, and that he was mayor of "The Heart of Georgia."

Ex-Governor Slaton answered: "My name is John M. Slaton, of Atlanta, the last governor before Governor Harris, and now a plain citizen and lawyer."

Dr. Ashby said that Augusta was his home, and that his occupation was that of a "sky pilot."

When on his call Dr. Jones took occasion to express his opinion of the crowds that have recently congregated on the street and who went one night during the week to the former governor's home.

"That misguided and irresponsible crowd which swept the streets of this great city toward your home," said Dr. Jones, addressing Mr. Slaton, "did not typify democracy. It was but a travesty of democracy. Genuine democracy is only when all the people speak at once."

Addressing Governor Harris, and alluding to his election, he said: "That was democracy; and as governor are the embodiment of a great idea, the personification of the voice of a free and untrammelled people."

Presents John Slaton.

In the course of his remarks, Dr. Ashby Jones referred to ex-Governor Slaton as the "beloved ex-governor of Georgia," and when President Malcolm Jones, of the Rotary club, introduced the retiring governor he said that Dr. Jones never more aptly used the word "beloved," and he presented the ex-governor as "Beloved Jack."

Former Governor Slaton thanked President Jones and Dr. Ashby Jones for their kind remarks, and addressing Dr. Jones, he said:

"Those demonstrations you have heard do not represent Atlanta; they do not represent Fulton county; they do they represent the great state of Georgia. Shortly I will go away on my vacation, one I planned months ago and the first real vacation I have had in years. Nowhere will I go and in aught but to exalt Georgia, her institutions and her people. Honest people differ with me, and for this I take no offense.

"I have sought to perform my duties as governor in accordance with the constitution of the state and my oath of office. There is a greater character than that which merely agrees with the title of governor, senator or other hon-

GREAT CROWD SEES HARRIS SWORN IN AS HEAD OF STATE

Presiding Officer Has Trouble Quieting the Gallery as Retiring Governor Slaton Arises to Deliver Great Seal of State.

PLAIN CLOTHES MEN SURROUND GOV. SLATON

Following Inauguration at Capitol Slaton and Harris Go to Ansley Hotel to Attend Rotary Luncheon.

New Governor Welcomed.

Governor Nat Harris and his family occupied the executive mansion Saturday night and the first incident after their arrival there was a splendid welcome to Governor Harris on the part of both Atlanta and Macon people.

Early last night the Macon Drum corps, accompanied by many Macon citizens, visited the executive mansion and gave the governor a serenade. They were joined by hundreds of Atlantans until the crowd numbered about 1,000 people, who demanded a speech.

Governor Harris expressed his appreciation and declared that he was particularly pleased that so many Atlantans were in the crowd.

"There is no difference between Atlanta and Macon," said Governor Harris. "We are all Georgians. The shuttle is busy weaving Atlanta and Macon together."

Governor Harris also expressed his appreciation of the magnificent manner in which Atlanta played host to the thousands of Maconites who attended the inauguration.

Judge Nat E. Harris, of Macon, was inaugurated governor of Georgia with impressive ceremonies yesterday at noon in the hall of representatives in the presence of the house and senate in joint session, statehouse officials and many prominent visitors.

The ceremony was interrupted once by hissing by visitors in the gallery, when retiring Governor Slaton arose to give the great seal of the state to Governor-elect Harris.

This demonstration was repeated outside the capital in more exaggerated form as ex-Governor Slaton left the statehouse, surrounded by a heavy body guard, to take his automobile.

Impressive Ceremonies.

The impressive ceremonies incident to the inauguration of Governor Harris began yesterday morning shortly after 10 o'clock, when a joint committee from the house and the senate of the general assembly called at the Piedmont hotel and escorted the governor and his family to the Terminal station to meet the Macon special train which brought to Atlanta the Second regiment Georgia National Guard, the Macon Drum and Bugle Corps, the Macon Rotary club, a large delegation from the Macon Bar association and a thousand more Macon friends of Governor Harris, who came to attend his inauguration.

The committee which accompanied Governor Harris to the Terminal station was composed of Representatives J. B. Fowler of Bibb, Walter P. Andrews of Fulton and H. J. Fullbright of Burke, and Senators J. O. Adams of the forty-third and N. L. Gillis of the sixteenth.

Procession Formed.

The Macon special train arrived at 10:30 o'clock, and the Macon delegation, with its various organizations, formed a procession in front of the Terminal to escort Governor Harris to the capitol. The procession itself was escorted by a squadron of mounted police, the Fifth regiment and the governor's Horse Guards, of Atlanta. With braying bands, the procession marched down Mitchell street to Whitehall, northward up Whitehall to Hunter and thence to the capitol.

On Washington street, in front of the capitol, the militia organizations lined up and "presented arms" as Governor Harris was escorted into the building.

Governor Harris went to the office of Governor Slaton, where the retiring governor and the governor-elect were met, in an informal reception, by statehouse officials, elect and retiring, members of the supreme and appellate court benches, ex-statehouse officials and many other prominent visitors. Among them were Mrs. Slaton and Mrs. Harris, ex-Governor Joseph M. Brown and Mrs. Brown.

Meanwhile the house and senate had assembled in joint session in the hall of the house of representatives, with President Persons, of the senate, presiding.

At 11:50 o'clock the doorkeeper of the house announced that the governor-elect and the retiring governor desired to enter.

Governor Slaton and Governor-elect Harris, escorted by statehouse officials, marched down the center aisle of the house and to the rostrum of the speaker of the house.

Hall Packed to Capacity.

Meanwhile friends of both governors and other specially invited parties had been admitted to the floor of the house and had been assigned seats in front of the rostrum. The gallery was

The Situation on the Eastern Front!

BATTLE CONTINUES ON DNIESTER RIVER WITHOUT DECISION

Both Sides Have Lost Heavily, But Russians Seem to Have Temporarily Halted the Teutonic Advance.

CLAIMS OF VICTORY MADE BY THE RUSSIANS

It Is Said All Attempts of Teutons to Gain Foothold on the Right Bank of the Dniester Have Been Foiled—Desperate Battles Seem to Be Imminent.

London, June 26.—The battle of the Dniester, which will decide the fate of the left wing of the Russian army in Galicia, sways back and forth along the river banks, so far without decisive results. The Russians have thrown considerable reinforcements into this area, but whether they are planning a serious offensive or are merely fighting stubbornly, preparatory to another retreat, is uncertain.

Both sides have lost heavily, General von Linsingen's right flank and center having been badly cut up when the Russians threw the Austro-Germans back across the river.

RUSSIAN LINES FORTIFIED.

The Russians have been fortifying their lines from the river to the Russian frontier, and, with the Austro-German lines of communication lengthening daily, the task of forcing the Russians eastward becomes more and more formidable. Although Berlin claims that the Teutonic allies have been forging ahead between the Dniester and the district which they occupied east of Lemberg, the advance lacks the characteristics of the impetuous rush so noticeable in former stages of the Galician campaign.

From Petrograd come claims of a victory in a six-day battle along the Dneister, all attempts of the Teutons to gain a foothold on the north bank of the river having been frustrated with heavy loses to the attacking troops. The latest German official statement admits that Russian forces still hold the right bank near Halicz, this being coupled with the statement that General von Linsingen's troops are keeping up their attacks to effect a crossing and that fighting continues between the Dniester and the district east of Lemberg.

HARD FIGHING PREDICTED.

According to the Russian belief, desperate battles are likely soon to be fought in the vicinity of Kosmierjine, near the Dneister, where it is declared the Germans have been concentrating.

Accounts of German military activity in Russian Poland come at the same time as reports that many big guns from Essen, Germany, are being shipped into that region, possibly in preparation for another drive at Warsaw. Provincial Russian newspapers accordingly have occurred not far from the East Prussian border, the Germans claiming the capture by storm of a Russian position north of Prasnysz, and the Russians admitting a reverse in that region through superior artillery fire by the Germans.

Neither French nor German statements indicate operations of any immediate moment in the western war arena. The French admit lack of progress, due in many places, it is delcared, to stormy weather, but claim gains on the front, while the Germans set forth the repulse of all French attacks and the retaining of some trenches previously lost.

RUSSIANS REPULSED, AUSTRIANS CLAIM.

London, June 27.—(4:19 a. m.)—The official communication from Vienna,

HUERTA ADHERENTS RUSHING TO BORDER TO INVADE MEXICO

Washington Hears That a New Revolutionary Movement Will Be Started in the War-Riven Republic.

GEN. HUERTA REPORTED AMONG THOSE IN PARTY

This Report, However, Lacks Confirmation--Villa and Carranza Factions Excited by the News—Carranza Army Defeated Near Mexico City.

Washington, June 26.—Official news of a severe defeat of the Carranza forces advancing on Mexico City was quite overshadowed in interest today by announcements from both the Carranza and Villa agencies here that a large party of Huerta adherents, former military commanders and legislators, were en route to El Paso, presumably with the intention of starting a new military movement.

The Villa agency's announcement, communicated to the state department, said it had a report, which, however, was not positive, that Victoriano Huerta was among those in the party. General Huerta's secretary in New York, however, denied that the former dictator was on his way to the border. General Huerta left New York for the west last Wednesday, and it was reported he was bound for San Francisco.

The Carranza agency, in a statement, charged that General Felipe Angeles, Villa's chief lieutenant, now in the United States, came to set the new movement afoot.

The Carranza and Villa agencies have agreed in their public announcements, probably never before since they were established. The fact that both agreed that a new movement was afoot in Mexican affairs was regarded as more than usually significant.

Huerta Adherents on the Way.

"The confidential agency has re-

Pretty Girl Tells Story of Troubles With Her "Steady"

Petite Brunette Had Him Arrested on Charge of Allowing Another Girl to Wear Her Ring.

Miss Alvin Silvey, a petite brunette, who is very fair to look upon, appeared in the police court Saturday afternoon to testify against L. W. Dozier, a young man who has been her "steady."

Miss Silvey, who lives at 166 South Pryor street, had allowed the young man to wear her ring and he committed the awful offense of letting another girl wear it, she says. When Miss Silvey heard about it she notified Dozier that he must produce the ring forthwith. There was no production, and Miss Silvey asked the police to arrest Dozier and they accommodated her.

When she faced the young man in court and saw that he had the ring ready to return to her, Miss Silvey relented and begged the recorder not to punish him.

"But where does the city come in?" Recorder Johnson wanted to know. "Here you have put the police to all this trouble and taken the time of the court. No, no, Miss Alvin, we can't do business that way." So Dozier was fined $2.75.

"Won't you pay the fine for him?" the recorder asked the young lady.

NEGRO KILLS WOMAN AND HANGS HIMSELF

Butler, After Struggle, Shoots Miss Hattie Watson in Home of Brother-in-Law.

Philadelphia, June 26.—Miss Hattie M. Watson, sister-in-law of Frederick E. Hastings, a well-to-do resident of Devon, a suburb, was shot dead by the negro butler at the Hastings home today, after which the servant committed suicide. An investigation by county authorities failed to reveal a motive for the crime and a coroner's jury rendered a verdict that the butler, Jerry Thomas, had killed the woman and ended his own life while insane.

The negro shot Miss Watson during a struggle. Thomas' wife, who is also employed in the Hastings home, came upon the pair as they were struggling in the hallway of the first floor of the house. Before the butler's wife could interfere he shot Miss Watson, dragged her body to a porch and then ran from the place. Later Thomas' body was found hanging in a nearby barn with a bullet in the head.

Miss Watson, who was formerly of Northampton, Mass., was about 50 years old, and had been making her home with her brother-in-law and sister for several years. She was known to be of a quiet disposition and not given to quarreling with the servants, according to relatives. One theory advanced as the cause for the murder was that Miss Watson may have reproved the butler for something he had not done properly.

Mr. and Mrs. Hastings, who were away from home when the shooting occurred, said that the butler was of a quiet disposition, and had never caused the family any trouble

1,000 IMPORTERS PROTEST BLOCKADE BY GREAT BRITAIN

American Business Men Present Petition to State Department Asking That Neutral Rights Be Respected.

DEMAND RIGHT TO SHIP NON-CONTRABAND GOODS

Through Neutral Countries To or From Germany. They Also Demand American-Owned Merchandise Now Held Up in Germany.

Washington, June 26.—Pressure of a formal and organized character was exerted today on the United States government to secure from Great Britain a modification of the embargo on all commercial intercourse between Germany and neutral countries.

Twenty members of a committee appointed by more than 1,000 American importers laid before Secretary Lansing and other state department officials a petition setting forth that Great Britain has "studiously avoided" answering the American note of March 30; that in the meantime valuable time has been lost in preparing for future business, and that the general effect had been harmful to the "long-established trade of this country."

Plan of the Importers.

The importers pleaded for "an uninterrupted supply of American-owned merchandise, whether the same has been paid for, contracted for, or may be contracted for," and the unrestricted right to ship non-contraband goods through neutral countries to or from Germany.

In a statement issued by the importers after their conference, it was revealed that Secretary Lansing had expressed a determination on the part of both the president and himself to do all in their power to aid the importers in securing the rights to which they are entitled under the laws of nations and by treaty obligations."

The effect of today's conference will not be apparent for several days. Secretary Lansing took the facts presented by the importers under consideration and will communicate with President Wilson.

Preparing Note to Britain.

It has already been announced that the state department, for many weeks, has been preparing further representations to Great Britain asking for a modification of the so-called blockade. The president, however, has been unwilling to complicate the situation while the delicate negotiations with Germany were in progress.

There has been an insistence in many quarters that a note should be sent to Great Britain simultaneously with the German negotiations to emphasize the intention of the United States to defend neutral rights, whether violated by the allies or Germany. Mr. Wilson has told friends that he has been on both sides of the question of sending a note to Great Britain at Oxford, Ga., June 26.—(Special.)—One of the most remarkable young men in the recent class of forty-six who graduated from Emory is Youtaik Kim, of Korea. Mr. Kim was one of the eight members of the class to make a speaker's place at commencement, and was awarded the senior orator's medal. His theme was "America the Hope of the World." Ten years ago, in Honolulu, Youtaik, a lad of 15, was often hungry because he did not know how to ask for something to eat, or when meals were announced. On commencement day, at Emory, practically every word of his splendidly delivered oration was understood by a large and appreciative audience.

High Scholastic Honors Won by Korean at Emory

Mr. Kim was born in Pyeng Yang, Korea, some twenty-five years ago. When he was 15 years old he came with his father, Rev. Y. S. Kim, to the Hawaiian Islands. There, for two years, he was a student in Mills institute, beginning in the primary department. He was graduated from Waiesks, 1912, and entered the sophomore class in Emory that fall. In addition to completing the required course for the Ph. B. degree and making senior speaker's place, Mr. Kim was anniversary orator for the Few Literary society, and was on the honor roll, 1913, 1914, 1915. He will enter the medical school of Emory university, Atlanta Medical college, this fall.

Mr. Kim has a brother, an evangelist in Korea, who was educated in the California Bible institute, Los Angeles. A sister, Miss Hyengsoon Kim (English name Esther), now 20 years old, is a student of music in the California Bible institute.

Another interesting foreigner in Mr. Kim's class is James Inouye, of Kioto, Japan. Mr. Inouye also made speaker's place at commencement and was awarded the chemistry medal.

Doo Wha Lim, of Korea, is now a pupil in Emory, having finished sophomore year. He was one of the six sophomores to make a declaimer's place at the recent commencement.

Stagnant Blood Given A Quick Impulse

Wonderful Activity Imparted by a Famous Remedy.

The appearance of pimples, boils, skin eruptions and all evidence of impure blood, calls for S. S. S., the famous blood purifier. Cathartics, purges, bowel movers and laxatives won't do.

No amount of bile will destroy certain germs which cause blood and skin eruptions. They are away down deep in the tissues, perhaps in the very marrow of the bones. And such a condition calls for the searching influence of S. S. S. It is indeed a remarkable remedy, since it is taken up by the blood stream and never loses its medicinal influence. On and on it goes, through and through the entire system and always with the same definite action to dislodge germs, destroy their activity and stimulate the liver, lungs, kidneys, bowels and skin to throw them out completely.

It stimulates stagnant blood, provides a rational exhilaration to the nerve centers and thereby the natural functions of the body are aroused to cast out intruders, no matter how strongly intrenched they may be. It refutes the ancient theory that to destroy within us the germs that eat into our vitals calls for drugs that destroy our very existence. Get a bottle of S. S. S. today of any druggist and for special advice on severe blood disorders write at once to the Medical Adviser, The Swift Specific Co., 103 Swift Bldg., Atlanta, Ga. Do not accept a substitute. BAHNSEN WAGING WAR IN GEORGIA ON CATTLE TICK

The amount of good which is being accomplished by Dr. Peter P. Bahnsen, state veterinarian, in his fight to rid Georgia of the cattle tick can be seen by reading his annual report, which has just been made to Commissioner of Agriculture J. D. Price. In this report he pays a high tribute to cotton seed meal as a feedstuff. His tribute to this nutritious and inexpensive feed follows:

"Every pound of cotton seed meal fed on the farm helps to make the owner, or the tenant rich; every pound of this great feeding concentrate sold outside of the state means a direct loss to the state and must ultimately be replaced by less valuable, yet more expensive, nitrates in our commercial fertilizer. Cotton seed meal and corn or corn and sorghum ensilage is one of the least expensive and at the same time one of the best combinations for finishing cattle for market available."

Dr. Bahnsen has long had the co-operation of the Cotton Seed Crushers' Association of Georgia in his effort to rid the state of the cattle tick and many of the mills in Georgia have built, at their own expense, concrete dipping vats along the specifications furnished by Dr. Bahnsen.

With the heavy demand abroad, as well as at home for meat, and the gradual eradication of the cattle tick, it is believed that the cattle raising industry will continue to grow in favor, not only in Georgia, but throughout the south.

FIFTEENTH INSTALLMENT

SYNOPSIS.

Stanford Quest, master criminologist of the world, finds that in bringing to justice Macdonald, the murderer of Lord Ashleigh's daughter, he has but just begun a life-and-death struggle with a mysterious master criminal. In a hidden hut in Professor Ashleigh's garden he has seen an ape skeleton and a living creature, half monkey, half man, destroyed by fire. In his rooms have appeared black boxes containing notes, signed by a pair of armless hands. Laura and Lenora, his assistants, suspect Craig, the professor's servant, of a double murder. The black boxes continue to appear in uncanny fashion. Craig, captured, escapes to Mont Salt. Quest and his party follow, and beyond into the desert. They are captured by Monarn, escape with Craig as their captive, turn him over to Inspector French in San Francisco. He escapes in a train wreck, outgenerals his pursuers, and goes back to New York, where he dies while Quest is attempting to hypnotize him into confession.

CHAPTER XXXV.

The first shock was over. Craig's body had been removed, and the girls had taken Mary, half stunned with grief, to their room. French and Quest were left alone.

"This is some disappointment," the former remarked, gloomily.

"It is a disappointment," Quest said, slowly, "which may clear the way to bigger things."

"What's in your mind now?" French inquired.

Quest shook his head.

"A turmoil. First of all, where is the professor?"

"Must have scooted right away home," French suggested. "He was looking pretty sick all the time. Guess it must have been a powerful shock for him, and he isn't so young as he used to be."

"Give me that paper of Craig's again," Quest asked, stretching out his hand.

"Never to communicate or to have anything to do with anyone of the name of Ashleigh, eh?" he remarked, as he handed it back again. "Rather a queer provision, that, French."

"I've been thinking that myself," the inspector admitted. "Seems to be rather reversing the positions, doesn't it?"

Quest glanced at the clock.

"Well," he said, "if you're ready, inspector, we'll be getting along."

The two men drove to the outskirts of the city almost in silence. The professor's house seemed more than ever deserted as they drew up at the front door. They entered without ringing and crossed the hall towards the library. On the threshold Quest paused and held up his finger.

"Someone is in there," he whispered, stepping quickly forward. "Come!"

He threw open the door. The room was empty, yet both Quest and French were conscious of a curious conviction that it had been occupied within the last few seconds. French even shook out the curtains and swung open the doors of a bureau. There was no sign of anybody, however, nor any evidence as to how they could have left the room.

"Queer, but it seemed to me I heard someone," French muttered.

"I was sure of it," Quest replied, shaking the curtain at the back of the door.

They stood still for a moment and listened. The silence in the empty house was almost unnatural. Quest turned away with a shrug of the shoulders.

"At any rate," he said, "Craig's dying thoughts must have been truthful. Come."

He led the way to the fireplace, went down on his knees and passed his hands over the bricks. The third one he touched, shook. He tapped it—without a doubt it was hollow. With his penknife he loosened the mortar a little and drew it out easily. The back was open. Inside was the black box.

"Craig's secret at last!" French muttered, hoarsely. "Bring it to the light, quick!"

They were unemotional men, but the moment was supreme. The key to the mystery of these tragical weeks was there in their hands! Their eyes almost devoured those few hastily scrawled words buried with so much care:

See page 62, January number, American Medical Journal, 1905.

They looked at one another. They repeated vaguely this most commonplace of messages. As the final result of their strenuous enterprise, these cryptic words seemed pitifully inadequate. Quest's face darkened. He crumpled the paper in his fingers.

"There must be some meaning in this," he muttered. "It can't be altogether a fool's game we're on. Wait."

He moved towards a table which usually stood against the wall, but which had obviously been dragged out recently into the middle of the room. It was covered with bound volumes. Quest glanced at one and exclaimed softly:

"American Medical Journal, 1905! French, there's something in this message, after all."

He turned over the pages rapidly. Then he came to a stop. Page 61 was there; page 62 had been neatly removed with a pair of scissors.

"The professor!" he cried. "The professor's been at work here!"

The two men stood looking at one another across the table. Strange thoughts were framing themselves in the brains of both of them. Then there came a startling end to its way a dramatic interlude. Through the empty house came the ringing of the electric bell from the front door, shrill and insistent. Without a moment's hesitation, Quest hurried out and French followed him. On the doorstep was another surprise. Lenora and Laura were there, the former carrying a small, black-bound volume.

"Don't be cross," she begged, quickly. "We just had to come. Look! We picked this up underneath the chair where Craig was sitting. It must have slipped from his pocket. You see what is written on it?—Diary of John Craig."

Quest took it in his hand.

"Say, this ought to be interesting," he remarked. "Come along."

They passed into the library. French lingered behind for a moment and caught them up just as they were opening the book underneath the electric lamp.

"See here what I've found!" he exclaimed. "It was just by the side of the wall there. Where's that magazine?"

He spread out the piece of paper—it fitted exactly into the empty space. They all read together:

Professor Ashleigh, after being bitten by the anthropoid, rapidly developed hydrophobia of a serious nature. After treatment with a new serum the patient was relieved of the hydrophobic symptoms, but to my horror this mild-mannered, humane man seems possessed at times of all the characteristics of the brutal anthropoid—cunning, thievery, brutality. I do not know what may come of this. I hesitate to put even these words on to paper. I am doubtful as to what course, in the interests of humanity, I ought to take.

(Signed) JAMES MERRILL, M. D.

Editor's Note—Just as we go to press, a cable announces the terrible death of Doctor Merrill, the writer of the above notes. He was attacked by wild animals whilst alone in a South American jungle, and torn to pieces.

There was a queer little silence among the company. No one seemed inclined for speech. They looked at one another in dumb, wondering horror. Then Quest drew a penknife from his pocket and with a turn of his wrist forced the lock of the diary. They all watched him with fascinated eyes. It was something to escape from their thoughts. They leaned over as he spread the book out before him. Those first two sentences were almost in the form of a dedication:

For ten years I have protected my master, Professor Edgar Ashleigh, at the cost of my peace of mind, my happiness, my reputation. This book, even though it be too late to help me, shall clear my reputation.

Quest closed the volume.

"French," he decided, "we must find the professor. Will you have your men search the house and grounds immediately?"

The inspector left the room like a dazed man. They could hear him giving orders outside.

Quest hesitated for a moment. Then he turned it over. All three read again:

Ten years of horror, struggling all the while to keep him from that other self, that thing of bestiality, to keep his horrible secret from the world, to cover up his crimes, even though their shadow should rest upon me. Now Sanford Quest has come. Will this mean discovery?

"Another page," Lenora faltered.

"No more," Quest said. "Don't you see where it is leading us? We have the truth here. Wait!"

He strode hastily to the door. French and one of the plain-clothes men were descending the stairs.

"Well?" Quest asked, breathlessly.

"The professor is not in the house," French reported. "We are going to search the grounds."

Quest returned to the library. Lenora clung to his arm. The diary lay still upon the table.

Quest opened the volume slowly. Again they all read together:

The evil nature is growing stronger every day. He is developing a sort of ferocious cunning to help him in his crimes. He wanders about in the dark, wearing a black velvet suit with holes for his eyes, and leaving only his hands exposed. I have watched him come into a half-darkened room and one can see nothing but the hands and the eyes; sometimes if he closes his eyes, only the hands.

"Mrs. Rheinholdt!" Quest muttered.

The door was suddenly opened and French entered.

"Beaten!" he exclaimed, tersely.

"You haven't found him?" Quest asked.

French shook his head.

"We've searched every room, every cupboard, every scrap of the cellar in the place," he announced. "We've been into every corner of the grounds, searched it all backwards and forwards. There's no sign of the professor."

Quest pocketed the diary.

"You're perfectly certain that he is not in this house or anywhere upon the premises?"

"Certain sure!" French replied.

Quest shrugged his shoulders.

"Well, we'd better get back," he said.

They were on the point of starting, the chauffeur with his hand upon the starting handle, French with the steering wheel of the police car already in his hand. And then the little party seemed suddenly turned to stone. For a few breathless seconds not one of them moved. Out into the clammy night air came the echoes of a hideous, inhuman, blood-curdling scream. Quest was the first to recover himself. He leaped from his seat and rushed back across the empty hall into the study, followed a little way behind by French and the others. An unsuspected panel door which led into the garden stood slightly ajar. The professor, with his hand on the back of a chair, was staring at the fireplace, shaking as though with some horrible ague, his face distorted, his body curiously hunched up. He seemed suddenly to have dropped his humanity, to have fallen back into the world of some strange creatures. He heard their footsteps, but he did not turn his head. His hands were stretched out in front of him as though to keep away from his sight some hateful object.

"Stop him!" he cried. "Take him away! It's Craig—his spirit! He came to me in the garage, he followed me through the grounds, he mocked at me when I hid in the tree. He's there now, kneeling before the fireplace. Why can't I kill him! He is coming! Stop him, someone!"

No one spoke or moved; no one, indeed, had the power. Then at last Quest found words.

"There is no one in the room, professor," he said, "except us."

The sound of a human voice seemed to produce a strange effect. The professor straightened himself, shook his head, his hands dropped to his side, ghastly pale, but his smile was once more the smile of the amiable naturalist.

"My friends," he said, "forgive me. I am very old, and the events of these last few hours have unnerved me. Forgive me."

He groped for a moment and sank into a chair. Quest fetched a decanter and a glass from the sideboard, poured out some wine and held it to his lips. The professor drank it eagerly.

"My dear friend," he exclaimed, "you have saved me! I have something to tell you, something I must tell you at once, but not here. I loathe this place. Let me come with you to your rooms."

He gripped Quest's arm. In silence they passed from the room, in silence they took their places

3—"He Is Dead!" Quest Declared.

once more in the automobiles, in silence they drove without a pause to Quest's rooms. The professor made his way at once to his favorite easy chair, threw off his overcoat and leaned back.

"Quest," he pronounced, "you are the best friend I have in my life! It is you who have rid me of my great burden. Tell me—help me a little with my story—have you read that page from the Medical Journal which Craig has kept locked up all these years?"

"We have all read it," Quest replied.

"It was forged," the professor declared, firmly, "forged by Craig. All the years since he has blackmailed me. I have been his servant and his tool. I have been afraid to speak. At last I am free of him. Thank God!"

"Craig, after all," French muttered.

Lenora stood a little apart with a faint frown upon her forehead. She touched Quest on the shoulder.

"Mr. Quest," she murmured, "he is lying!"

Quest turned his head. His lips scarcely moved. "What do you mean?" he whispered.

"He is lying!" Lenora insisted. "I tell you there's another creature there, something we don't understand. Let me bring the electro-thought transference apparatus; let us read his mind. If I am wrong, I will go down on my knees and beg for forgiveness."

Quest nodded. Lenora hastened to the farther end of the room, snatched the cloth from the instrument and wheeled down the little mirror with its coils and levers. The professor watched her. Slowly his face changed. The benevolence faded away, his teeth for a moment showed in something which was almost a snarl.

"You believe me?" he cried, turning to Quest. "You are not going to try that horrible thing on me—Professor Lord Ashleigh? I am all broken up. I am not fit for it. Look at my hands, how they shake."

"Professor," Quest said, sternly, "we are surrounded by the shadow of some terrible deeds for which as yet there is no explanation. I do not say that we mistrust you, but I ask you to submit to this test."

"I refuse!" the professor replied, harshly.

"And I insist," Quest muttered.

The professor drew a little breath. He sat back in his chair, his face became still, his lips were drawn closely together. Lenora wheeled up the machine and with deft fingers adjusted the fittings on one side. Quest himself connected it up on the other. The professor sat there like a figure of stone. The silence in the room was so intense that the ticking of the small clock upon the mantlepiece was clearly audible. The very atmosphere seemed charged with the thrill and wonder of it. Never before had Quest met with resistance so complete and immovable. Sternly he concentrated the whole of his will power upon his task. Almost at once there was a change. The professor fell back in the chair. The tense self-control had passed from his features, his lips twitched. Simultaneously the mirror for a moment was clouded—then slowly a picture upon it gathered outline and substance. There was a jungle, strange, tall trees, and brushwood so thick that it reached to the waists of the two men who were slowly making their way through it. One was the professor; the other a stranger to all of them. Suddenly they stopped. The latter had crept a yard or so ahead, his gun raised to his shoulder, his eyes fixed upon some possible object of pursuit. There was a sudden change in the professor. They saw him seize his gun by the barrel and whirl it above his head. He seemed suddenly to lose his whole identity. He crouched on his haunches, almost like an animal, and sprang at the other's throat. They could almost hear the snarl from his lips as the two men went down together in the undergrowth. The picture faded away.

"Doctor Merrill!" Lenora faltered. "Then it was not wild beasts which killed him."

Almost immediately figures again appeared in the mirror. There was a small passage which seemed to lead from the back entrance of a house; the professor, with a black mantle, Craig following him, pleading, expostulating. They saw the conservatory for a minute, and then blackness. The professor was leaning against a marble basin. There was nothing to be seen of him but his eyes and hands. They saw him listen for a moment or two in cold, unresponsive silence, then stretch out his hand and push Craig away. The picture glowed and faded and glowed again. Then they saw through the gloom the figure of a woman approach, a diamond necklace around her neck. They saw the hands steal out and encircle her throat—and then more darkness, silence, obscurity. The mirror was empty once more.

"Mrs. Rheinholdt's jewels!" Lenora cried. "What next? Oh! my God, what next?"

Their eyes ached with the strain, but there was not one of them who could even glance away from the mirror. It was Quest's study which slowly appeared then. The Salvation Army girl was there, talking to the professor. They saw him leave her, they saw him look back from the door, a strange, evil glance. Then the secretary entered and spoke to her. Once more the door opened. The hands were there, stretching and reaching, a paperweight gripped in the right-hand fingers. They saw it raised above the secretary's head, they saw the other hand take the girl by the throat and push her towards the table. A wild scream broke from Lenora's lips. Quest wavered for a moment. The picture faded out.

"Oh, stop it!" Lenora begged. "Haven't we seen enough? We know the truth now. Stop it or I shall die!"

The criminologist made no reply. His eyes were still fixed upon the professor, who showed some signs of returning consciousness. He was gripping at his collar. He seemed to have difficulty with his breathing. Quest suddenly braced himself. He pushed Lenora back.

"One more," he muttered. "There's something growing in his mind. I can feel it. Wait!"

Again they all turned towards the mirror. They saw the hallway of Ashleigh house, the pictures upon the walls, they could almost feel the quiet silence of night. They saw the professor come stealing down the stairs. He was wearing the black velvet suit with the cowl in his hand. They watched him pause before a certain door, draw on the cowl and disappear. Through the opening they could see Lord Ashleigh asleep in bed, the moonlight streaming through the open window across the counterpane. They saw the professor turn with a strange, horrible look in his face and close the door. Lenora burst into sobs.

"No more!" she shrieked. "No more, or I shall go mad!"

Quest leaned forward and released their victim. The whole atmosphere of the place seemed immediately to change. Lenora drew a long, convulsive breath and sank into a chair. The professor sat up and gazed at them all with the air of a man who has just awakened from a dream. His features relapsed, his mouth once more resolved itself into pleasant and natural lines. He smiled at them pleasantly.

"Have I, by any chance, slept?" he asked. "Or—" He never finished his sentence. His eyes fell upon the mirror, the metal band lying by his side. He read the truth in the faces still turned towards him. He rose to his feet. There was another and equally sudden change in his demeanor and tone. He carried himself with the calm dignity of the scientist.

"The end of our struggle, I presume?" he said to Quest, pointing to the metal band. "You will at least admit that I have shown you fine sport."

No one answered him. Even Quest had barely yet recovered himself. The professor shrugged his shoulders.

"I recognize, of course," he said, gravely, "that this is the end. A person in extremis has privileges. Will you allow me to write just a matter of twenty lines at your desk?"

Silently Quest assented. The professor seated himself in the swing chair, drew a sheet of paper towards him, dipped the pen in the ink and began to write. Then he turned round and reached for his own small black bag which lay upon the table. Quest caught him by the wrist.

"What do want out of that, professor?" he inquired.

"Merely my own pen and ink," the professor expostulated. "If there is anything I detest in the world, it is violet ink. And your pen, too, is execrable. As these are to be the last words I shall leave to a sorrowing world, I should like to write them in my own fashion. Open the bag for yourself, if you will. You can pass me the things out."

Quest opened the bag, took out a pen and a small glass bottle of ink. He handed them to the professor, who started once more to write. Quest watched him for a moment and then turned away to French. The professor looked over his shoulder and suddenly bared his wrist. Lenora seized her employer by the arm.

"Look!" she cried. "What is he going to do?"

Quest swung round, but he was too late. The professor had dug the pen into his arm. He sat in his chair and laughed as they all hurried towards him. Then suddenly he sprang to his feet. Again the change came into his face which they had seen in the mirror. French dashed forward towards him. The professor snarled, seemed about to spring, then suddenly once more stretched out his hands to show that he was helpless and handed to Quest the paper upon which had been writing.

"You have nothing to fear from me," he exclaimed. "Here is my last message to you, Sanford Quest. Read it—read it aloud. Always remember that this was not your triumph, but mine."

Quest held up the paper. They all read. The professor's letters were carefully formed, his handwriting perfectly legible:

You have been a clever opponent, Sanford Quest, but even now you are to be cheated. The wisdom of the ages outreaches yours, outreaches it and triumphs.

Quest looked up quickly.

"What the devil does he mean?" he muttered.

The professor's arms shot suddenly above his head. Again that strange, animal look convulsed his features. He burst into a loud, unnatural laugh.

"Mean, you fool!" he cried, holding out his wrist, which was slowly turning black. "Poisoned! That is what it means!"

They all stared at him. Quest seized the ink bottle, revealed the false top and laid it down again with a little exclamation. Then, before they could realize it the end came. The professor lay, a crumpled-up heap, upon the floor.

* * * * * * *

"Glad to see you, French. Help yourself to a cigar."

"I don't know as I want to smoke this morning just at present, thank you," French replied.

Quest laid down his pen and looked up. French was fidgeting about with his hat in his hand. He was dressed more carefully than usual, but he was obviously ill at ease.

"Nothing wrong, eh?"

"No, there's nothing wrong," French admitted. "I just looked in—"

Quest waited for a moment. Then he crossed his legs and assumed a patient attitude.

"What the dickens did you look in for?" he asked.

"The fact of it is," French explained, "I should like a few words with Miss Laura."

Quest laughed shortly.

"Why on earth couldn't you say so?" he observed. "Never knew you bashful before, Inspector. She's up in the laboratory. I'll ring for someone to show you the way."

"Take Inspector French up into the laboratory," Quest directed. "See you later, French."

"Yes—perhaps—I hope so," the inspector replied nervously.

Quest watched him disappear with a puzzled smile. Then he sat down at his desk, drew a sheet of paper towards him and began to write:

My Dear Inspector:

I am taking this opportunity of letting you know that out of deference to the wishes of the woman I hope soon to marry, I am abandoning the hazardous and nerve-racking profession of criminology for a safer and happier career. You will have, therefore, to find help elsewhere in the future.

With best wishes, Yours,

SANFORD QUEST.

He left the sheet of paper upon the desk and, ringing the bell, sent for Lenora. She appeared in a few moments and came over to his side.

"What is it, Mr. Quest?" she asked.

He gave her the letter without remark. She read it through and, turning slowly around, looked at him expectantly.

"How's that seem to you?" he asked, reaching out his hand for a cigar.

"Very sensible indeed," she replied.

"It's no sort of life, this, for a married man," Quest declared. "You agree with me there, don't you, Lenora?"

"Yes!" she admitted, a little faintly.

"If you are quite ready, Lenora."

"Ready?" she exclaimed. "Where are we going?"

Quest sighed.

"Fancy having to explain all these things!" he said, taking her arm. "I just want you to understand, Lenora, that I've waited—quite long enough. Parkins," he added, turning to his secretary, "if anyone calls, just say that my wife and I will be back early in the afternoon. And you'd better step upstairs to the laboratory and give my compliments to Inspector French, and say that I hope he and Miss Laura will join us at Delmonico's for luncheon at one o'clock.

"Very good, sir," the man replied.

Lenora's face was suddenly transformed. She passed her arm through Quest's. He stooped and kissed her as he led her towards the door.

"You understand now, don't you?" he whispered, smiling down at her.

GEORGIA'S NEW GOVERNOR.

With yesterday's inauguration ceremonies Georgia passes to a new executive administration presided over by Judge Nat E. Harris, of Macon, a tried and true "war horse," who has served the state always well in its adversity, in its growth and in its days of prosperity.

Judge Harris fought a good, clean fight, and goes into the foremost office in the gift of Georgians, not only with an unclouded personal and political record, but unhampered by the many political debts which so often beset the professional politician. He enters the executive office under conditions which will enable him to render his best service to the state; his record as governor was not made in his campaign, but is to be made in his office in the capitol.

It is within the power of Governor Harris to achieve much for the state. He has reached the period of life when a man is most conscious of the fact that there is no aim higher than that of rendering true service. He becomes governor backed by the confidence of the people, even of those who opposed him in the campaign.

It is his purpose to do, and he will do, those things which make for the best and highest interests of the state.

He has important things to do.

The state treasury is by no means overflowing; he must watch it with an eye that will keep expenditures within state income. The Western and Atlantic railroad problem is before him; the future of this valuable state property calls for the exercise of statesmanship's best judgment. There are other great problems with which legislature and governor will have to deal; it is fortunate that the two branches are in harmony and accord, for a legislature and an executive which are working at political cross purposes can often do much more harm than good.

In the selection of Judge Harris as governor Georgia has honored a distinguished confederate veteran who gave the best of his youthful service to his country. It has honored him not merely because he was a soldier in the service of the south, but because the same traits which made him a good soldier have made him an able man. Whether in the army, at the bar, on the bench or in the service of education he has always displayed those characteristics which marked him as a man of force and conservatism, of strength and ability, which mean the attainment of good results regardless of the point to which his energies are directed.

We predict for the new governor an administration that will win for him the hearts of the people as he has already won their confidence.

TO THE LEGISLATURE.

No more meritorious appeal will be made to the general assembly now in session than that in behalf of the common schools and of the institutions of higher learning in the state, which are comprised under the head of the University of Georgia and its branches, including the University of Georgia proper, the Georgia School of Technology, the State Normal school at Athens, the Georgia Normal and Industrial college, the North Georgia Agricultural college, the Georgia Medical college, the State College of Agriculture, the South Georgia Normal college and the Georgia Industrial School for Colored Youths. It will be seen that this list comprises all of the leading institutions of broader education which are under control and direction of the state.

As to the common schools, it is the duty of the general assembly to go the limit in their behalf.

The university and all its branches—nine institutions—will ask for a total of only $47,500 more than has been given them annually by the state for the last two or more years, an average increase of scarcely more than $5,000 each.

The sums absolutely needed for their maintenance were arrived at as the result of a conference between the University of Georgia trustees and the heads of the respective institutions interested. The maintenance problem was taken up, discussed and the conclusion reached with the understanding that the state faces the necessity for careful economy in the matter of appropriations to be made at this session.

With this fact carefully in view, the university trustees and heads of the institutions named determined to make no request beyond their positive necessities.

It is a remarkable fact that they have asked for less than is actually demanded and justified by natural growth!

Having lived now for four years without increased assistance from the state, the time has come when the maintenance of their efficiency demands the slight increase they are asking. They must have it or become seriously crippled.

The university trustees have, likewise, indorsed the proposal to supplement the appropriation that will come to this state for agricultural extension, from the federal government, through the Smith-Lever bill, provided Georgia gives a like amount to that work.

There is no question this appropriation will mean much for the advancement of agriculture in Georgia. The return will come in far greater proportion than the comparatively small outlay would appear to justify. The legislature will, of course, find the way to take advantage of this splendid opportunity.

In this connection the appropriations for confederate pensions this year will be $75,000 less than last; the state saves enough here to take care of all the nine institutions named, and to put up Georgia's part of the agricultural extension fund. Thus, it is not a question of additional appropriation, but to using money actually saved as compared with last year's expenditures, where it is most needed.

PRACTICAL AND CLASSICAL.

The best educational thought of the world is addressing itself to the proper adjustment of the relations between classical and technical training.

The old theory—that which existed before the widespread recognition of the importance of technical training—was that the classical was the all-important factor in real education.

The technical schools were at first developed on the theory that the practical was the sole consideration, and that the classical was non-essential.

The classical, therefore, was being developed solely at the expense of the technical, and vice versa.

The best modern thought is now being directed on the theory that instead of there being a conflict between the two, the most satisfactory results can be obtained by coordinating the classical and the technical, equipping the students in each in such a manner as to give them the unquestionable benefit of the broader information thus made available.

This thought was very interestingly developed in a recent address by Fairfax Harrison, president Southern railway, on the occasion of the last commencement of the University of Georgia. Mr. Harrison struck a timely keynote in earnestly supporting vocational, industrial and technical forms of education, but cautioning those promoting practical education not to overlook the basic value of the classical in all education.

This viewpoint is particularly significant when emphasized by a man to whom trained workers mean so much. Mr. Harrison is right. Though there may have been for a long time a tyranny of the classics in their hold on general education; and though more practical training has not yet fully met the demands of progress, a tyranny of practical education could prove just as dangerous in another way, and threaten the very best there is in the spirit of our civilization.

The ideal of the republic is that every man is what he makes himself, and that he should be equipped for his life work through the democracy of the school representing the greatest of American institutions.

This is the most constructive period in the south's making, and there is urgent need for the trained man to meet industrial demands.

Yet, education must not lose its first principle—that of mental development and character-building making directly for permanent achievement rather than for immediate results counted too often in dollars and cents.

The real democracy of education is that which gives every boy the equal opportunity to train his mind and discover wherein his talent lies.

It is opposed to this principle to segregate the classics; make an aristocracy of them, and limit them to the boy who has many years to study; and on the other hand to so practicalize the course of study for the boy pushed to earn his living early in life that he is cut off from the broader culture afforded by a fundamental knowledge of the classics.

Modern educational method is proving every day that the cultural and practical departments of education can be so combined that neither one is sacrificed to the other, and that the boy as he acquires scholarship learns at the same time the initiative to apply it.

Georgia, in her educational program, blazing the way through her agricultural colleges; her strides in industrial and technical training, in her effort to give all her boys educational opportunity, must not let go the old ideal of the cultural education.

This cultural basis which begins with the academic in the most elementary of the one-room schools, should be held to as an integral part of any special line of education a boy pursues, and lead him on through the highest course in the university.

Whether he qualifies as doctor, lawyer, bachelor of arts, the technical, industrial, civil or electrical engineer, he has his equipment, not merely to apply his knowledge, but become a leader in any vocation he chooses, if he is backed by the cultural force of classical knowledge.

COMMUNITY INTEREST.

The value of community interest has a shining example in the story of the Atlanta Southside Carnegie library, which is to be built at once on the corner of Capitol and Georgia avenues.

Last November, at the request of a group of "little citizens" of the south side, who attended the story-telling hour at the library Friday afternoons, a book deposit was made by the main library in the end of a store on the south side. The first afternoon nine books were taken out. Before the end of the month 200 books were taken out one afternoon by both children and grown-ups. The store was small, and as the crowd grew larger they would stand in line on the sidewalk awaiting their turn to interview the busy librarian.

In six weeks' time the entire community was so aroused in interest in their books that the librarian at the main library, the board of trustees and a large contingent of citizens urged council to give the necessary appropriation for a lot on the south side, that they might meet the terms of a library from the Carnegie corporation.

Times were hard, they were told, but community interest was insistent, and the result was an appropriation of $3,000 from council for the lot, which secured the $17,000 from the Carnegie corporation for a library building on the south side.

Whenever community interest is honestly aroused and people pull together for what they want they will always get it. Atlanta needs less indifference to civic responsibilities, more intolerance of petty politics and a revival in community interest, which will bring to her every institution the same success crowning the community interest of the south side people in their beautiful new library.

AN INTERESTING EXPERIMENT.

Keen interest is being aroused in the various efforts being made to bring together the country woman and the city woman in the distribution of their business, as it centers in the home of the one and the other. The country woman at this season of the year is rich in the products of the farm, which she wishes to dispose of. The city woman needs them and wants them, but there has not been the medium of bringing the two elements together.

A letter from a farm woman who represents a type—a great number of farm women—is published in another column on this page, setting forth the present needs of the farm woman in desiring to sell her wares before they go to waste around her. She has fresh vegetables, fresh fruits, fresh eggs, fresh butter. She has recipes for preserves, jams, pickles, which she has inherited from her grandmother of the antebellum south, who was famed for her culinary art.

The state department of agriculture is now at work to create a market agency, the first purpose of which is to bring together those who would buy and those who would sell such products.

The first obligation involved is the cooperation of the city woman and the farm woman, with the city woman taking the initiative, and working through the state market agent. He must be sure there is going to be a demand for the country woman's wares, before he can instruct her how to send them. He is posted with the daily status of the market, and he can keep his patrons informed.

This is a most interesting social problem, and the successful solving of it will affect every rural home in Georgia.

The department of agriculture in establishing the market agency has made a good start, and the result will be measured largely by the zeal manifested in bringing together those concerned and by developing their interest in what the agency can do for them.

Together with the establishment of the market agency the message of its significance and meaning must reach the people for whom it is intended. They must not be expected to come to the market agency, but the market agency must try to reach them, representing, as it can be made to do, a most practical branch of agricultural extension work. The experiment will be observed with intense interest by all Georgians who appreciate the urgent necessity of pushing all forces concerned in the direction of our agricultural prosperity.

And the Cummins law may make the summer vacationists mad enough to smash the baggage smasher.

Comets will have to develop more than two tails to attract the notice of a world on fire.

They have given Lord Kitchener the garter, when what he needed most was more rope.

Latest allied prediction is that the real war will begin in six weeks. Nothing like keeping the enemy in suspense.

And still there will be enough expert testimony in the Thaw jury trial to muddle the plain issue.

Now for the American tourist with the guide book which tells him how to see his own country first.

How City and State Can Help the Woman Who Lives in Country

By Iama Dooly.

Through the market agent of the department of agriculture in the state capitol, the city woman can help her sister, the farm woman, today, if she will purchase the wares of the farm woman which she has for sale today. She can do this through the market agent of the state department of agriculture, Mr. J. A. Montgomery, his office marking one of the most practical acts of the regime of Hon. J. D. Price, commissioner of agriculture.

At the present moment a general and commendable interest in the farm woman and her problems has been aroused through many agencies, principally among them the United States department of agriculture. Colleges of agriculture are planning far-reaching work for the women, and the future for the farm woman at last seems bright.

But, while these plans are being made for systematized work, the woman at the farm today has a quantity of fruits and vegetables on hand which she would like to sell. She has dairy products, too, poultry and fresh eggs, but she can't find some to go to town to sell them. The city woman can't go to the country for them every time she needs them, even if she has an automobile, and yet here in this very attention lies one of the most practical ways in which the city and the farm woman could help each other.

A Letter.

To The Constitution yesterday came a letter bearing this message from a woman residing on a farm, near Canton, Ga.:

"I will have for sale almost the entire summer, fresh vegetables, fruits, butter, milk and eggs, and I would like to sell them in the city. I should also like to contract to can berries or fruits, and to make preserves, jams and pickles. I know how to put up these things in the good old-fashioned way without the use of acids. Unless I get something of this kind to do, I will have to see so much that is good go to waste. If I could get in touch with any of the city women, I could do preserving for them. Either I could buy the materials and put up the fruits, selling them at a stipulated price, or I might have them furnish the sugar, spices and necessary ingredients to go with the fruits I could furnish. I can produce recommendations not only of my ability but my honesty. I need money very much at the present in aiding the family."

The letter gives full details as to the locality of the farm and sanitary surroundings, and expresses, not only the situation in the case of this one woman, but that of hundreds of women on the farm.

The Market Agent.

It was referred yesterday to the executive board of the Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs. Mrs. Nellie Peters Black, chairman of the country life department, referred it direct to Mr. J. A. Montgomery, market agent of the department of agriculture.

This brought forth the urgent appeal of Mrs. Black to the members of the board present that they inform the women in the rural clubs in their districts that through the market agent in the state department of agriculture they could be aided in the disposal of their wares.

When seen about the way women especially can be helped by the agency he represents, Mr. Montgomery stated that the women of the city could be most helpful to the farm women if, when reading the wares quoted in the foregoing letter, they would communicate with the market agent of the department of agriculture. "It was to do this practical work that the commissioner of agriculture has established the office, and the coming together of the city and farm woman through this medium is one of its direct purposes," said Mr. Montgomery.

Market Congested.

"This week the market is over-congested with fresh vegetables, and it would scarcely pay the farm women to ship them here except at a risk, but that may not be the case next week. Whenever this condition exists, the practical thing for the farm woman to do is to preserve her stuff. Sometimes she has not the materials to do it, but if there is the order given through us from the town woman for this line of wares, we can be ready to call for the preserved or canned stuffs from the farm woman, and she can afford to keep it on hand for sale, feeling she will dispose of it in time.

"Fresh eggs and fresh butter are commodities that rarely go to waste in the market, though they may go to waste if the farm woman is not helped to get them to town. The market department can aid in this, if the city woman will become the patron, and if she will communicate her wants in this direction to the market agent of the agricultural department.

Speaking further of the purpose of the market agency, Mr. Montgomery stated that he had sold for farm women almost as great a variety of farm products as he had for men, though not in large quantities, and that he had recently sold some fine stock for a well-known Georgia woman farmer.

"I believe that if the women of the city would co-operate in this particular work," he said, "that they would be doing the most directly practical thing to aid the rural or farm woman."

Three Southern Planters.

(From Collier's Weekly.)

Frank Johnson of the flat region of South Carolina raises six hundred bales of cotton annually on as many hands. He employs an expert to direct his negro laborers and "dopes" his land with twenty-five dollars' worth of commercial fertilizer to the acre. When cotton fetches twelve cents a pound he makes a "killing," when the price drops to seven cents, he goes broke.

Jim Brown, another cotton grower, lives on a rented farm, knows little, and has little except leisure. He raises a scanty crop on supplies advanced by a lien merchant. In a good year he "pays out" and has a little money for Christmas. In a bad year he has what the lien merchant does not take. The nonresident landlord has a first lien for rent cotton, and, as a rule, gets it.

But no lien merchant or nonresident landlord pesters James Sheppard, who lives in the hill country. Sheppard had forty-five bales of the 1913 crop when the war news reached him last August, and fifty more in the field to pick. "I refused thirteen and a half cents for my old cotton last July," he said, "but I'm not going to worry much. I guess I'll hold both crops till the price goes up again. I don't owe the bank anything, and I have plenty of corn, potatoes, fodder, hogs and poultry."

The group Sheppard represents, which is very small, reduced their cotton crops this year because common sense dictated it; the Frank Johnson class did so because their bank and fertilizer credit was restricted, and the poor class of tenants because lien credit was skimpier.

The general reduction throughout the south is about 15 per cent. Southern farmers, knowing cotton to be their most profitable crop, will continue to raise it; but they are learning that one-crop production means idleness of live stock, labor and land about half the year, while overhead charges must be paid on the whole outfit. They are beginning to understand, too, that while they cannot compete on a large scale with the wheat growers of Minnesota, wheat raised as a by-product is nearly all profit. Diversified farming calls for diversified information, and that is something ignorant people can't buy even from a lien merchant. Climate, soil and all other resources in the south, as in the north, the east, and the west, are diversified, but resourcefulness is not. Diversity knowledge and the crops will diversify themselves.

LOVE'S MEETING

By FRANK L. STANTON.

I.

IN the old meeting house so dear, the starlight of her eyes—
I didn't read my titles clear to mansions in the skies.
For this green earth where Love has birth, so beautiful to see,
Was more than dreams of Paradise and Heaven enough for me.

II.

THE text, "Love one another," came sweetly home that night,
And, dreaming in her face, I said: "He's got the gospel right!"
So gentle the commandment, so plain and sweet a thing,
I'll never wear a crown for that where saints and angels sing!

III.

THE music of the old-time hymns went soaring up above—
Went in a dream to Heaven, as on the wings of Love:
And I—a wanderer of the way, knew 'twas "Amazing Grace"
That led me where Life's dream was—to the beauty of her face.

IV.

I DIDN'T seek the Mourner's Bench, to ask for counsel there,
For Heaven and earth seemed singing, and Joy was everywhere.
Light in the shadows of Life's night, for which a soul gave thanks,—

V.

'TIS not so far to Heaven, whate'er the bright stars say,
For, hand-in-hand, the glad way home, Heaven met us on the way!
And the text, "Love one another," makes music in our days
And shall, till Time has led us to the parting of the ways.

PLANS ACCEPTED FOR HANDSOME BRANCH LIBRARY ON SOUTH SIDE

The plans have been completed and accepted and Atlanta's citizens on the south side are to have a beautiful branch library, on the corner of Capitol and Georgia avenues.

With a small deposit of books housed in the corner of a store, the space given for the purpose, and a large amount of community interest the South Side library began last November. The first afternoon only nine books were taken out. Before the end of the month more than 200 were taken out one afternoon, and the little folks and older ones lined up on the sidewalk by December waiting their turn to get to the library. The store was frequently over-crowded, especially about Christmas time, but the storekeeper realized the value of the library and never complained, and the community continued to patronize the institution and urge that the library be established in that section of the city.

So impressed was Mrs. Percival Sneed, the librarian of Carnegie library, with this expression of community interest she recommended in her December report to the library trustees the work for the new library begin at once. Plans were formulated in that direction with the result that work on the building will soon begin.

"I had only to tell the trustees of the interest manifested," said Mrs. Sneed as she showed with pride yesterday the plans for the new building to be erected on the corner of Georgia and Capitol avenues.

"We had the aid of the mayor's recommendation to council and the finance committee joined heartily in the effort to secure the appropriation for the lot.

A Trustee's Work.

"A newly elected library trustee, who had certainly not had time to be instructed in a trustee's duties, hardly time to be notified of his election to the library board, happened along in his motor one afternoon when the deposit had drawn its largest crowd. He was probably inspired, for he did the right thing: stopped the motor, jumped out and spent the necessary time in lining up the children who were crowding in unduly, and in letting them into the store in orderly fashion. His consciousness of being responsible for the library had come quickly and at the sight of it he had seemed to set to work.

"The trustees from this particular section of the south side where the library is to be located were also most zealous in getting the deposit started in the first place. So it may be said that everybody helped.

"The new library, when finished, will have as its librarian Miss Chloe Smith, and it has had charge of the deposit station from the beginning. Miss Smith is a graduate of the library school and has been for three years on the staff of the main library."

Library Facilities.

In discussing Atlanta's library facilities of today, Mrs. Sneed explained:

"The library system presents three branch libraries, the Anne Wallace branch on Luckie street, the Oakland City in Oakland City, and the Uncle Remus branch in West End, but only one building, the Anne Wallace branch, is in its own building. Oakland City being operated in a room rented for the purpose and Uncle Remus being maintained in a room in the Wren's Nest which the Uncle Remus Memorial association offers for library use.

"The new South Side branch, like the main library and the Anne Wallace branch, is a gift to the city of Atlanta from Andrew Carnegie, and the building and furnishings will cost $17,000. The lot, 100 feet square, must be bought by the city, cost over $3,000, and is admirably situated for its purpose.

"The plans were drawn by Henry D. Whitfield, of New York, who has for years specialized in library buildings. Mr. Whitfield has designed library buildings not only over the United States, but in foreign countries. The South Side branch plans were given the approval of the corporation at once and the beginning of the building only awaits the letting of the contract.

Beauty of Building.

"Aside from the value of the library, it will be an ornament to the south section of the city," Mrs. Sneed continued.

"The building will be beautiful. At the suggestion of the librarian, the long windows are to be of little panes with the old balustrades where flowers can be arranged. The librarian also asked to have included in the plans a drinking fountain. This is to be in the children's end of the building and it is planned to keep goldfish in it for the pleasure of the younger members of the library.

"Atlanta is indebted to the Carnegie corporation now for her main library, the Anne Wallace branch, the library at the Georgia School of Technology and at the Atlanta Medical college. Over $200,000,000 has been expended by the Carnegie corporation in libraries in the last fifteen years."

In describing Mr. Carnegie's benefactions, Mrs. Sneed related several interesting incidents in his career.

In reply to a question as to why he chose libraries above all other forms of philanthropy, Mr. Carnegie said: "I am by heredity a library builder. In the town of Dunfermline in Scotland in which I lived when a boy books were scarce but were felt to be a necessity of life. The weavers, among whom were my own people, bought books from their scanty means and these were loaned from house to house.

"In Allegheny where we lived when my family first came to America, I worked as a boy running errands for a bobbin boy, and for reading was strong and when it was told about among the working boys that Judge James D. Anderson would lend books to the boys who came to his house on Saturday afternoons and would be there himself to meet them and give out the books, I took advantage of the opportunity. In my gratitude to Judge Anderson I then made a resolution that if I ever had any money that could be spared it should go to the founding of free public libraries."

Practical Philanthropy.

"The wonderful part of this simple statement is the fact that through all the changing years this resolution formed in gratitude neither weakened nor wavered. In the meantime the poor Scotch boy had acquired millions beyond conception, and it might have been natural that the deceit and snare of riches should have made him forget. But the result shows that he did not forget, and that he gave in the direction of which he knew personally the practical value," continued Mrs. Sneed.

"It is moving to think that the free public libraries which have become an important part of the civilization of the twentieth century are the result of the enlightenment and human kindness that Judge Anderson showed to the poor boys of Allegheny. Emerson says somewhere that every great movement in the world is the lengthened shadow of some great man. The public library movement we may feel to be the lengthened shadow of Judge Anderson, of Allegheny, which took form and substance through the faith and loyalty of the boy, then the man, of Andrew Carnegie. When one looks at the statue of Judge Anderson which Mr. Carnegie has caused to be erected at Allegheny one involuntarily thinks of the line, 'How far a good deed shines in this poor world.'"

"Business Disentangled."

(From Collier's Weekly.)

For ten years now the politics of the United States have revolved mainly about the question whether large units of business should be encouraged or destroyed. One political point of view, held by President Wilson and many other leaders, has been that competition through small units should be preserved and enforced. The other point of view, held most conspicuously by the progressive leaders, has been that large units in business should be encouraged under proper regulation. Today it is possible to say that the public opinion of the country on this subject is coming more and more to favor the latter economic theory. No one can deny that the verdict of the courts in the case of the National Cash Register company, following that of the United States Steel corporation, represents about what the average citizen believes to be right.

President Wilson himself, his party and his attorney general are all on record in opposition to this trend. It is to be hoped that they will not be led, by mere pride of opinion, to oppose the solution which the courts, by their decisions, are bringing about. The United States circuit court of appeals for the New Jersey district has held, in dismissing the Steel suit, that, in spite of the size of the principal unit, competition in the steel trade is sounder and healthier today than ever before. In the Cash Register case the supreme court has upheld the decree of the lower court that big business is not necessarily a monopoly. Legitimate business has a constructive destiny, and the state must speed the fulfillment of that destiny just as it must safeguard the public against extortion, crooked finance and the improper exploitation of labor. The Sherman law, never clearly defined, now finds sanctuary in the new federal trade commission, which, thanks to these decisions, has a way clear before it as the arbiter of business interests and in a really dignified exposition of commerce. The public will be the gainer in economy and in efficiency of output, for we are entering upon an era of co-operation rather than conflict.

War Orders and Overcapitalization.

(From The Wall Street Journal.)

Warnings regarding the over-estimation of the profits our manufacturers are realizing from "war" orders are in order. But such warnings are issued while a boom of any kind is in progress, they are usually ascribed to a constitutional pessimism or conservatism, or even, in some cases, to the self-interest of those issuing them.

Entirely removed from such suspicions are the words of Professor E. R. A. Seligman, written a decade ago, when the world was at peace. Much of the thought is not new, but at this particular time the message seems prophetic:

"A period of good times may be initiated by large orders for some particular business, by productive increases, by improvements, by a war or to any other large demand. Prices rise in that business, production increases, the movement spreads to other lines, and the new enterprises are financed by loans from the banks or by the sale of securities on a capitalization proportionate to the anticipated earnings. The psychological character of these credit transactions is such, as we have seen, that the capitalization will inevitably be put too high. The hoped for earnings do not come in any amount sufficient to justify the investment. It becomes necessary to reduce the capitalization to its true market value on the basis of actual earnings. This process of readjustment of overcapitalized values necessarily involves loss; but readjustment there must be. If the realisation of its necessity is sudden, we have a crisis or panic; if it can be brought about gradually, we have a process of liquidation."

The process of overcapitalization has not gone far, as yet. It is suffering a temporary check from the fear of our participation in the conflict. But if this fear happily blows over, and if the pace at which America continues to fill European orders increases at the rate obtaining up to the present, overcapitalization will become a real danger. It is well that we begin thinking of this now. We have a profligate way of doing our thinking after the event.

In the Social Whirl

By Isma Dooly.

It is rare that the outgoing of a governor in Georgia has more than the significance, socially, of a few semi-official entertainments, but in the gracious administration of the social affairs of the executive mansion during the last regime, Mrs. John Marshall Slaton has left a brilliant record, and has indicated the many ways in which the lady of the mansion can express a hospitality not only patriotic in spirit, but very practically beneficial.

Whenever the mansion has been opened since her residence there, she has been the queenly hostess, bidding all who entered sincere welcome, whether the occasion was to greet the national officers of the Daughters of the American Revolution, her own personal friends or the group of philanthropic women who came to sell the little garments which had been made by the unemployed women, desiring to sell them.

HER WORK FOR MUSIC IN ATLANTA.

The mansion was theirs as well as hers, she made them feel, and, wherever she went as the wife of Georgia's governor, she imparted the beauty and charm of her personality, and generously gave of her talents and her interest. She was president of the Atlanta Musical association, and carried it through a most successful year, promoting the work of the Atlanta Symphony orchestra. She encouraged the women of the state in their organized energies for practical education, not to neglect the more cultural branches, but to accomplish themselves and to establish an art life in a section possessing a rich heritage in that direction.

This was the theme of an address she made in 1914 before the Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs, who prize it as a contribution to the literary files of their organization.

Last summer she opened the mansion for two weeks for an exhibition of pictures under the auspices of the Atlanta Art association, and during the winter she gave a series of musicales in the mansion when not only professional artists were heard, but when local talent was given the opportunity of exploitation under brilliant auspices.

On many occasions Mrs. Slaton contributed to the progress of entertainments for charity, her dramatic readings sought for by the many, from the critical audiences assembled at the Drama league to the more quiet ones in the vicinity of the little church house struggling for money to buy the first carpet.

THE INTEMPERANCE OF IT.

The new phase of life which has come to the women of the south in athletic sports is taking them by storm, and like everything else that comes that is new and a pleasure, the cautious are holding up a finger of warning. Women, no matter how strong they are, cannot suddenly become female "John L. Sullivans" in strength, nor can they play thirty-six holes of golf during the day and then dance half the night without getting just as many lines in their faces as overwork of any kind brings.

To begin with, climatic conditions have to be considered. Temperance requires a modified activity during the day, when the sun shines just about as hard as the wind blows when it blows. It is not so bad about the tan and the freckles, because they wear off, but the petted woman who has worn lace frilled skirts and high-heeled slippers the greater part of her life, can't suddenly develop a brawn and sinew that will withstand excessive athletics.

Wise women at home for the summer will take the club schedule of teadances and dinner-dances and map out their weekly programs, so that the day they are athletic and golf, they will not trip the light fantastic the same evening. Golf one day and dancing the next would be reasonable, and women would not find under these circumstances the heat of the summer too debilitating.

A TRUE STORY.

A true story is told of an Atlanta woman who went to a certain fashionable resort where the women diet, take the water cure, golf and do all the things that warrant reducing the flesh and warrant beauty. She got her prescription from the doctor for her baths, he readily seeing she had not been exercising; that she had been over-eating, and that her flesh was not firm.

He put her on a reasonable diet. She was to take a certain kind of bath and shower every day, and a rub, and "blankets," and some exercise. But besides this the dear lady made arrangements to take a golf lesson every day, and she engaged an osteopath to rub her every night. She arose at 8 o'clock, had a light breakfast and went for a walk. She played golf till 12 o'clock, took another walk before luncheon; ate lightly, and rested a moment on the porch until time for another walk or more golf. She took her bath at 5:30 and her rub; then dressed for dinner at 8. After dinner she did the strenuous dancing, etc., and at 10:30 o'clock the osteopath came. Her flesh began to decrease—yes. She looked pale and pretty; but soon her strength began to ebb. After two weeks she fainted one evening after her bath, and the doctor came to find she had literally nearly killed herself with the intemperance of her daily regime. Her heart was involved, and a system of building up had to begin to keep the lady from becoming an invalid for life.

Extreme habits in one way or the other is never conducive to beauty, and the smart woman takes her case in hand before an extreme measure is necessary. Athletics and dieting are good in summer time, but southern women have to be very careful how they suddenly go in for the pastimes to which they are not accustomed, and to which the climate does not always lend to help on.

The golf skirt is comfortable; the outing hat is bewitching and becoming, and the ruddy glow on a woman's skin is pretty, but there is no use to forsake altogether the lace frilled skirt, the silk stocking and dainty slippers. A parasol is not half bad in the late afternoon, and a picture hat can make the most charming picture in the world when a pretty woman is under it.

THE LAMARS IN CALIFORNIA.

Georgia has brilliant representation in the social life incident to the San Francisco exposition, as Mrs. William Bailey Lamar, of Atlanta, is one of the leaders in entertaining, complementing the official duties of her husband, who is United States commissioner to the exposition. Judge and Mrs. Lamar are at the Fairmont hotel and do their private entertaining there. Their long residence in Washington has enlarged their list of acquaintances, but they find the time, nevertheless, to entertain not only their friends from the south, but people of world note from all sections. Noting, in part, recent entertainments of the Lamars, The San Francisco Examiner of recent date has the following:

"The national exposition commission, represented in San Francisco at this time by Judge William Bailey Lamar, gave a brilliant dinner at the Fairmont hotel last night to the foreign commissioners to the Panama-Pacific exposition and other distinguished foreigners, state commissioners, exposition officials and a large number of local society people. More than 300 guests were present.

"The dinner was followed by a dance, to which about the same number of the younger element of society was invited.

"It need imply no discourtesy to the other hosts who have been entertaining since the exposition began to say that none of them has attempted to be as magnificently lavish in dispensing hospitality as was 'Uncle Sam,' whose party last night created a decided furor of enthusiasm. The ballroom was suffused in the glow of thousands of roses, and the air was redolent with the exquisite perfume of American Beauties, the fragrance being wafted to one long before reaching the ballroom.

"The guests were seated at a U-shaped table that extended down the entire length of the ballroom, with three large round tables down the hollow center. At intervals were umbrella-shaped rose trees with handsome gilt urns and baskets, festoons of green myrtle entwined among them. To accentuate the deep color there were also lots of bright purple Japanese statice and the same velvety tasseled flowers were piled at the base of the rose trees, the combination of the rose and purple suggesting that imperial opulence becoming in a host as prodigal as "Uncle Sam."

"It was a merry, light-hearted affair, formal speeches being omitted. Judge and Mrs. Lamar greeted the guests who arrived for the dinner, but there was no formal reception.

"The toasts were brief. Judge Lamar acted as toastmaster after proposing the toast, 'The President of the United States.' Consul Herman Gade spoke for the foreign commissioners, Reuben S. Hale fro the exposition officials, Senator Overman, of North Carolina, on 'The Senate,' and Congressman Julius Kahn on 'The House of Representatives.'

"Mrs. Lamar wore a very becoming frock of bright yellow taffeta, embroidered in crystals forming scattered flowers over the frabric, the corsage being made of the taffeta with net embroidered in beads and yellow stones, the combination enhancing Mrs. Lamar's dark-eyed, Spanish type of beauty. Mrs. Lamar wore pearls and several handsome diamond pieces.

Fromshon and the groom is well known and popular. After the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Di Cristina left for a trip to New York, and after July 5 will be at home to their friends at No. 56 East Georgia avenue.

Maier & Berkele, Inc.

Gold and Silversmiths

Established 1887 — 31 Whitehall St. Atlanta, Ga.

received by Reuter's Telegram company by way of Amsterdam today:

"In the Russian war theater between the Dniester and Pruth, the eastern group of General Pflanzer's army has again repulsed greatly superior Russian forces. The enemy succeeded in breaking through at one point on our positions. Our reinforcements came up quickly and after a severe battle the enemy was ejected. We took several hundred prisoners.

"During the day and last night the enemy repeated his attacks at three points on our front, but everywhere was repulsed with heavy losses. Our front is without change.

"The Honved Hussars regiment, number 6, and the Croatian landwehr especially distinguished themselves in these actions. The remainder of the front of the army of General Pflanzer is quiet.

"On the heights to the northeast of Zurawna and near Chodorow fighting is proceeding. The allied troops recovered several villages and repulsed the Russian counter-attacks. Otherwise the situation in Galicia is unchanged."

"In Russian Poland, on the Zawichost-Stennobeja line fighting is developing.

"In the Italian war theater the artillery fire of the enemy continues on the Isonzo front. Several of our detachments near our bridgeheads at Gorizia have been repulsed with great loss. Italian Carinthian-Tyrolean frontier districts no important events have occurred."

GAINS HELD BY FRENCH.

Paris, June 26.—The following official communication was issued by the war office tonight:

"In the region to the north of Arras, the infantry action reported in the preceding communication continued up to the night. Our gains have been carefully maintained.

"The day was marked by an intermittent bombardment, particularly violent on the suburbs of Arras.

"On the heights of the Meuse, to the east of the Calonne trench, the German delivered an attack which was repulsed except at one point, where they penetrated one part of the trench held by two sections.

"On the rest of the front there is nothing to report except artillery actions."

The communication issued in the afternoon follows:

"Considering the front as a whole, last night passed with relative quiet. North of Arras there is nothing to report, except the usual artillery engagements, accompanied by a lively cannonading between the Souchez sugar refinery and the national highway between Bethune and Arras.

"Our progress has been checked by the consolidation of the ground which, in certain places, has been rendered almost impassable by storms.

"On the Champagne front and in Argonne the fighting with mines has been going on, and to our advantage."

RUSSIANS HOLD DNIESTER LINE.

Petrograd, June 26.—(Via London.) The Russians are continuing successfully to hold their line along the Dniester. After a six-day battle the Austro-Germans have been defeated at Kozuno and Sadzany, south-east of Halicz. At Martinovce (Martynofka-Tany) a similar attempt to gain a foothold on the Russian side of the river failed. Grand Duke Nicholas' troops capturing forty officers and 1,400 men.

At Kosmierzine the Austrians were repulsed on June 22 and 23, after having previously been defeated at Snovidow, and were driven across the Dniester fighting a rear guard battle and losing heavily.

These reverses have caused a German concentration in the vicinity of Kosmierzine, and new and more decisively contested battles are imminent.

A German force attempting to cooperate in that region is descending the Lemberg-Brzezany railroad and is being stubbornly opposed.

The following official statement was issued:

"During the course of the night of June 24 and the whole of the following day in the Sharlej region artillery duel proceeded with advance guard encounters on the front Lashkor-Popellany and along the right bank of the Niemen river, to the north of Kolle Niemen a German offensive was repulsed.

"On the Narew front the fighting was confined to sharp artillery firing and local scout encounters. After artillery preparation the Germans took the offensive against the Russian front soon was stopped. In this action we took in the Omulew section eighty prisoners, but in the Orzyc valley they were forced to give way. One of our works was completely destroyed by the enemy's annihilating fire.

"On the Vistula front, south of the Pilica, the enemy yesterday thrice attempted to make headway west of Gorlice, but were repulsed, each time losing heavily.

"On the Tanew front, in the direction of Zolkiew and Lemberg, there was no important change.

"On the Dniester river during the night of the 23rd, we drove back beyond the river the retreating troops of Germans who crossed the previous day in the Kozany district. In the region of Mielnica-Nowy on the evening of the 23rd we captured the remnants of the enemy who had crossed, altogether fifteen officers and about 700 men. Notwithstanding the disastrous results of these crossings the German army corps of Bukazowicze, they having previously got crossed near the village of Housedyany. The fighting continues.

Petrograd, June 26.—(Via London, June 27, 4:20 a. m.)—The following official statement was issued today at the headquarters of the Russian general staff:

"As the result of a strong German offensive in the direction of Przasnysz Friday a desperate battle, which continues, began in that region.

"The enemy attacked Friday in the region of Rudki and Rudka.

"The Russians took 2,000 prisoners during counter attacks in the direction of Zolkiew and Lemberg Thursday and 1,000 prisoners in repulsing the desperate attacks of great forces on the Dniester."

FRENCH REPULSED. GERMANS REPORT.

Berlin, June 26.—(Via London.)—An official communication issued today says:

"Western theater:

"Close range fighting which has proceeded with uninterrupted fury there around the portion of our positions which remained in the hands of the enemy north of Souchez, and half way between Souchez and Neuville, has come to a end. During the night the last of the French soldiers were driven back out of our trenches. Yesterday morning the enemy received strong reinforcements at this point and on both sides of the Loretto heights. As they advanced to attack south of Souchez they were torn down.

"In the Champagne, near Sousin, we blew up a portion of an enemy position.

"On both sides we continued to load the enemy brought up troops four deep over a front three kilometers (1.8 miles) long, ready for an assault. They everywhere broke up under our fire. Where the enemy pressed forward into our trenches he was beaten off with heavy loss and driven back in the fray which followed. In a raid made by us afterwards we captured an enemy advanced position east of our trancheas. In this district the enemy still holds a small part of a trench which we captured on June 20.

"Attacks made by advance patrols of the enemy against our positions at Ornesville, failed.

"Since the commencement of the great struggle near Arras our airmen have been struggling with those of the enemy for mastery of the air. This struggle has caused losses on both sides, but success has been with us. For some days we apparently have had the upper hand.

"Eastern thater:

"A Wurtemburger regiment stormed the Russian positions southeast of Ogienda, north of Przasnysz, and on both sides of the Muroka, and held the positions taken against several counter attacks, and against those made at night. The booty amounts to 836 prisoners and four machine guns.

"Southeastern theater:

"The army of General von Linsingen is continuing flank attacks on the eastern bank of the Dneister. The right bank, near Pelica, still is held by the enemy. Since the beginning of their attack on this river on June 23 they have taken 1,600 prisoners.

"Between the Dniester and the district east of Lemberg fighting continues."

Appeal Made for Peace By German Socialists

Directors of Social Democratic Party Issue Statement Saying That People of Germany Want Peace. Paper Suspended for Publishing Statement.

Berlin, June 26.—(Via London.)—The board of directors or managing committee of the social democratic party in Germany has published in the Vorwaerts a full page appeal for peace.

This interesting document calls for an end to the present circumstances which will make possible friendships with neighboring nations, and sets forth most clearly the opposition of the party to territorial conquest and annexation. The people want peace, it declares, and the government is called on to do likewise. Yesterday's issue of the Vorwaerts received strong reinforcements at this point and on both sides of the Loretto heights. As they advanced to attack south of Souchez they were torn down.

ed country and that this demand tends to weaken Germany by creating the impression abroad that a considerable part of the people are tired of war, which is false.

The Vaterland editor regards the publication of the manifesto as regrettable and asserts that it should have been addressed to the governments of countries fighting Germany.

An interesting fact in connection with the manifesto is that it was written May 7, but was withheld until now because of Italy's entrance into the war.

WOMEN ARE URGING PEACE CONFERENCE.

Amsterdam, June 26.—(Via London.) Hundreds of mass meetings of women will be held tomorrow in all parts of Scandinavia to urge the calling of a conference of neutral nations to end the war. Reports regarding the peace propaganda undertaken in Denmark, Norway and Sweden have been received at headquarters here of the International Congress of Women for permanent peace. This organization was the outgrowth of the women's peace conference at The Hague in May.

The plan proposed by the congress to hasten peace is to call a conference of representatives of neutral nations to sit as long as the war shall last, for the purpose of continuous and independent mediation, with or without armistice, and, if necessary, even with out the specific consent of the belligerents.

This conference would submit simultaneously to the warring powers what it considered reasonable propositions for the establishment of permanent peace. The Hague women have some basis for settling the present war.

GERMANY DEFENDS USE OF ASPHYXIATING GASES

Alleges Allies Used Poisonous Projectiles—Enemy Need Only Flee to Escape.

Berlin, June 26.—(Via London.)—A semi-official statement issued here explains and defends the German use of asphyxiating gases.

The claim is made that the British and French employed gases before the Germans, and the statement cites the text of a communication alleged to have been issued by the French ministry of war describing two sorts of projectiles designed to produce a paralyzing effect, and giving rules for their usage. This communication is said to have been dated February 21, before the Germans employed gas in their attack.

This circular, it is claimed, was headed "Heroism and progress with stifling gases," and said, among other things:

"Special projectiles with stifling gases produced in our central workshops, and which pours out only after explosion gases which igflame the eyes, nose and throat. There are also projectiles which would be heard from that particular point. A short time afterward from another point similar projectiles burst.

Firing from both points now has been silenced and it has been found that the enemy is using the gases in which they laid tracks so the guns could be raised from point to point. At these places it was found that silent batteries had been placed on platforms with men of straw beside the cannon barrels. At these places small mines were fired to produce smoke and facilitate the deception of the Italians, who, however, soon discovered the deception.

A great difficulty which the Italians along this front have experienced has been the presence of gases. That spies really were working along the Italian lines was considered proved by the way in which Austrians escaped their shell fire. One man who had been taken prisoner pretended to be an idiot and when he was released, seemingly displeased, the correspondent says. One day he made a sign with a warning with his handkerchief. The signal, for such it proved to be, was followed immediately by a shower of Austrian shells.

AUSTRIANS PLAN INVASION OF ITALY.

Brescie, Italy, June 26.—(Via Paris.) Handbooks giving instructions on how to invade Italy, found in the valley of the River Po, thus reaching Verona, the famous fortress, guarding Italy's line from the remainder of the Venetian plain, have been found in the possession of Austrians officers who have been taken prisoners. These booklets have been compiled by the staff officer of the Austrian general staff.

The Po, the largest river in Italy, which irrigates the entire plain of Piedmont and Lombardy, rises in Monviso and follows a very tortuous course to the Adriatic, which it enters by several mouths. Its nearest approach to Austrian territory is at the point south of Lake Garda, where it is about sixty miles from the Trentino border.

LIBERTIES OF THE DUTCH RESTRICTED BY GERMANY

The Hague, June 26.—(Via London.) The Dutch government has taken considerable annoyance concerning a new order issued by The Netherlands government prohibiting Dutch reporters from mentioning within twenty-four hours the name of Zeppelin airships or balloons in the neighborhood of Holland territory.

This order, as in the case of previous similar ones, such as that removing all German refugees from the province of Zeeland, ostensibly to prevent smuggling, and another forbidding Dutch subjects to approach within 50 yards of the frontier, is attributed by the newspapers to activities of the German legation at the Dutch capital. The journals express the belief orders place a serious restriction on Dutch liberties.

AMERICAN FRYE NOTE PRESENTED AT BERLIN

Berlin, June 26.—(Via London.)—Ambassador Gerard today called at the German foreign office and presented the American note regarding the American ship William P. Frye, sunk by the German auxiliary cruiser Prinz Eitel Friedrich in the Pacific.

The note finds the German conditions for delay in the payment of compensation until the case is passed upon by a prize court to be unconvincing and asks that payment be made now.

THREE CITY OFFICIALS INDICTED AT NASHVILLE

Nashville, Tenn., June 26.—The Davidson county grand jury today returned indictments against Lyle Anderson, city commissioner of finance, lights and market house; R. Miles Burns, city comptroller, and J. B. West, assistant city treasurer. The indictments contain three counts, the charges ranging from accessory before the fact to larceny of public records, and grew out of the disappearance of numerous books from the city hall. Their bonds were fixed at $10,000 each.

Andrews and Burns are here under bond under state's warrants recently issued by Mayor H. E. Howse involving similar charges. West's whereabouts are unknown. The indictments returned today were the only forenoon developments in the city hall scandal. Comptroller Burns' bill filed late yesterday asking a limited receivership for the city continues to be a subject of widespread discussion.

AUSTRIANS READY TO STRIKE ITALIANS

Heavy Reinforcements Received by Austrian Forces, and the Italians Expect Hard Fighting—Siege Warfare Is Likely.

Rome, June 26.—(Via Paris.)—Reinforcements received from the eastern and western fronts have brought the Austrian armies operating against Italy to full strength of efficiency desired by the general staff, according to information obtained from the frontier.

Fortifications and defense works along the frontier now have been completed, and the Austrians have concentrations at some points like the Lavaronne and Folgarla plateaus, Malboreghi, Predil Pass, Tomlino and Gorizia will development into seige warfare similar to that waged by Germany against the Belgian fortresses.

The remainder of the front the conflict is assuming the character of the struggle from trench to trench, which is raging on the Franco-Belgian front.

"Our reconnaissances, extended beyond the front in the Tyrol-Trentino region in Cadore and Carniola, indicate increased activity on the part of the enemy in the work of reinforcing and placing new batteries. We are frustrating this work by the efficacious fire of our artillery and the bold action of small detachments.

"In Carinola on the night of June 24 and 25 the enemy vainly renewed his attempts against our line from Val Grande to Val Piccolo.

"Our operations along the Isonzo are developing methodically in spite of the manifold difficulties of the ground and the many artificial obstacles skillfully accumulated for a long period of time by the enemy.

Our infantry, supported by the fire of field and heavy batteries, advances bravely and unanxiously, day by day.

"An Austrian battery which for some days has been disturbing our troops by its fire, causing especially serious damage to the Gorizia battery with the evident purpose of deceiving us and stopping our fire."

AUSTRIAN GUNS PLACED IN TUNNELS.

Rome, June 26.—(Via Paris.)—A correspondent writing from the frontier says that at Monte Nero, a ridge between the Austrian and Italian troops could not discover whence frequent shots came into a certain point in their lines. Two 305 millimeter guns would fire, and then nothing else would be heard from that particular point. A short time afterward from another point similar guns were fired.

Firing from both points now has been silenced and it has been found that the enemy is using the gases in which they laid tracks so the guns could be raised from point to point. At these places it was found that silent batteries had been placed on platforms with men of straw beside the cannon barrels. Hari-Kari Is Committed By 2 Japanese Officers Fighting With Russians

Tokio, June 26.—Major Hakajima and Captain Hashimoto, Japanese officers fighting with the Russian army at Lemberg, committed hari-kari when the Galician capital fell, rather than suffer what they considered the dishonor of being made prisoners of war, according to official advices received from Petrograd.

Hari-kari is a Japanese method of committing suicide, formerly widely practiced by military officers. In the days of the old Samurai system officers usually killed themselves when it became necessary to surrender the troops under them.

BAVARIANS ARE BRAVE AND EXTREMELY DEVOUT

Invaders Worship With the French Women in the Occupied Territory.

St. Quentin, France.—(Correspondence of the Associated Press.)—For generations the Bavarian soldier has sustained the reputation of being one of the best fighting units in the world. He has always been in the eyes of his opponents a very terrible man to be pitted against. His name has been synonymous with military efficiency, and especially during the present war his enemies have whispered more than that about him.

Many do not know or will not believe that the Bavarian has any other side than a fierce desire to fight and to win at any price. He is at the same time singularly devout and religious and in this lies one explanation for the present relative content of the occupied population of that part of conquered France which lies in the northward. German system, in taking scrupulous care of the people, has played a large part, but the religious nature of the Bavarian soldier has had a share in the result.

An Associated Press correspondent who toured northern France recently listened with some little degree of incredulousness as German officials insisted that the population of the occupied country and of the cities were quiet and submissive, fairly happy, and bore few traces of bitterness toward the invaders.

The people, to be sure, showed no outward signs of resentment. Nor would those with whom the correspondent talked admit of harboring ill feelings against the Germans. Nevertheless it seemed impossible that there could be reconciled to their position. Then there entered into the problem the religious equation—stronger probably in northern France than anything else where fighting now is going on.

Through the wonderful stained glass windows of the cathedral of St. Quentin there streamed the afternoon sun of an early May Sunday—illuminating the strangest congregation that probably ever gathered in beautiful old Notre Dame. In the great nave there knelt fully a thousand women from all classes of the population. Three-quarters at least were mourning—mute evidence that they had lost sons and husbands, brothers and lovers. The strains of a wonderful organ carried far into the streets about the cathedral, attracting more and more from outside.

At first glance one saw only the women in their deep mourning. Then, however, there came into view the drab gray uniforms of scores of Bavarian soldiers, kneeling, not on the little chairs, but on the stone floor. Some held little prayer books and were mumbling prayers in German even while the French priest prayed in his own language. As the music continued more and more soldiers entered the church, and, finding no room among the audience, knelt in the rear until the building was packed clear to the doors.

Suddenly the mass came to an end. The women—but not the soldiers—arose. By twos and three they began to file out of the cathedral, past the men who had come into possession of the city and who had been responsible for the death of their loved ones.

The correspondent scanned each face for some trace of the bitterness he expected to find written there. Not one woman in all the audience of a thousand cast a even a resentful glance at the soldiers. Instead there was almost universal approval as the French women walked by the rough German soldiery—peasants mostly—and saw their devotion. The antagonism that was to be expected seemed to have been banished by the fact of a common religion and a common devotion.

Hardly had the women left the church than a German officer entered and began a mass in German especially for the soldiery, who gradually passed up the body of this church just vacated. The organ pealed again, and this time the men, not in choir, began to sing the refrain, and sang until the whole building reverberated to the melody.

Half an hour later the soldiers were seen on the streets of St. Quentin, chatting, laughing, cheering and playing some Frenchman whom they had come to know during the period of occupation. The brief episode in Notre Dame, wholly commonplace in many ways and not given to show to see, had left an entirely different complexion on an otherwise inexplicable situation. It was no longer hard to understand why there is little feeling on the part of the inhabitants of St. Quentin.

Building a Highway Across Storm King Mountain.

(From Popular Mechanics Magazine.)

"With all surveys completed and a practical route selected, plans are now being made for the construction during the coming summer of the highway across the face of Storm King mountain, a promontory that rises sheer from the west shore of the Hudson river a short distance north of West Point, N. Y. This will be one of the most interesting and difficult pieces of highway construction ever attempted in this country, for almost the foot of the cliff and the river is barely room for the tracks of the West Shore railroad. To find additional room for a highway it is necessary to go nearly 400 feet up the face of the mountain and excavate a ledge in the solid rock. The highway will be about 25 miles long, with a roadway 24 feet wide, and is estimated to cost close to $250,000. Starting at Cornwall, at an elevation of 190 feet above the river, it follows the contour of the cliff to an apex on the face of the mountain 390 feet above the river, descending from this point to a connection with a state road near West Point, 213 feet above the river."

Noise Eliminated by New Street Car Wheel.

Elimination of the greater part of the noise that now accompanies the operation of street cars and elevated and subway trains is the interesting immediate future as the result of a new noiseless wheel. A test run of a car fitted with wheels of this kind and recently conducted in the test runs at Scott, Md., is reported to have run as noiselessly as an automobile. The wheel is made of two sections, and in its effect is what is within a wheel. The inner section is fixed to the axle, but the outer section takes the bearing on the track. Between the two sections is cushion of rubber of special composition which absorbs the vibrations caused by the grind of the rails and by the slight irregularities in the track, and it is this that gives the wheel its noiseless qualities.

"Color Music" Introduced at New York Concert.

During a recent rendition of the Russian composer Scriabine's "Prometheus," which is described as a fugue in sonata form, at the Carnegie hall at New York, a "color organ" was employed to intensify the symphonic accents with the orchestration. Various color hues and tints merging and blending with each other appeared in a maze of diaphanous gauze, forming a screen on the stage before the audience. These animated colors appeared simultaneously with the orchestral music, varying in intensity, shade and movement in harmony with the combinations and inflections of tones rising from the pit.

"The country around Mitchell lake, ten miles from San Antonio, where the first of these bat roosts stands, was formerly so thickly infested with mosquitoes that it was almost impossible to remain out of doors at night, and since most of the insects were of the malaria-carrying variety, the section became notorious for the prevalence of chills and fever.' Now it is one of the healthiest spots in Texas, and all due to the efforts of the bats."

LAUGHING-GAS BOMBS TURNED OUT IN FRANCE

Seven Thousand Missiles a Day Are Made by One Factory.

Boulogne.—(Correspondence of the Associated Press.)—Close behind the French lines near Rheims is located the largest bomb factory in France or England. It turns out 7,000 bombs of all varieties every day, as well as a variety of trench mortars and other devices for use in trench warfare.

Among the newer bombs being manufactured here is a chemical hand grenade with a charge which rips open the grenade and frees a liquid chemical similar in general nature to the laughing gas used by dentists. Visitors to the factory are taken to an experimental trench close at hand and given a demonstration of the effect which the explosion of one of these bombs has on a group of soldiers. To show that the gas has no unpleasant after-effects, a squad of soldiers is sent into a trench in which a specimen bomb has been thrown. The effect of the fumes is to bring water to the eyes, but such quantities that the occupants of the trench would be quite incapable of defending themselves for several minutes (using a weapon would be out of the question. The pricking sensation in the eyes is not pleasant, but it is not painful and the effects completely wear off in a quarter of an hour. The first effect of the gas is to throw the occupants of the trench into a fit of violent laughter, their eyes meantime streaming with tears.

It is along this section of the front that the Germans have brought into action the largest variety of chemical missiles, including that is alleged that the bombs, gas bombs and bombs containing inflammable liquids. Against these the French are developing a variety of missiles the contents of which aim, not at killing the enemy directly, but merely at placing him out of the fighting for a limited space of time.

The most common type of trench mortar manufactured in this factory is the crapouillot, or "little frog," so called on account of its small, frog-like appearance. It is frequently made out of the enemy's shrapnel cases.

Other engines of war which are being made are catapults, crossbows and arbalests, which have the advantage of throwing their explosive missile without making any revealing noise of discharge.

The factory workmen are all soldiers and receive only soldiers pay. Their hours are the longest compatible with efficiency. There is no time lost through drink, for the supply of alcoholic liquor to soldiers has been made a serious offense throughout the zone of the army.

THE LAZY SOLDIER WITH THE RED SILK SOCKS

He Would Fight Like a Fiend When He Found It Necessary.

"Never again will I judge a man by his appearance," said a wounded sergeant to a correspondent when asked for the most thrilling battle story.

"When we started for the front we had to leave our company a man whom I simply could not stand.

"On the moment of his arrival in our midst we disliked him. His lordship and bets were made that he would succumb on the first day's march. He did a bit of it. It is true he looked tired at the start, but he looked no more so at the end than we did. When we came to the place where we were to rest for the night, he calmly unwound his puttees underneath which he wore real red silk socks. We felt a bit upset. His socks were distinctly out of clean against the army regulations.

"But that was nothing to what followed. He got out a nice leather box, opened it, extracted some sort of instrument, and proceeded to manicure his nails. The beggar did it as coolly as if he had been in his own flat.

All the boys gathered round him to watch the performance; but I put an end to it by promising him four days of the 'ordinary.' He was about to undergo after the taking of Berlin, for you see, we were not very well spare the men just then.

Comrade's Stomach as Pillow.

"We were then placed in the trenches. 'His lordship' did everything ungrudgingly; but he could not, being made for the construction during the coming summer of the highway across the face of Storm King mountain, a promontory that rises sheer from the west shore of the Hudson river a short distance north of West Point, N. Y. This will be one of the most interesting and difficult pieces of highway construction ever attempted in this country, for almost the foot of the cliff and the river is barely room for the tracks of the West Shore railroad. To find additional room for a highway it is necessary to go nearly 400 feet up the face of the mountain and excavate a ledge in the solid rock. The highway will be about 25 miles long, with a roadway 24 feet wide, and is estimated to cost close to $250,000. PREPARATIONS COMPLETE FOR WEDDING OF MISS CLARK AND JAMES M. THOMSON

GENEVIEVE CLARK. JAMES M. THOMSON.

Bowling Green, Mo., teems with suppressed excitement awaiting June 20, the date set for the wedding of Miss Genevieve Clark, only daughter of Speaker and Mrs. Champ Clark, to James M. Thomson, owner and editor of The New Orleans Item. The ceremony will take place at the beautiful home of Speaker Clark here and will be performed by Rev. Robert Sherman Boyd, pastor of Lee Memorial Presbyterian church, of Louisville, Ky., who was married to Miss Belle Herndon, of Fulton, Mo., a niece of Mrs. Clark, about five years ago. In addition to the guests of local significance there will be many prominent persons from every section, and the little village will see the liveliest days in its annals. Even the great hotels of St. Louis will be taxed, and when the gifts begin to heap up, gifts of jewels, of gold and silver, of precious stuffs in painting and art, of wonderful curios, laces and embroideries, it will tax even the police service of the city to provide sufficient guardians. After the buffet luncheon following the ceremony at 4 o'clock, there will be dancing.

BITTER ATTACKS MADE ON ELDER STATESMEN

Alleged That Genro of Japan Caused Demands on China to Be Modified.

Tokio.—(Correspondence of The Associated Press.)—The status of the genro or elder statesmen in modern Japan has been brought into passionate discussion by the activity of the genro in the recent crisis between Japan and China. While the case of China is not the way in which the genro interfered at the last moment in the ultimatum and secured the modification of the original demands, it is the point that it was heir conservative influence which induced modifications in the demands upon China. The time when many people were looking for an ultimatum that would be accompanied by harsher instead of more moderate demands.

With a tenacity, which is, perhaps, the greatest Japanese trait, the genro pliedly held to their viewpoint just as they did before the outbreak of the war between Japan and Germany, when they resisted the wishes of sending an ultimatum and of dragging Japan into a world-wide war. In the cases of the German war, they were over-ridden, but in the case of China, after long and careful counsel carried the day. Now, a cry is coming up among a section of the people to do away with the genro on the ground that new Japan has outgrown their institutions and that the cabinet, constitutionally created and empowered, should be given full authority against a body of genro who have no constitutional standing.

The men who curbed the cabinet are, as their title implies, all elderly leaders. Only four in number, they make up in influence what they lack in numbers. First, there is Marshal Prince Aritomo Yamagata, the great authority on the army, and his old friend, Marquis Masukata, the great Napoleon of Japanese finance. The others are Marshal Prince Iwao Oyama, another great military figure who also holds the place of lord keeper of the seal, and Marquis Kaoru Inouye, another power in finance, who is the father-in-law of K. Ishii, the Japanese ambassador to Great Britain.

According to reliable accounts, the genro, seeking the higher and lasting interests of the empire, advised instead of unrestricted aggression should be basic policy in the future. They opposed the sending of an ultimatum and offered the suggestion that Baron Kato, the foreign minister, should go to Pekin and negotiate with President Yuan Shi-kai himself. They also pointed out the strength of public opinion in behalf of drastic action in China and referred to the fact that it had already made big concessions in the original demands. In the thousand lasting several days the genro opposed the ultimatum and only consented thereto when the entire group of articles contained in section 5 of the original demands were abandoned. Their belief was that owing to those conditions China would find no difficulty in accepting. They are reported as insisting that excessive demands by the Japanese at a time when Europe was at war would be interpreted by the world as taking advantage of that war.

The Asahi quotes a genro as saying that if Japan was suspected of tyrannizing over the weak she would never be able to win the confidence of the people at home or of the nations abroad. Whatever may have gone on in secret in the conference between the cabinet and the genro, harmony was reached at last and war was averted.

Advocates of a more constitutional regime in Japan openly attack the genro. While admitting that their counsels are for the best, they claim that their influence is a stumbling block to constitutional progress. "The statesmen are above the genro," said the Asahi, "and the genro should not consider that they are sitting on the heads of the ministry. It will go a step further and advocate a complete abolition of the genro conference."

Opinion in the genro individed just as is opinion relative to the result of the crisis. The press is happy at the avoidance of war, but wishes that fewer concessions had been made. They voice the hope that the remaining questions which were not pressed for settlement may be taken up at some other time and Japan's influence in China steadily developed until it becomes the predominating influence. However this may be, it is very clear that the influence of the genro is as strong as ever before, and that whatever crisis may come in the future, their voice is certain to be heard.

Bismarck.

(From Richmond Times-Dispatch.)

On April 1, 1815, Bismarck was born. The hundredth anniversary of that fateful April Fool's day finds the work of the greatest modern statesmen verging swiftly towards destruction. What a satirical centenary it is!

Bismarck was the architect of Germany's greatness. He found Prussia a poor and weak state, second to Austria. He gave a world of little German duchies, grand duchies and whatnot. By masterful diplomacy, extending over many years and three short, sharp wars, he established a world power.

His first step towards the greatness of Prussia was the Austrian war of 1864, whereby Prussia gained provinces necessary to her development. Austria, which had been tricked out of her share of the spoil, protested, and the Prussian army struck her down in the six weeks' war of 1866. By this stroke Prussia became supreme in Germany, and Austria was pushed outside the realm of German politics. The way had been paved for the creation of the empire.

Bismarck's supreme opportunity came in 1870. France blindly played into his hands and offered the war he desired for the consummation of Prussian power. France was practically defeated in a month, and in the first days of the new year the German empire came into being. It was the work of Bismarck, and no lesser man could have reconciled the thousand jealousies and warring interests that lay in the way of German unity. The iron chancellor sealed his services to the fatherland by laying the foundation for German colonial expansion. Seldom has a mortal man done more.

But Bismarck could not live and rule always. The lesser men, who received the empire from him, have shattered it into pieces.

Is Your Heart Stiff and Petrified?

(From American Magazine.)

"The way the little fellers look up to us and reach out their hands to us, so to say, and we say 'Git out and play, can't you see I'm busy!' and let them go off by themselves. I say it's the biggest, most dangerous business on earth these fathers got or ever will get is raisin' up our sons right. Our sons is the real wealth of Patagonia or Hong Kong for all the real near we get to them. You folks, set on supper and daughter—sittin' side by side sewin' together, sharin' each other's play and books and then look at us fathers and our sons. We live like there was a steel-plate wall between us—one on side, father on other,—see each other but never touch. Father is always busy, hey? Dickens he is!

"I've got my own son, and it's up to me to make full pleasure my pleasures—to show some interest in what interests him once in a while. That's how often Son has asked me to do this or do that with him, and I've said 'No,' and he's gone off sort of disappointed when I might as well have said 'Why, yes, Son. I'll go with you, we'll have a good time doin' that'—when I think of it and how I would have enjoyed it, and how he would have enjoyed it.

"And that ain't all there is to it. It's fathers grow old fast enough. We get petrified and stiff in our hearts. If we cut loose and let ourselves be boys with our boys once in a while we wouldn't grow old so fast. We wouldn't get so all-fired selfish."

GERMAN SMUGGLERS WATCHED BY SWEDEN

Several Efforts to Get Cargoes Into Kaiser's Empire Are Thwarted.

Stockholm.—There has been much discussion about the smuggling of contraband from Sweden to Germany though it is well known that the customs officials have been alert to prevent it. Their vigilance was justified apparently in the case of the steamer Solvie which left Stockholm in January loaded with planks, copper, rubber tires and a miscellaneous cargo of other articles. She was bound for Norrkoping, where additional cargo was to be put aboard. Then it was intended to have her go to Malmo and off the coast where it would be outside Swedish waters and have the ship seized by Germans. But the authorities took the ship to Norrkoping harbor.

In February there was another attempt. Three big steamers loaded with mails came into Landscrona harbor, the bill of ladings signed to order. A German presented himself as the owner and ordered the ships on the same day to go to Norrkoping and Finspang, evidently with the intention of being taken by Germans. But the government declared that the ships must unload in Landscrona.

In the first week of April there was another struggle. This was when the steamer England belonging to the recent Swedish minister of marine, was captured by Falsterbo and brought to Stettin, where much of the cargo was unloaded as belonging to a German. It was another cargo of maize and cotton from America, being under the authorization of the Swedish government for use in Sweden. During the journey, however, the shipowning firms sold its part of the cargo to a Stockholm firm which in turn sold it to the German government.

As a result of such attempts the Swedish authorities have demanded that every vessel bound for the east shall call at Malmo for examination. It may be that some tons of copper may have been smuggled across the border, but there has not been any systematic trade in contraband.

Copenhagen.—Some unusual attempts at smuggling have been recently disclosed here, owing to the unusual vigilance now being observed by the customs officers, especially toward passengers going to Germany. Three well-dressed travelers of a marked tendency toward stoutness were searched a few days ago, and found to have about four pounds of automobile tubes wound closely around their bodies. The export of rubber is prohibited.

COUNTESS OF CARDIGAN EXPOSED ALL SCANDALS

Englishwoman Who Recently Died at Age of 91 Turned Light on Victorian Era.

London.—(Correspondence of The Associated Press.)—The countess of Cardigan, whose death, at the age of 91 years, was announced here this month, had a remarkable career. She saw as a child much of the court life of King William IV, heard Tom Moore sing his own songs, and knew the Marquis of Hertford, the original of Thackeray's Lord Steyne. Her matrimonial experience included the Earl of Cardigan, who led the charge of the Light Brigade at Balaklava and, after his death, a Portuguese nobleman, but she also received proposals from the legitimist heir to the Spanish throne, whom she narrowly missed marrying, and from Disraeli, a warm admirer. Lord Sherborne, the Duke of Leeds, Prince Louis Napoleon and the Duke of Aumale Her name will go down in history as the author of a book of memoirs exposing all the scandals in high life during the Victorian era.

It was announced that the Countess of Cardigan was 85 years old and almost forgotten that she started Englishwomen in her chronicles of aristocratic scandal under the title of 'My Recollections.' To which she added nothing to taste her own reputation or others. Many heroic figures of history, such as Disraeli, emerged from her book considerably shrunken.

The countess' father was Spencer de Horsey, M. P., and her mother the daughter of the Earl of Craigmore. From childhood, Adeline de Horsey moved in the highest society in England. The Duke of Wellington was a friend of her father's intimates.

The young lady's views were decidedly advanced for her time, and because she was not allowed a latch-key, she left home and set up a house on her own in London. It was at this time she met the Earl of Cardigan. The earl possessed brute courage and dashing elan, and failed of promotion to a generalship on this account. Before presenting the plan to the city council Mayor von Wermuth assured himself of the support of labor organizations and trade unions, as well as the financial aid of the government insurance bodies in whom most German men are carried.

Every soldier who leaves the hospital the question of what trade they will take up next. Special schools, under the charge of this will be experts, who will pass uniformly on all cases. The scientific and vocational schools of Berlin will be utilized to their fullest extent, as well as the correspondence courses conducted by the insurance companies.

In urging the necessity for some such step as that of the city of Berlin, Mayor von Wermuth declared: "Those injured in the war, coming, as they do, in steadily growing numbers from the battlefields, must be immediate and in order, as quickly as possible, to take up callings and relations which will correspond to their strength and ability. These injured must not be thrown upon public institutions to the care of the poor. They must be spared the oppressing feeling that in the fulfillment of their duty to the public they have become worthless members of human society."

Oh, You Rabbit.

(From The Philadelphia Inquirer.)

"The game of rabbit is undoubtedly that part of it which takes to night life like ducking for apples," said a young man, has produced a new character and coined a new term.

Long ago in the day of the "chicken" depicted. She was coy and 20, swayed her weight from one foot to the other fancy turned, and we had the squab.

The "squab" was the sweet young thing with a dash of daring and a little, very little, knowledge of the world. And then we had the "broiler," of even tender years.

But all fads have their ending, or the faddist shows suddenly to the other extreme, and hence we have with us now the "rabbit."

"What is a 'rabbit?'" Judge Stanke asked Leonard Haines, of the Thirty-second street and Woodland avenue police station, when the lieutenant, who asserts he knows, replied:

"A woman of from 30 to 40 years, who dresses and looks as though she were only 17 or 18 years old."

Greetings 'Fellah.'

They were "rabbits," most of them, according to Lieutenant Haines, who re-"Whites's," 3220-22 Market street, and helped establish for the first time the status of the word in the revocation proceedings against the license—or at least to force the elimination of the cabaret.

IN THE THEATERS

FLORRIE MILLERSHIP,

Keith Vaudeville.

(At the Forsyth.)

The Forsyth theater is having the most auspicious summer season of its history. Permanent reservations are selling at a tremendous rate, and the matinee attendance promises to excel records long held by many of the most popular theaters on Broadway.

An inspection of records will show that the Forsyth is the only high-class vaudeville theater in operation south of Washington and west of Detroit, two of the nation's most important amusement centers outside of New York.

Executives of the Keith office on Broadway are putting forth every possible effort to provide the Atlanta house with the pink of the Keith repertoire of big feature attractions. Atlanta, in return for its liberal patronage, is being served with the highest class vaudeville available.

The Forsyth will continue through the season the most popular spot of entertainment in Dixie. The theater is cooled by augmented devices; the most scientific refrigerating apparatus has been installed, and nothing has been overlooked for the ease and comfort of the most exacting patron.

For instance, there is the headliner, the famous Princess Rajah, the Oriental dancer and the designer of the "Cleopatra" dance.

Princess Rajah recently toured Europe, where she appeared in Berlin, Paris and St. Petersburg. Returning to America shortly following the beginning of warfare, she is now closing a flattering journey of the bigger and more important theatrical centers. En route to New York, she appears in Atlanta prior to an entire season's bookings on Broadway.

Princess Rajah will perform her justly celebrated "Cleopatra" dance before Atlanta audiences. It is the terpsichorean narrative of the death of Cleopatra. She requires the services of a South African python in the performance, and the dance is rendered in a gorgeous scenic setting. The magic is adapted from native Oriental dance chants.

Princess Rajah brings to Atlanta this season a brand-new creation, "The Arabian Chair Dance," a spectacle more daring than anything she has ever undertaken. Critics the world over have bestowed upon it unstinted praise for its artistic worth.

Princess Rajah carries with her a special company, properties, electrical effects, and musicians.

An extra-added attraction of the week that will stir unusual expectation among Atlanta audiences is Henry Lewis, the jovial comedian, a favorite the nation over. He portrays a German comedian in Aaron Hoffman's exquisite funpiece, "A Vaudeville Cocktail."

Quaint, fascinating songs imported direct from the heart of the boundless plains, where cowpuncher and troubadour gathered at the chuck wagon for their hearty meals, will be sent over the footlights into the hearts of amusement lovers when the offering of Bert LaMont's cowboy troupe is staged. It will be one of the brightest spots of the unusual bill.

RAJAH,
At the Forsyth this week.

The Lamont aggregation is composed of six genuine cowboy songsters, brought up on the range, and put into vaudeville by a theatrical scout who chanced to hear them sing. Tempting phases of the fascinating life of the cowboy will be shown in the irresistible style of the LaMont players.

Interest is also being aroused over the first Atlanta appearance of Julie Ring, the charming sister of Blanche Ring, who brings her own company to the Forsyth. Having been identified with many of Broadway's most notable song and girl successes, Miss Ring has gone into vaudeville with astonishing success. She promises to excel the career of even her sister.

She presents "Twice a Week," a dramatic and musical oddity by John B. Hymer, in which she is assisted by her company, including B. J. Murphy and James Norvell. Florence Millership, of Harry Fox and Millership sisters and Heath and Millership fame, has also adopted a single act, and offers her exquisite oddity, "Little Miss Dainty."

Another big act is "The Intruder and the Wheel," offered by Mortimer McRae and the beautiful Gertrude Clegg.

SALVATION ARMY SPENDS LOCALLY ALL DONATIONS

Brigadier A. W. Crawford, in charge of the southeastern division headquarters of the Salvation Army in Atlanta, has just received from national headquarters in New York, a copy of the report made by the Audit Company of New York on the condition of the organization's business affairs, bringing out many points which will be of special interest in this territory.

It is shown in the first place that while now and then generous donations or bequests are given by rich people, the greatest portion of the expense bills everywhere are met by the pennies and nickels given on the street. It shows that the money raised in Atlanta is expended in this city and that not a single penny goes to New York. It shows that all the money expended in the south and southeast is spent in this territory, and that since the bulk of the work is done by voluntary service, which is given by unpaid workers, nearly all of the money collected is expended in helping the poor and needy. The charge that a large percentage of the money collected in the United States is sent out of the country is completely disproven by the Audit company's report.

The statistics show that during the year past 274,106 Christmas dinners were given to the poor; 97,235 children were given Christmas toys; 17,703 were given Thanksgiving dinners; 883,839 were given temporary relief outside industrial homes and hotels; 6,414 mothers were given summer outings; 29,966 children were given summer outings; 70,200 men were found employment outside own institutions; 5,673 women were found employment outside own institutions; 380,487 meals given outside own institutions; 170,813 beds given outside own institutions; 1,622,583 pounds of ice distributed; 5,574,775 pounds of coal distributed.

The above is in addition to the help given through working men's hotels, industrial homes, rescue and maternity homes, and childrens' homes.

MRS. WILLIAM FREY DIES AT HOME IN MARIETTA

Marietta, Ga., June 26.—(Special.)—After months of confinement on account of age and feebleness, Mrs. N. C. Frey, 88 years of age, and one of the most honored ladies of the county, passed away at the home of her daughter, Mrs. N. B. White, on Washington avenue last night at 10 o'clock. Mrs. Frey was the widow of the well-known and highly esteemed confederate veteran, William M. Frey, who died five years ago.

Mrs. Frey is survived by three sons and three daughters, W. J. Frey and B. T. Frey, of Marietta, and E. W. Frey, of Oklahoma; Mrs. B. J. Hamby, Mrs. N. B. White and Mrs. C. J. Bullard, of Marietta; also thirty-two grandchildren and a large number of great-grandchildren.

The funeral will be held Sunday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock from New Hope church, near Marietta, and will be conducted by Rev. W. H. Speer and Dr. Rembert Smith.

ASK GOVERNOR TO OFFER REWARD FOR MURDERER

Tifton, Ga., June 26.—(Special.)—A petition from the board of county commissioners and Sheriff Shaw was forwarded to Governor Nat E. Harris last night asking him to offer a reward for the arrest of Doc Williams, the negro who killed Sanders Bryan and a negro, Lanzel Hunt, Saturday night, June 19.

A reward amounting to $200 has already been offered by the sheriff and relatives of Mr. Bryan.

3,561 CANS COLLECTED BY GIRL IN WAYCROSS

Waycross, Ga., June 26.—(Special.)—A girl, Miss Jeanette McFoy, won the first prize in the can contest conducted here this week by the Health league. Miss McFoy collected 3,561 cans in the clean-up campaign. Herman Bowen won the second prize, with 2,498 cans. A total of 14,783 cans were gathered by the children. The idea of the Health league in having such a campaign was that if all the cans could be gotten out of the city there would be fewer breeding places for mosquitoes. It is not believed one hundred cans could be found in the city today.

SOME PLAIN TRUTH TOLD TO GERMANY

Dr. Meyer-Gerhard Convinces Berlin Officials of the Intensity of American Feeling in Regard to Lusitania Horror.

Berlin, June 26.—(Via London, June 27, 4:18 a. m.)—It is learned that Dr. Anton Meyer-Gerhard's report to the officials charged with drafting the German answer to the American note indicated the serious nature of the situation.

Dr. Meyer-Gerhard was sent to Berlin by the German ambassador at Washington to indicate to the German government the real attitude of the American government and people. He reported that the sentiment in the United States had been growing somewhat more favorable from the German viewpoint, and particularly more favorable regarding the prohibition of the export of munitions to the allies. The sinking of the Lusitania, however, undid all this. The state of feeling in the United States at the present time, he explained, was such that it would not be satisfied with unnecessary delay in the answer, nor with an answer which appeared to be evasive or failed to meet the issue squarely.

Pontius Pilate Called Arch Typical Neutral By Maxim, the Inventor

Ithaca, N. Y., June 26.—An address by Hudson Maxim, the inventor, today threatened to disrupt the student conference on international relations, which is in session here. Mr. Maxim spoke on armament, national preparedness and neutrality, and after he concluded his remarks thirty delegates, who disagreed with his expressed views, left the hall. One delegate moved to adjourn, but the motion was lost. An apology was offered the inventor and harmony was restored.

Mr. Maxim characterized Pontius Pilate as the "arch typical neutral;" declared modern style guns and armaments are life-saving machines, and asserted that it is more dangerous to ride in an automobile than to go into the trenches. He said that war has never done harm, but always has done good, and asserted that the United States needed an army "strong and skilful enough to defeat any coalition of nations that could possibly stand against us."

TEUTON VICTORIES IMPRESS BALKANS

Greece and Rumania Not So Eager to Enter War in Behalf of Allies—Rumania to Disband Part of Army.

Berlin, June 26.—(Via London.)—An Athens dispatch to The Mittag Zeitung says:

"Ex-Premier Venizelos, of Greece, intends to decline to accept the premiership if it is tendered to him because of the friendly attitude displayed by the entente powers toward Bulgaria. He is willing that the government remain in other hands friendly to the entente powers, however. It is assumed that the most recent military developments, together with the policy of the entente powers, have convinced M. Venizelos that his proposed policy of four months ago was a mistake.

"It is further asserted that the ex-premier has prepared a memorandum for King Constantine urging him to sound Germany regarding her policy toward Greece. The capture of Lemberg has made a marked impression upon Athens. Newspapers here regard the positions of the Russian army as precarious."

Gounaris for Neutrality.

"Recent developments justify the maintenance for the present of the government's policy of neutrality," is a statement attributed to Premier Gounaris, of Greece, by the Athens correspondent of The Tageblatt, who interviewed him regarding his views on the situation in Europe. The question of recognizing the cabinet, M. Gounaris said, must hang in the balance, pending the restoration to health of King Constatine, but that his physicians believed he would be able to open parliament July 20.

Taking up the foreign policy of Greece, the premier is quoted as saying that her alliance with Serbia obligates Greece to maintain an especially friendly attitude toward that country. Referring to Italy, he said, according to The Tageblatt,

"Italy's national aims in Albania and Asia Minor certainly can be asserted without conflict with the interests of Greece, but it would be vastly different if Italy tried to lay her hands upon regions in which Greeks constitute the major part of the population."

RUMANIA HALTS ABOUT ENTERING WAR.

Berlin, June 26.—(Via London.)—The correspondent of The Mittag Zeitung at Bucharest says the Rumanian cabinet has voted to disband a part of the army and give the soldiers long furloughs. This action was taken, it was stated, at the instance of the premier and minister of war, M. Bratiano, who explained that negotiations with Russia would require a long time.

Washington, June 26.—Reports that part of the Rumanian army has been released from the colors temporarily because of delay in negotiations with Russia over Rumanian participation in the war, served to call the attention of diplomats here to recent rumors that Rumania is short of war munitions. Some diplomats believe that recent Austro-German successes in Galicia have impressed the Rumanian government with a desire to move slowly, and that at least until the situation there is fully understood it is unlikely that Rumania will join the allies.

BULGARIA FAILS TO AGREE WITH TURKEY.

London, June 27.—(2:04 a. m.)—Halil Bey, president of the Turkish council, according to a special dispatch from Sofia, Bulgaria, has left that city, where he had been on a special mission, without concluding an agreement regarding Bulgaria's attitude in the war. Negotiations between Rumania and Bulgaria on the same subject are proceeding.

1,000 IMPORTERS PROTEST BLOCKADE

this time, but it is known he finally resolved to wait for the German answer to the last note concerning submarine warfare. He did not wish, it is understood, to give the appearance abroad that the United States would bargain by negotiations with England on the blockade question for concessions by Germany demanded as a result of the sinking of the Lusitania. Reparation for the loss of more than 100 American lives, the president has held, must constitute a separate and distinct issue.

Germany Will Take Advantage.

It is thought certain in diplomatic quarters here that Germany will in her next note take advantage of the invitation of the United States to submit suggestions for a modus vivendi to the allies whereby submarine warfare might be abandoned if the so-called blockade of commerce through neutral countries were dropped and restrictions removed on the shipment of foodstuffs.

Before a note is sent, however, covering all the phases of the order in council, it is considered possible that the statement of the American importers will be transmitted to Ambassador Page for presentation to the British foreign office in order that Great Britain may appreciate the growing unrest of American merchants. The importers' petition follows the argument made by the United States in its previous note to Great Britain, but points out, in addition, that the so-called blockade of the German coast is not "effective" since Sweden can trade freely with German ports. The test of the validity of a blockade is its effectiveness, and the importers declare that the citizens of the United States should have the same right as those of Sweden.

After the conference counsel for the importers issued a statement saying Secretary Lansing had expressed a determination on the part of President Wilson and himself to do all in their power to aid.

What Lansing Said.

"The secretary of state," said the statement, "asked many questions, evincing a study and thorough knowledge of the conditions that have seriously interfered with the business of American merchants by reason of the unwarranted delay of the shipment in over-seas transportation of American-owned merchandise.

"The secretary expressed a determination on the part of both the president and himself to do all in their power to aid the importers of our country in securing the rights to which they are entitled under the laws of nations and by treaty obligations; and expressed his full sympathy with the importers in their present unfortunate state; and, without committing himself, gave the committee to understand that they might expect some favorable action on the part of the foreign nations in response to the state department's representations."

COPY OF PETITION MADE PUBLIC.

New York, June 26.—A copy of the petition taken to Washington today by a delegation of importers and made public here, declares the British blockade measures concern "not only the property rights of the undersigned citizens," but involve a "contemplated unlawful destruction of a most important portion of the entire commerce of the United States." The petition addressed to President Wilson discusses at length issues of international law involved, and urges on the president "the need for a very early determination of these issues so that we may know whether we will be able to conduct our established business."

Great Britain, the petition says, "has studiously avoided" answering the American note of March 30, in which the position of the Washington government in regard to the blockade measures was set forth, "and nearly three months of valuable time, in which it was necessary for us to prepare for our coming business, have passed."

"Notwithstanding that this declaration of the British government does not follow from any declared and maintained blockade of German territory," the petition says, "we have been unable to induce any steamship companies to carry our goods, American property, destined to blockaded German ports or from neutral ports to which the goods have been shipped by means of internal land communication. The mere fact that Great Britain does not threaten confiscation of our goods if the are shipped does not concern us, because, first, we cannot get them shipped, and, secondly, because the question is not in the much greater question of lawfully obtaining an uninterrupted supply of our American merchandise. Whether the same has been paid for, contracted for, or may be contracted for in the future."

Not Compensated by Payment.

"We are not compensated by a payment for a particular cargo after legal proceedings in the British courts, for we are concerned in making the long established trade of this country and preventing a sacrifice of American capital invested in our commerce.

"During 1914 and the early part of this year we placed large contracts for merchandise to be manufactured by Germany and Austrian concerns. We have obligated ourselves to take this merchandise, and now that a considerable portion of such merchandise is finished and ready for shipment, the manufacturers are demanding payment for the same. We are in the quandary of having to pay for our merchandise and at the same time being unable to get our merchandise. In addition, we have sold much of this merchandise to American business houses, to whom we are now responsible for the delivery of such goods.

"The concession of the British government that we may receive such goods as have been paid for prior to March 1 is of no avail to us. The undersigned are responsible American houses, enjoying a good credit, who, in general, do not have to pay for their merchandise before it is delivered."

Adding that the British requirement that shipment must be effected prior to June 15 was likewise of no avail, because a "great bulk of our orders was not ready for shipment by June 15," the petition asserts that the British order is an "anomalous principle of international law which cannot affect the rights of citizens of a great neutral nation."

No Effective Blockade.

"With all deference to your excellency," the document continues, "who we know has at heart the protection of American commerce, we respectfully call attention to the urgency of the situation and the pressing necessity of our knowing very soon whether we will be able to conduct our lawful business under the protection of well established principles of law upon which we have already relied, and which have been so ably and aptly pointed out by the state department in its diplomatic correspondence with Great Britain.

"We maintain that since a Swedish merchant can ship to a German port, we also, as citizens of this country, have the same right, and that these facts convincingly prove that there is no effective blockade of nearly the entire German coast."

The importers appeal to the president not only on the ground that their business would be injured, but on grounds that "the only prospect for peace is an insistence of those unquestioned guarantees which have been won from the belligerent powers under the leadership of these free United States of America."

"We are proud as citizens of this country that these United States have ever led in the struggle for these rights," says the petition, "and for the safeguards due to neutrals not embroiled in war, and we respectfully ask your excellency to firmly insist that the illegitimate pretentions of the warring countries do not extend beyond those exceptions already engrafted upon the principles of international law."

NO EMBARGO CONSIDERED.

Washington, June 26.—The United States is not considering an embargo at present on shipments to any belligerent country. This was stated officially today at the state department as a result of published reports that an embargo on all shipments of American products to England was a likely step in retaliation for British interference with neutral trade.

MANY PROTESTS CAUSED BY NEW SEAMEN'S LAW

Washington, June 26.—The United States may face a general protest from foreign governments whose treaties with this country are contravened by the new seamen's law, according to belief expressed here today by some European diplomats.

The notification that sections of treaties conflicting with the new law would be nullified at the expiration of the required time—one year—has brought no official answer to the state department thus far, but representatives of several important powers have indicated that their governments will not agree. They claim that their viewpoint is sustained by the general principles of international law governing the rights of citizens on ships under their own flag.

The chief obstacle that American diplomacy must overcome, it is pointed out, is presented in the Swedish consular convention signed between this country and Sweden in 1910. Within this time the United States is bound to respect the privileges and rights of Swedish consuls and Swedish shipmasters as outlined in the pact. Unless Sweden waives her rights, which is doubted in diplomatic quarters here, all the other powers whose treaty relations with this country are protected by the favored-nations clause can claim the same treatment as that assured by the Swedish convention.

The United States has indicated that it does not wish the remainder of the treaties to become void as they naturally would under these conditions.

Strike Is Ended.

Pittsburg, Kan., June 26.—Operations were resumed at the two local smelter plants today, when the greater part of the furnace men who have been on a strike, returned to work. All the men employed by the Pittsburg Zinc company reached an agreement with their employers. The Joplin Ore and Smelting company resumed operations with a partial force at work.

"MOONSHINE" FRAUDS PROBED BY GOVERNMENT

It Is Alleged That the United States Has Lost Thousands of Dollars.

Fort Smith, Ark., June 26.—Interest in the alleged "moonshine" whisky frauds, through which the government was said to have lost many thousands of dollars, centered today in the hearing of a suit in federal court here questioning the right of the United States to seize letters from the Kansas City, Mo., office of the Rush Distilling company.

The suit was brought by John L. Casper, head of the company, who, with a number of alleged business associates, was indicted by a federal grand jury here this week, charged with various violations of the internal revenue laws.

A part of the information on which the indictments were based, was said to have been contained in correspondence taken by federal officers in a raid on the Kansas City offices of the company. Casper alleged the seizure of the documents was against the constitution. His attorneys asserted that the correspondence was taken from a place which was not alleged by the government to be an illegal institution.

J. V. Bourland, United States district attorney, declared the correspondence was in the possession of Kansas City federal officers, through whose courtesy the documents were permitted to be used by the grand jury.

Judge Frank A. Youmans took the case under advisement.

The grand jury made no further report today and an indictment returned and withheld yesterday was not made public. The jury is expected to make a full report Monday.

Had Pellagra; Is Now Well

Ringgold, La.—Mrs. S. A. Cotter, of this place, writes: "Will say that I am perfectly well and the happiest soul on earth. Wish every pellagra sufferer could know of your great remedy. I know how to appreciate health and sympathize with those that are not so blest as I. Am growing stronger, gaining in weight and can do anything I ever could. Oh, I know I am well of that horrible disease, and my heart is full of rejoicing. I feel that I have come out of a dense cloud into the blessed sunshine. God be praised! He has spared my life for some good end and I feel that I have just begun to live."

There is no longer any doubt that pellagra can be cured. Don't delay until it is too late. It is your duty to consult the resourceful Baughn.

The symptoms would be sunburn; skin peeling off, sore mouth, the lips, throat and tongue a flaming red, with much mucus and choking; indigestion and nausea, either diarrhoea or constipation.

There is hope; get Baughn's big Free book on Pellagra and learn about the remedy that has at last been found. Address American Compounding Co., Box 2003, Jasper, Ala., remembering money is refunded in any case where the remedy fails to cure.—(adv.)

DOUBLE-HEADER IS RAINED OUT

Teams Try It Again Today—Benefit Game for A. B. Parker's Family at Baseball Parlors.

Mobile, Ala., June 26.—(Special.)—A rainstorm accompanied by hail prevented the scheduled double-header on Saturday afternoon between the Mobile and Atlanta clubs, and as a result a double-header will be played on Sunday afternoon, the first game starting at 2:15 o'clock, and two games will be played on Monday afternoon. The diamond this afternoon was flooded.

"Tex" Covington and Schmidt will work for Mobile in the first game tomorrow and Allen and Jenkins for Atlanta.

In the second contest, "Lefty" Townsend, the local southpaw, and Herb Send, the Mobile boy on the pitching staff of Manager Billy Smith of the visitors, will hook up in a pitching duel.

Manager Smith and the members of the Atlanta club received the news of the death of Secretary A. B. Parker, of the Atlanta club, with much regret. The members of the club sent a large floral design to the bereaved family of the young secretary, who was very popular in this city.

The double-header today will be called in detail by Dick Jemison at his matinee parlors on the Viaduct, and this detail will be for the benefit of the family of A. B. Parker, the popular young secretary of the Atlanta club, whose death occurred Friday night.

The proceeds from the double-header will be presented to Mr. Parker, and it is to be hoped that all the fans will attend. The doors will open at 2 o'clock.

Twenty-Eighth Annual Southern Tennis Tourney

The twenty-eighth annual tennis tournament for the championship of the south in tennis will be held on the clay courts of the Atlanta Athletic club, starting Monday, July 5, and continuing throughout the week.

This tourney is the tennis classic of the south, and is always one of the most interesting sporting events of the year.

The winning team in the doubles will be sent to Chicago by the Atlanta Athletic club to represent the south in the United States National Lawn Tennis association sectional doubles, the winners of which have a privilege of challenging the national champions at Newport.

Events and Trophies.

The events that will be held will be men's singles, men's doubles and ladies' singles. There will also be a consolation round for all players who are defeated in the first round, and all players who are actually defeated will be eligible for this event. That is, players who default their first round matches will not be eligible for the consolation.

The championship singles cup presented by the New Orleans Lawn Tennis club in 1914 will become the permanent property of the player winning it three times. The holder of the cup is required to play through the tourney, there being no challenge round. The championship cups in the men's doubles will become permanent property of the team winning them three times. These cups are presented by the Atlanta Athletic club. The winner of the ladies' singles will hold the cup offered for one year, but must win it three times before it becomes her permanent property. Besides these, prizes will be awarded the winners of each event.

Previous Winners.

The previous winners of the three cups offered are: The championship singles cup, which was put in play last season, was won by Irving C. Wright, of Boston, Mass., he being the only player who has a leg on the cup.

Title Holders.

The present holders of the championship cups in the men's doubles are Messrs. J. B. Adoue, Jr., of Dallas, Texas, and Irving C. Wright, of Boston, Mass. The following players have won the cups twice: Messrs. C. H. Doyle and H. E. Doyle, Washington, D. C.; Messrs. G. M. Grant and Nat Thornton, of Atlanta. Once by the following: Messrs. H. G. Shelton, of Dallas, Texas.

The present holder of the title cup in the ladies' singles is Miss Ethelyn LeGendre, of New Orleans.

Irving Wright, who has one leg on the championship singles cup is expected to defend his title in the coming tourney, while it is expected that all the players who have two legs on the doubles cup will defend their titles also. Whether or not Miss LeGendre will defend her title is not known, but it is expected that she will.

A large number of out-of-town players are expected for the tourney. It is already known that players from New Orleans, Dallas, Memphis, Knoxville, Birmingham, Chattanooga and Augusta are coming, and it is hoped that all of the northern players who have legs on various cups will also come for the tourney.

Reynolds to Referee.

Frank Reynolds will act as referee throughout the tourney.

The tournament committee of the Atlanta Athletic club is Carleton Y. Smith, chairman; B. M. Grant, E. S. Mansfield, Vernon McMillian, William Matthews and J. K. Orr, Jr. The committee will gladly make arrangements for out-of-town players at local hotels at reasonable rates.

TINKER AND MYERS DRAW SUSPENSIONS

Brooklyn, June 26.—Joseph Tinker, manager of the Chicago Federals, and Ralph Myers, of the Brooklyn Federals, were suspended indefinitely tonight by President Gilmore for engaging in an altercation in the second game today between Chicago and Brooklyn.

In the second half of the eighth inning Tinker, playing second base, tapped Myers for a put-out at second. An argument followed after which Myers is said to have shoved Tinker. The men then exchanged blows. Other players separated the two, who were put off the field.

Ratner Stops Ward.

New York, June 26.—Augie Ratner, of New York, who recently won the national welterweight championship in San Francisco, made his first appearance as a professional here tonight, and stopped Tommy Ward, also of New York, in the second round of their ten-round match. Ratner's left jabs and hooks proved too much for his opponent.

Campi Defeats Sullivan.

MAY BE CHAMPION SOME DAY

R. T. JONES, JR.,

The 13-year-old Atlanta golfer whose showing in the recent Southern golf championship was remarkable for a player of his age and experience. In his final round he was eliminated in the second flight only when his opponent, F. T. Clark, of Nashville, established the course record. In the afternoon round young Jones shot a 78, which broke the former record, and was only two strokes worse than the new record.

City Tennis Tournament Will Begin Monday, June 28

With twenty-one entries in the singles, the second annual city tennis tourney will start on the courts at Piedmont park Monday. Whether or not the committee in charge is more entered in this, still the twenty-nine entered are among the best in the city, and some great tennis is sure to be uncorked before the finals have been completed.

The tourney will be completed in a week. The first round of the singles will be played Monday. Players are required to be on the courts at any time after 6 o'clock Monday afternoon to answer for their matches when called. All matches will be defaulted unless the players report promptly.

The doubles will not start until Tuesday. Thirteen doubles teams have entered.

Eight dollar tennis rackets will be presented the winners of the singles and the doubles. Whether or not a consolation singles round will be played is yet to be determined.

Some of the best players in the city are entered in the tourney. Among them are Vernon McMillian, J. D. Hunt, who won the tourney last year; Harry Ashe, Frank Owens, Ty Jennings, R. R. Stewart and a good many others, and it is expected that some great matches will be pulled off during the week.

All matches will be for the best two out of three sets, except the finals in both events, which will be for the best three out of five sets.

DARIO RESTA WINS 500-MILE RACE

Chicago, June 26.—All competitive speedway automobile records of the world from 50 miles to 500, were shattered in the running of the first Chicago 500-mile derby. They were not only beaten by Dario Resta, who won with a French car, and captured more than $20,000 in prize money, but by the nine other drivers who finished in the money.

The previous record, made by Ralph De Palma, at Indianapolis recently, was at the rate of 89.84 miles per hour. Resta averaged 97.6 over the same distance, and J. Coper, who finished tenth, bettered the De Palma mark, averaging 90.3 miles.

The result, according to experts, establishes the reputation of the new wooden track as the fastest in the United States, if not in the world. It was a successful and thrill threatening weather early in the day, 80,000 persons witnessed the spectacle.

Grant Never Stopped.

The performance of the veteran, Harry Grant, in driving the entire distance without a stop, excited almost as much enthusiasm as the brilliant victory of Resta.

Grant never hesitated during the entire 500-mile grind, although his average speed, which landed him in fourth place, was 95.6 miles per hour. The previous non-stop record in competition was 305 miles.

Twenty-one cars started and eight dropped out in the course of the grind. J. Cooper, the last of the ten drivers to finish, was but 25 minutes 8 seconds behind the victor.

1—Resta, 5:87:6—97.6.
2—Pinkerton, 5:14:7—86.5.
3—Rickenbacker, 5:14:7—95.8.
4—Grant, 5:13:2—95.56.
5—Cooper, 5:15:59—94.04.
6—Anderson, 5:15—94.04.
7—Alley, 5:25:4—93.7.
8—Chevrolet, 5:27:15—91.6.
9—Burman, 5:28:55—91.2.

Resta Favorite.

Resta was favorite at the start, and led most of the way, closely pressed at all times. He visited the pit only three times.

"I held back a bit for the first 25 miles, but after that I let her out and, barring accident, I felt sure of winning," said Resta.

When the race was over he wiped the oil from his face and shook hands with Mayor Thompson and disappeared to get some rest.

Resta had no more trouble than his compatriot, or he might have landed the prize. He started out with the idea that an average speed of 97 miles would win, and held that pace with little variation for 400 miles, when he saw that more speed was necessary if he hoped to win. Overtake Resta, thereafter it was neck and neck betwen the two, with Rickenbacker and Grant always threatening.

A remarkable feature of the race was the freedom from injuries to drivers or spectators.

The speed of the board track was said to have been shown in its effect on the men engaged in timing the race, who had difficulty in keeping up with the timing.

AQUATIC MEET.

Big Event at Y. M. C. A. Saturday Night.

Last evening in the big swimming pool of the Young Men's Christian association was held the fifth classified aquatic meet in the young men's division. The meet was well attended by friends of the contestants, and their popularity could be well judged by the great number of the fair sex. The audience was enthusiastic and were given a good exhibition of highclass work.

The meet was featured by the tying of one association record, the running high dive held by L. Sengert. The former record of 6 feet 1 inch being attained by S. J. Hartley. The other record was made by George Bonnell in the 40-yard swim, who bested his own record of 24.1 seconds by 1-5 second lower.

As the height on the running high jump was raised the enthusiasm of both the spectators and the contestants increased and when the height of 6 feet was reached with two contestants the cheers for favorites were heard on all sides. S. J. Hartley was given an ovation when he cleared the tape at 6 feet and 1 inch, thus tying the record. George Bonnell gave a great exhibition of the crawl in the 40-yard swim and showed that he is constantly improving in the stroke art.

The following is a list of the events and the winners in each event: Running high dive, S. J. Hartley, first, 6 feet 1 inch; L. L. Sengert, second, 6 feet; A. E. Dix, third, 5 feet 10 inches.

40-Yard Swim—G. H. Bonnell, first, 24 seconds (new record); S. J. Hartley, second, 25 seconds; J. L. Anderson, third, 25.1 seconds.

50-Yard Breast Stroke—G. H. Bonnell and W. Matson tied for first, 44.1 seconds; J. Anderson, third, 45 seconds.

Plunge for Distance—H. W. Belfour, first, 45 feet; G. H. Bonnell, second, 41 feet; H. P. Watterston, third, 39 feet.

The last event was a pick-up relay of 20 yards, the men dividing into two teams and ploughing through the water like regular submarines. After the meet the contestants treated the visitors to a diving exhibition, in which some spectacular and otherwise dives were shown. This meet was the eighth of its kind held by the local association in the last two weeks, the other meets being in the boys' division.

SUMMER LEAGUES.

Busy Week at Y. M. C. A. Just Closed.

The past week at the Young Men's Christian association has been a lively one in many respects. The summer leagues have been organized in all the classes and after a week of play the following team standings result in those classes which were first organized: In the senior division, or men's division, meeting Monday and Thursday afternoons at 5:15 o'clock, Burton Smith's team leads with a total of 23 points; Dr. D. L. Hill, 84; Mr. W. H. Waters, 29, and Dr. M. McH. Hull, 16.

In the junior business men the following team have been picked and are now ready for combat: Team No. 1, H. E. Michael, captain; Swicegood, H. J. Michael, Jones, Burke, Klein and Hinchey. Team No. 2, A. C. Miller, captain; Chalmers, Robinson, McClelland, Govan and Slate. Team No. 3, W. A. Reid, captain; Hertwig, Durham, Hale, Haas and Richard. Team No. 4, H. C. SCIENCE AND NEAR-SCIENCE UP-TO-DATE

How Women of Old Rome Became Famous as Beauties

HOW the beauty-craving woman of ancient Rome would have liked to live in this day and age of electric vibrators, electric needles, rubber masks and other scientific appliances for bringing back the charms of youth. Investigation shows that she resisted advancing age until the last—concealed her wrinkles, helped her figure with judicious padding and replaced lost teeth by artificial ones of ivory, fastened with gold.

The Roman woman needed for her toilet a whole bevy of maids, of whom each was a specialist and had her peculiar skill and duty. Milady's dressing table, which was often of considerable dimensions, contained pomades and perfumes of various kinds, and a whole armament of boxes, phials, knives, tweezers, brushes, bodkins and scrapers. In the evening, when she betook herself to repose, a cake of fine dough, kneaded with asses' milk, was spread over her face, to render the skin elastic and soft and to preserve its delicate tint.

Asses' milk had a high reputation for its cosmetic powers. The Empress Poppaea, Nero's consort, was the first to bring it into vogue; and when she traveled she was accompanied by a drove of she asses, that she might always have a supply of fresh milk. In the morning this plaster of dough was dry, and it was then slowly and carefully washed off with fresh milk.

Then began the work of the "kosmetai," as these dressing maids were called. The eyebrows were drawn with the pencil in fine arches, the lashes darkened, white and red laid upon the cheeks, the nails trimmed and polished, the hair oiled, perfumed, and the coiffure built up; then shoes of soft, bright leather, or sandals with straps studded with pearls, were put on the feet, and finally the perfumed garments folded about the person.

Last of all came the ornaments for the hair, such as frontlets, diadems, pins, or strings of pearls. The Roman lady prized not only the artistic beauty but also the material value of her jewelry, and did not shrink from displaying a parure that cost millions. The Empress Lollia Paulina, consort of Caligula, appeared at her betrothal ceremony decked in jewelry valued at 40,000,000 sesterces, or $1,548,000. It consisted of emeralds and pearls, the art of cutting diamonds then being unknown.

So now the beauty, having been dressed, perfumed and decked with jewels, sets out to receive the homage of an admiring world. Whatever her destination, her delicate feet must never touch the hard pavement of the streets. The curtained litter stood ready; eight stalwart Cappadocians, her slaves, were waiting to bear their mistress wherever she might order. Taking a fan of feathers in her hand, she moved to her conveyance with the calm and noble gait of a matron and the stately carriage of a great lady, and, reclining on soft cushions, was borne away, leaving a waft of perfume in the air as she passed along.

Hairdressing among the Roman women was an art, and the slave girls intrusted with this important duty were instructed in it by professional teachers. For a long time auburn or golden hair was most esteemed. Hair of a natural blonde was rare among Roman women, but they used a kind of caustic pomade or soap, in which ashes were an ingredient, to give their dark tresses the admired hue. In other words, they were our first "peroxide blondes."

The application of this dye was not agreeable, but they submitted to it with exemplary patience. The hair was first washed in lye, then rubbed with this dressing and exposed to the rays of the sun. Even this was not always effectual, and then recourse was had to a wig, the blond hair for which was obtained from female captives or imported. Merchants traveled through the Teutonic tribes buying up blond and red hair.

Great care of the hair was also customary among the Greek women—and the men, as well. To have the hair cut, or dressed, the men went to the barber-shops, which abounded in all the Greek cities. As at the present day, the barbers were noted for their loquacity and knew how to entertain a customer with all the latest gossip. Indeed, their shops were often frequented on this account, and became resorts of the idle, the curious and the talkative, who passed there a considerable part of the day.

Greek women often wore false hair, and dyed gray locks black, or faded tresses auburn. To perform this latter feat they used a caustic wash and exposed the hair to the rays of the sun. In this point the men were scarcely behind the women, for they, too, used cosmetics to dye the hair and beard black when they began to turn gray. Dyeing them brown or blonde, though sometimes practiced, was considered effeminate and foppish.

An elegant Greek lady needed for the completion of her toilet no less than fifty different articles, all of which a garrulous writer has enumerated. In the list we find mirrors, jars and phials, unguents and oils, combs and brushes, pencils and colors. She well understood, for that day, how to defend her beauty from the attacks of advancing age, and only yielded to the universal conqueror, Time.

The Roman Woman Needed a Bevy of Maids, All Beauty Specialists, to Aid Her in Making Her Toilet.

Here Are Many Opportunities for Inventors

HERE are a few simple things so badly needed that the Scientific American calls upon inventors to get busy and invent them:

A compartment cigar case to put in the pocket, whose unfilled compartment or compartments may be collapsed without impairing the protection offered to the cigar or cigars contained in the filled compartment.

A ticket holder for holding the price and lot tickets to a coat or other garment, which ticket can be easily applied to and removed and another inserted, all without mutilation of or other injury to the garment.

The lower berth in a sleeping car is stuffy with the windows closed, and if you open the window the cold air is directly on you. It is thought that the riding public would appreciate some deflector or diffusing construction which could be applied to the open window over the usual short-hinged screen and permit the entry of fresh air, at the same time preventing it from blowing directly upon the passenger in the berth.

Some means for effectively preventing the mirror effect in show windows, the effect we all notice in passing such a window in which our image is reflected and the contents of the window are shut out of view. Naturally, the shopkeeper who works for a display in his window resents it not being seen.

President Wilson, who is an ardent golfer and also dependent on his eyeglasses, is reported as saying that he cannot play the game in the rain because of the accumulation of moisture on his glasses, which leads to the suggestion that specially devised glasses or some treatment of the ordinary lens may solve the problem.

'Kill Me or I'll Kill You,' Says the Murderous House Fly

Flies kill many sick babies every year—just how many nobody is able to say. But you consider the fly menace of trivial importance.

Physicians who realize the peril of flies realize that if the average layman could see a fly commit its many crimes just as they do the life of the insect would be short. Therefore a campaign of education to suppress it has been begun.

Here are a few facts about the death-dealing insect accumulated by Dr. G. A. Jordan, health commissioner of St. Louis:

There are ten to thirteen generations in one season.

Neglected garbage and dead fowls and animals also are favorite breeding places.

The descendants of one pair of flies from April to September can amount to 5,598,720,000,000 flies. These are figures of the United States government.

These figures are based on each female fly laying only one batch of eggs when she may lay four batches.

If all flies descending from one pair should live and breed their descendants would bury the entire earth forty-seven feet deep.

Virtually every fly in a city was born in that city.

The fly by his habits is attracted to and crawls over and feeds upon all kinds of dirt and carries this upon his body and legs.

Germs cause disease just as seeds cause flowers when either is planted in proper soil. Your body or the body of your wife or child may be proper soil.

What is the use of screening your house and then going out and buying food upon which filthy flies have crawled?

All flies will go into a trap if there is no other food about.

A fly seldom travels over two city blocks from his breeding place unless carried on food, the back of a horse or in a conveyance upon which he happens to alight.

Any fermenting or rotting material attracts flies. They also are fond of milk, fish and sweets.

The fly is a voracious feeder, often swallowing one-half its body weight at one meal. It feeds continuously if food be present.

Keep your premises clear of any filth, of exposed garbage or other organic matter, especially manure. See that your neighbor also keeps his premises free.

Put out your fly trap early and keep it working every day. Have fly swatters scattered about your house convenient for use.

Screen every door and window and wipe the wire of your screens with a cloth dampened with coal oil. This preserves the wire and keeps the fly away.

This, an Ordinary House Fly, May Carry 1,600,000 Disease Germs About It.

The mosquito is responsible for every case of yellow fever and malaria that ever existed, because these two diseases can only be conveyed from man to man through his bite.

We are just commencing to realize the deadly possibilities of the fly in conveying such deadly diseases as typhoid fever, tuberculosis, infantile paralysis and other fatal maladies that have laid millions in their graves.

The fly, eating from the same plate as you are, may be carrying upon his body, feet and legs a million germs.

Wild, dangerous beasts and poisonous snakes are killed on sight. Flies kill more people in one year than wild beasts or snakes ever did. Most of such beasts and snakes never get an opportunity to kill a human being, but any of the millions of flies in every city has such a chance every day.

Germs on the body of a fly multiply faster than the fly does. Patronize the merchant who protects you by keeping the food he sells you screened from flies.

The solution of the fly problem is the destruction of the April fly. Every fly destroyed in April means swarms less in September.

Don't use fly poisons around places where children may come in contact with them. A fly poison is also a child poison. Use traps and swatters.

Fifteen minutes after flies had been fed on sugar saturated with typhoid bacilli their specks were found to contain thousands of the living bacilli.

We used to drink the milk from which a fly had been removed. Nowadays one had rather eat the fly, because most of the filth had been removed by his bath and was left in the milk.

The fly does carry disease and he can be eradicated. These are the two cardinal points to be remembered in the warfare now being waged upon him.

The common house fly does not bite; he sucks. Before he feeds he puts out a drop of saliva and sucks it back and forth until the substance he is feeding upon is dissolved. Would you like to eat after him?

If the fly carried only filth and not disease that would be enough to condemn him. You see the people living about you in spite of flies, but you forget the legions that are in their graves because of him.

If you saw a fly kill a little child you would be his eternal enemy. Because you cannot see him do this is no reason why you should be any less his enemy.

Just so soon as every one does his part on his own premises, just so soon will there be no more flies. When you fight the fly you are protecting yourself and your family and your neighbor and his family. The place to swat the fly is where he breeds, not where he basks.

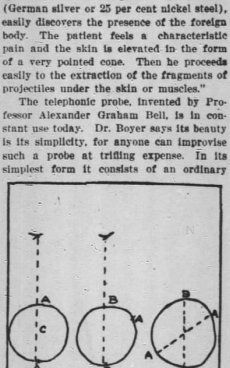
How Bullets Telephone Their Location to Physicians

SURGEONS in the military hospitals of France are now making general use of all the most recently invented processes and apparatus for performing operations. Among these are the electro-magnetic and telephonic methods of finding bullets, fragments of shells or other foreign bodies in the human tissues.

The electro-magnet is useless in discovering lead or other metals that are non-magnetic, but whenever there is iron or steel, even in small quantities, in the object to be found it is most effective. Dr. Jacques Boyer describes in La Nature how some of this apparatus is used. Of the electro-magnet he says:

"The apparatus is placed in a frame above the patient. The surgeon, who must operate with nonmagnetic instruments (German silver or 25 per cent nickel steel), easily discovers the presence of the foreign body. The patient feels a characteristic pain and the skin is elevated in the form of a very pointed cone. Then he proceeds easily to the extraction of the fragments of projectiles under the skin or muscles."

The telephonic probe, invented by Professor Alexander Graham Bell, is in constant use today. Dr. Boyer says its beauty is its simplicity, for anyone can improvise such a probe at trifling expense. In its simplest form it consists of an ordinary telephone receiver with two wires, to the end of one of which a silver spoon is attached and to the other a slender copper or steel rod. Dr. Garel's method of using it is to inject cocaine-adrenalin into the wound, place the spoon in the patient's mouth, hold the receiver to his own ear with his left hand and with his right insert the probe into the wound. The instant it touches the object sought the surgeon hears a click, for an electric current has been formed by the chemical action of the juices of the body upon the two metals.



How a Bullet in the Head May Be Located by Radioscopy.

Dr. Girdner has perfected this apparatus by substituting a head gear with two ear pieces for the single telephone receiver, in order to leave both the operator's hands free.

The X-rays are being used now in all the hospitals for finding the exact situation of any foreign body. The precise localization of such a body depends upon knowledge of the exact points at which a ray from the X-ray machine enters and leaves the body. Among the systems devised by the surgeons that of Dr. Jaugeras is one of the most precise. Suppose he has to find a bullet in a man's head, for example. He places the patient, immobilized in a certain position, before the screen and sets the X-ray bulb at such a height that it casts the shadow of the bullet on the screen. With a pencil having a metallic point that makes it clearly visible on the screen he marks on the patient's skin the point A, at which the ray enters, and the point A1, at which it emerges. Thus he gets the two extremities of a straight line somewhere on which the bullet lies. Then he turns the patient through a certain angle, but keeps the bulb and the screen in the same positions. Again he marks the points B, at which the X-ray enters, and B1, at which is emerges. Thus he gets the two extremities of a second line somewhere on which the bullet lies. The precise situation of the bullet is at the point of intersection of these two lines.

The surgeon now fits a flexible ring of metal around the patient's head at the height of the four points and marks these upon the ring, which represents a section of the patient's head. Removing the ring, he marks its outline upon a sheet of paper and rules straight lines from the points A to A1, and from B to B1. The point at which these lines intersect is where the bullet lies. His knowledge of the anatomy of the skull and brain enables him to decide where most effectually to open the man's head, and how most safely to enter the brain and cut out the bullet.

The same principle is applied to other parts of the body.

Where Roller Skates Originated

ROLLER skates were patented and used in France as early as the year 1819, and a few years later an Englishman named Syers patented them and manufactured them in England. Syers' skate consisted of a sandal mounted on five narrow wheels in a single row, so arranged, however, that only two of them could touch the floor at the same time. Several other similar skates were patented in England during the next forty years.

In 1865 Mr. Plympton of Boston patented a roller skate and inaugurated the first system of skating rinks in this country. The first public skating rink was opened at Newport, R. I., in 1866. The skating craze spread from that city all over the country, raging most fiercely on the Pacific coast. There the amusement became so popular that the right to use the Plympton skate in San Francisco alone sold for $25,000.

The craze died and was revived several times since. Its present popularity, especially among children who skate in the street and on the sidewalks, is growing.

Strict Economy Keynote of Governor Harris' Address

TAX LAW PRAISED BY NEW EXECUTIVE

Declares Sale of Liquor in Georgia Must Be Stopped, and Urges Legislation to Preserve W. & A. Property.

The keynote of the inaugural address and message of Governor Nat Harris, which he delivered before a joint session of the general assembly immediately after his inauguration yesterday, was the strictest possible economy and the betterment of the education system of the state.

After praising the work which has been accomplished by the tax equalization law and by Judge John C. Hart, state tax commissioner, he indicated that difficulty which is encountered this year in the payment of taxes, owing to financial conditions generally. This, he said, will necessitate caution on the part of the general assembly in the voting of extra appropriations. He suggested as a means of better handling the finances that the ways and means committee and the appropriations committee might be combined, as they were in former years.

Upon the subject of pensions for confederate veterans he argued that, owing to the advanced years and feebleness of many veterans, it might be advisable to increase the pensions appropriation in order better to take care of them. He suggested a constitutional amendment which, before its passage, would give the state time to recover from its present financial straits.

Would Strengthen Militia.

Governor Harris urged strongly a strengthening of the state's militia, pointing out that with Georgia's expanse of seacoast the state might have to depend largely upon the militia for protection in case of war.

After pointing out that Georgia enjoys the painful distinction of belonging to a group of four states which hold the record for illiteracy in the United States, he urged the adoption of a compulsory education law and the improvement of the state's educational system.

Governor Harris stated that in his campaign he had promised to try to enforce law, including the prohibition law, and that he intends to keep that promise to the best of his ability.

"Liquor selling is not allowed in Georgia," he said, "therefore, liquor selling should cease."

The W. & A. Lease.

He urged that steps be taken by the legislature to preserve and re-lease the state's property known as the Western & Atlantic railroad.

He urged revision of the judicial system of the state to relieve the tremendous congestion which exists.

Governor Harris also favored the creation of a state highway commission.

He suggested a law limiting the money which may be spent by candidates in political campaigns.

He called attention to the advantages which Georgia would enjoy under the Smith-Lever bill by making proper appropriations for agricultural educational purposes.

He directed the attention of the general assembly to the report of the state health department.

His address in full was as follows:

Mr. President, Mr. Speaker, and You Gentlemen of the Senate and House, and Ladies and Gentlemen:

Under the skies of this summer day, amid these historic surroundings, I come to enter upon the duties of the office to which the people of the state have conferred upon me.

To one who has lived in this commonwealth from his young manhood through a long life, to engage at last in the public affairs and aiding in a small way in the administration of its government, this day can never be forgotten. It will be graved in the memory of all his after days.

It is an small honor to be governor of Georgia. One of the original thirteen colonies; the Empire State of the south, and forging fast to the front as the great power State of the union; possessing the largest domain of any state east of the Mississippi; with a people devoted to the principles of the government of the fathers and jealous of its traditions; with a history of the settling of a new country; with growing resources and rapid multiplication of inhabitants, the state is of right challenging the attention and bidding high for the admiration of all the people of the whole land.

Boasting a soil and climate unrivaled, the northern hills and mountains and the southern mountains seamed with minerals and by beautiful valleys down which thousands of streams rush towards the ocean, it has planned only further development, and its future, if all these things would prevail, in power enough to drive the machinery of the nation.

In the middle and southern portion vast stretches of fertile fields invite the attention of the farmer and promise abundant harvests for the people of the whole land.

This is the state for which you, gentlemen of the house and senate, have been selected to make laws for the next two following two years, to aid in its progress and legislate for the happiness and welfare of its teeming population.

I say, it is a great honor to be governor of a state like this. Men of national fame; of national prominence; men fitted to wear the robes of the highest offices in the land, around whose names an undying luster will always linger and whose deeds are the proud heritage of a nation, have occupied this chair.

Passages of Laws.

The making of laws, gentlemen, is no light matter. Law is the expression of the people's will through constitutional forms. The most insignificant statute becomes a solemn act when it has passed through the hands of the legislature, been approved by the executive and entered upon the everlasting records of the state.

From long observation and experience, I have reached the conclusion that the best laws are those which are most carefully considered, most fully discussed and then deliberately enacted. The crude and hasty legislation sometimes put upon the state in the rush of the last days of the session return to mock us at times and frequently bear a harvest of evil instead of good to the people.

It would be well if every statute, though carefully prepared by a committee, could be fully discussed in the two houses, in order that its enactment may carry with it the indorsement of the body and become in that way the deliberate conclusion of the general assembly reached after full examination and consideration of the facts involved.

I most earnestly recommend to you, gentlemen of the two houses, this suggestion: Let the legislature fully understand in each case what is being done and the dangers to the commonwealth will be lessened appreciably while the welfare of the people will be most certainly subserved.

The War in Europe.

Called to preside over the affairs of this state at a time when the world is at war, these are no ordinary beginnings under the situation.

War is demoralising, not only to the countries directly engaged, but to all others within the sphere of their influence. The people of the world are so closely knit together in these days of steam and electricity that it is impossible for any nation to engage in strife, even an international, without seriously affecting other nations. It is much easier to destroy than to build. The world is at peace than it is when a state of war exists. As the demoralization continues more difficulty and unquieting greater are the duties upon the part of those concerned with the execution of the laws and the courts to the end that peace for the law-abiding.

Our people have felt the effects of the European war in the vast business depression which followed the startling news of the announcement of hostilities. These effects came home to the south with unexampled force and persistency when the entire staple and our staple commodity was curtailed and decline of the price followed in rapid succession. The farmers who had invested heavily in the cotton crop, trusting to the usual demand, and prepared to make a crop materially unprepared to stand the heavy decline in price consequent upon the disorder of the market. Many of them have suffered, many will suffer, before the end is reached.

Almost every interest was involved. This condition during the first months of the war was a prophecy of approaching evil. It was feared that our home country would soon become involved in the conflict and that then the war would last nor how widespread. Would be our financial condition. Panics were sad forebodings on every hand. The banks became fearful of the situation and for a while stopped all accommodations, almost to the paralysis of business and property situations suffered accordingly.

While this condition of affairs is much improved, in the present crisis the state country has not entirely recovered from the first results. The imminence of events has not passed and a great change in our business affairs." The war was so unexpected that men's minds were not prepared for the

An Outside Viewpoint.

The New Orleans item, of recent date, carries an interview with Mrs. E. J. Graham, president of the city federation of New Orleans, giving her viewpoint of Atlanta cub women, as follows:

"The club women are most cordial, and I have some warm friends among them. It is about closing time for most organizations, but there is still a little flutter, due to last meetings of season. The Atlanta Equal Suffrage association holds a weekly meeting in Hotel Ansley, to which prominent men and women bring any message they may have regulating the relation of civic or legislative affairs to the woman question, just as we have done with our suffrage meetings.

"There are three local associations and the heads of three national associations are located there. It was my pleasure to be asked to address each of the organizations. I had a number of courtesies extended me and have visited at the Atlanta Registered Nurses' club, and was given an opportunity to see the newly opened Georgia Hydnes-ton Trail Training School for Girls, all of whose inmates are committed through the juvenile court. I attended the session of the juvenile court and found Judge Tyndal a most sympathetic, sympathetic man, gentle and firm and with that comprehension that only comes from an unassumed interest in the human family.

"I hope to bring renewed enthusiasm to our next year's work, both our suffrage work and our club and federation work. The Daughters of the American Revolution are very active there. Mrs. Joseph Habersham of Savannah is working to build a chapter house. One feature enjoyed is that of motion picture plays, at $1 a ticket. I was a guest of Mrs. Heimer, president of Woman's Study club, to view the play in the spacious grounds of a member: it was a veritable forest of Arden."

Y. W. C. A. Program.

The Atlanta Y. W. C. A. will be represented at the summer conference at Black Mountain, N. C.

Experts in all lines of social service work will give lectures of civic or legislative affairs to the woman question, just as we have done with our suffrage meetings.

The Doctor's Advice

by Dr. Lewis Baker

The questions answered below are general in character, the symptoms or diseases are given and the answers will apply in any case of similar nature.

Those wishing further advice, free may address Dr. Lewis Baker, College Bldg., College-Ellwood Sta., Dayton, Ohio, enclosing self-addressed stamped envelope for reply. Full name and address must be given, but only initials or fictitious name will be used in my answers. The prescriptions can be filled at any well-stocked drug store. Any druggist can order of wholesale.

"Frank" writes: "Please prescribe for me. A friend of mine told me to write you and you would help me, as you had helped him. I have fever and constant headaches, dizziness, my eyes are yellow and dull. I urinate often, but very little at a time, and it is of an offensive odor. I can't sleep good any more and have pains in small of my back."

Answer: Your trouble is with your kidneys. You need something to liven them up and a tonic to make them strong. You will find just what you require in balmwort tablets. I always recommend them for diseased kidneys and they seldom fail to give excellent results. They come in tubes, ready to use.

"Friend" asks: "What can I take to clean my blood and make it pure? I am constipated and my complexion is bad."

Answer: Your system requires a good blood purifier and laxative. I have always recommended three-grain sulphera tablets (not sulphur), they are laxative and digestion and purify and tone the blood. Get your digestion and blood right and you'll have the basis of good health right there.

"Barber" asks: "Please tell me if there is anything I may use to rid the scalp of dandruff, stop falling hair, itching scalp and promote a natural gloss and color to the hair?"

Answer: The best hair tonic I know of and one I have recommended in my practice several years to stop dandruff, itching scalp and promote hair growth, can be found in the use of plain yellow minyol. Thousands have used it with great success.

* * *

"Too Large" writes: "I am much too large. I weigh nearly 185 pounds and would like to reduce about 30 pounds."

Answer: Five-grain arbolone tablets are the most reliable, harmless flesh reducers I have ever used in my practice. They have given satisfaction in scores of my patients.

* * *

"Offlee" writes: "If I don't soon get something to make me strong, build me up and give me a new lease on life and ambition I'll not be able to continue my work. I'm overtired, feel weary, and my work and play are irksome. I'm nervous and have a kind of drawing pain at the base of my brain. I am restless and unrefreshed after a night's sleep."

Answer: Your condition appears to be due to overwork, worry, excesses, dissipation or some other such cause. You need a powerful, stimulating tonic and builder. Your system is run down and wants new vigor and nerve-force. Three-grain cadomene tablets are just what you require to give the proper vim, spring and life to your entire system and make your mind clear and active.

* * *

"Slender" writes: "I'm so slender my clothes 'just hang on.' I should weigh, for my height, 25 pounds more."

Answer: To become stout and have a well-rounded figure I recommend the use of three-grain hypo-nucrane tablets. They are the most wonderful flesh producers I could suggest. You may increase your weight until you have gained the right proportions and then discontinue their use.—(adv.)

Russia Prohibits the Exportation of Flax

We are not alarmists, nor are we sensational advertisers. Our way is to tell a plain, unvarnished tale. When we have something to say to our customers we come to the point at once.

Briefly, we are dependent on Great Britain for articles manufactured of flax. Russia grows three-quarters of all the flax produced. How easy to see the reason why linens are jumping to sky-high prices.

FIRST ATTACK MADE ON U. S. INCOME TAX

Constitutionality of Levy Will Be Tested in the Supreme Court.

Washington, June 26.—Papers were filed here today in the first attack in the supreme court on the constitutionality of the federal income tax, which promises to be the most important case before the court in next term. Counsel for John F. & Horace E. Dodge, of Detroit, filed a brief of argument attacking the surtax on income of individuals.

Three main reasons were assigned for claiming the surtax provision of the law is invalid. Stockholders in corporations, it is asserted, when computing their surtaxes, are subjected to liability for the tax on the profits of the corporations which have not been divided or distributed.

"To tax a stockholder on prospective dividends which he may never receive can only be properly characterized as so utterly absurd as to induce levity," the brief declares.

"It is charged also that the provision vests in the secretary of the treasury an arbitrary power of determining, without a hearing, whether any corporation has accumulated a greater surplus than is reasonable for the needs of the business."

A third reason is that the provision permits corporations to accumulate and withhold from surtax such part of their profits as may be reasonably necessary for the needs and purposes of the business and does not record such business privilege to individuals and partnerships. It is urged that corporations are thus favored by a "most invidious discrimination."

The brief urges that the sixteenth amendment to the constitution did not obliterate entirely the provisions of the constitution against property. It is contended that congress can make no distinctions as to the source of income.

If congress has such power some very "popular discriminations" are within its reach, the brief asserts.

"It would be very popular in some quarters," it says, "to levy a higher rate on incomes derived from the manufacture of liquors. Another popular discrimination would be to increase the rate on income from oil and other mineral exploration concerns. And just before each congressional or presidential election the demand for a lower rate on incomes derived from agricultural pursuits would be irresistible."

The brief was begun to prevent the collector of internal revenue at Detroit from collecting a surtax on each of the Dodges of approximately $45,000 for the year 1913. The Michigan federal district court held the tax valid.

WHEN YOU DROOP IN THE MORNING

It Means an Afternoon Headache and an Evening of Misery.

There is no necessity for it. The morning droop means the afternoon headache, the evening of misery. It means inefficiency in office or in the store—that you are worth less to yourself or your employer.

You know what causes that droop. If you don't, you ought to. It is injudicious eating or drinking or both; or it may come from irregularity of habit or the lack of exercise. Any one of these may cause constipation and create toxic poisons which attack and injure the vital organs.

Stop it now. You can do it and prevent it in future. When you get up in the morning take Jacobs' Liver Salt.

Just a small dose of it—one to two teaspoonfuls—in a generous glass of water. You will find it a bubbling, sparkling, pleasant drink, and you can go to work with a quick step and a keen, active mind; whereas,

If you take calomel, it will take you a day to get over it. There is a day lost in addition to the undermining effect of this dangerous and powerful drug which soon must have serious and deleterious effect upon the system.

Jacobs' Liver Salt will do what most needs to be done, and in the most gentle and delightful way— no pain or griping. 25c, at Jacobs' and druggists generally. (ADVT.)

GREAT CROWD SEES HARRIS SWORN IN

crowded to its utmost standing room capacity and hundreds crowded about the doors of the gallery and the house in an effort to catch a glimpse of the proceedings or hear an occasional word.

Upon the rostrum were Senator Persons, presiding officer; Governor-elect Harris, Retiring Governor Slaton, Representative W. H. Burwell, speaker of the house; Chief Justice William H. Fish, of the Georgia supreme court; Secretary of State Phil Cook; John T. Boifeuillet, clerk of the house; D. F. McClatchey, secretary of the senate; Bishop Warren A. Candler, chancellor of Emory university; Dr. John E. White, pastor of the Second Baptist church, of Atlanta, and Hoke Smith, pastor of Mulberry street church, of which Governor Harris is a member; Senator Hoke Smith, Mrs. Harris, wife of a member of the federal board of trade, and Dr. K. G. Matheson, president of the Georgia School of Technology.

Among the visitors who had special seats were ex-Governors Joe Brown, Henry D. McDaniel and Hoke Smith.

President Persons rapped for order and introduced Bishop Candler, who pronounced an invocation, a fervid, divine guidance of the destinies of the state and its new chief executive.

After the invocation, President Persons introduced Governor-elect Nat Harris, of Macon. Governor Harris bowed his recognition amid a tremendous outburst of applause.

During his campaign Governor Harris had stated that he intended to take his oath of office with his hand on the Bible and to live by his oath in accordance with all the sacredness that this book with such associations implies. The book which he held in his hand as Chief Justice Fish administered the oath was his mother's Bible.

Secretary Appointed.

The next ceremony of inauguration was the transfer of the great seal of state from Governor Slaton to the governor elect, and when that was done the hissing in the gallery occurred.

The ceremony consisted of the secretary of state presenting the seal to Governor Slaton, who handed it over to Governor Harris, who, in turn, entrusted it to the secretary of state for his care.

Governor Slaton arose.

Immediately there was an outburst of hissing in the gallery.

Threatens to Clear Gallery.

President Persons rapped loudly for order. The hissing continued. Bringing his gavel down with force, President Persons spoke in an emphatic voice.

"Let there be silence and order in the gallery. We are assembled in the hall of the representatives of the people of this state, and in the presence of the law-making body, and I am going to see that the law is respected here."

This statement was followed by a tremendous outburst of applause from the members of the house and senate and visitors.

There was no more disturbance in the gallery and the inaugural ceremonies proceeded without incident.

Governor Slaton spoke with clearness and steadiness as he recited the great seal from Secretary Cook and transferred it to the new governor. Governor Harris in turn entrusted the seal once more to the keeping of Secretary Cook.

Governor Harris was then introduced for his inaugural address. When he arose he was again greeted with enthusiastic cheers, and throughout his address he was repeatedly applauded. As the applause died away the booming of a twenty-one-gun salute by the Atlanta artillery was heard. Dr. John E. White pronounced the benediction.

When the joint session of the assembly had been adjourned and the house was once more in session, visitors were ordered to leave the gallery and the floor of the house and the aisles were ordered cleared so that the members of the senate and the party of the new governor and retiring governor might pass out without disorder.

Big Pinkerton Squad.

Governor Harris, with ex-Governor Slaton, who was surrounded by the heavy guard of plainclothes officers and deputies at the state house, made his way through the inaugural ceremonies, fixed up the list of his representatives and went to the private office of the governor on the first floor.

For practically half an hour the governor and the retiring governor were closeted in the governor's private office, both the entrance from the governor's reception room and the entrance to the office from the corridor of the capitol being guarded by friends and officers.

Meanwhile a thousand or more people, some of whom had attended the inaugural ceremonies waited upon the capitol lawn in front of the main entrance.

A few minutes before 2 o'clock a cordon of uniformed police was formed along each side of the wide walkway leading from the capitol entrance to the street, where the automobiles were awaiting, and the walkway was cleared of people. Mounted police cleared a passage in front of the automobiles, a detachment of militia was in the street.

At 2 o'clock ex-Governor Slaton, accompanied by Governor Harris and a number of friends, surrounded by a guard of a dozen officers in civilian clothes, emerged from the governor's private office into the main corridor and walked slowly down the capitol steps.

Hisses Break Out Again.

The appearance of ex-Governor Slaton upon the steps was the signal for an immediate outburst of hisses and calls.

Amid this outburst, Governor Slaton walked with measured step to one of the two waiting machines. There he was joined by Speaker Burwell, of the house, and several friends.

Ex-Governor Slaton and Governor Harris entered the second car. Mr. Burwell and several others got into the first car.

The cars moved slowly off toward Mitchell street. A squadron of mounted police wheeled into position behind the cars. At Mitchell street the automobiles turned westward down Mitchell. The mounted police drew their horses across the street at the corner and formed a cordon, holding back the following crowd.

There was at no time any offer of violence.

As ex-Governor Slaton's car left the curb a man dashed up and attempted to climb upon the runningboard. He shook his finger in Governor Slaton's face and shouted epithets.

He was quickly seized by a militiaman and a policeman and shoved back into the crowd.

Governor Slaton's car and its companion proceeded down Mitchell street to the Terminal station, followed by mounted police.

Crowd Follows Cars.

Several hundred people followed on foot down the several streets leading to the Terminal station.

Instead of leaving the automobile at the Terminal station, as the followers had expected, Governor Slaton remained in the machine and the car was speeded up and disappeared across the Mitchell street viaduct, leaving the crowd behind. The mounted police remained in front of the Terminal station, and an additional force of reserves, commanded by Chief Beavers, arrived shortly in an automobile, in anticipation of any trouble that might occur, many of those who followed the ex-governor's car having entered the station, expecting ex-Governor Slaton would there catch a train.

The two automobiles made a detour and returned to the Ansley hotel, where Governor Harris and ex-Governor Slaton attended a luncheon given in honor of Governor Harris by the Macon Rotary club.

CLAMOR OF THE MOB DISCOUNTED BY SLATON

Governor Must Walk Alone.

"There are three branches of the government—judicial, legislative and executive. In the two former many share the burdens and responsibilities, but in the executive the governor must walk his path alone, guided only by his oath of office and his earnest convictions of right sustained only by his God and his conscience. He must be willing to make any sacrifice necessary to perform his duty as he sees it."

Senator Smith, in a brief talk, condemned the act of Great Britain in issuing an order to prevent the shipment of cotton from this country to other neutral countries.

Postmaster Jones introduced Governor Harris as "The first citizen of Georgia in the land—a worthy successor to that distinguished soldier and peerless orator, John B. Gordon."

Governor Harris spoke briefly and in a most pleasing manner declared he was proud of his membership in the Macon Rotary club and appreciated their kindly interest. He told of his love for Macon and her people and his unfailing loyalty to them.

George Long confined his remarks to Mr. Macon's Mount Zion Band, which created such a furore on the streets from the time they arrived until they departed last night. Mr. Long said that the corps was a civic organization that has put their time and talents to the service of boosting Macon and without any remuneration whatever.

Drum Corps Makes Hit.

Had no other organizations had representatives here, all Atlanta would have known that Macon was on the map Saturday if the drum and bugle corps had come alone, for about seventy strong and attired in white uniforms, they paraded the streets playing martial airs and striking up a melody from time to time.

While many of the Rotarians and others returned to Macon on a special train, leaving at 5 o'clock, the drum corps remained until midnight and paraded the streets and hotels, attracting considerable attention and proving one of the most conspicuous features of the day.

Among the Rotarians at the noon luncheon were John J. McKay, Clay Murphy, George H. Long, W. H. C. Johnson, Fred Guttenberger, Colonel Sam Hay, Lamar Williams, Dr. Frank F. Jones, J. Freeman Hart, Charles F. Stroberg, G. H. Scott, Captain Ed Smith, W. W. White, P. E. Rousch, Charles Lee and C. M. Grier.

Others at the luncheon were Major W. Polhill Wheeler, commanding the second regiment of the national guard, who attended the inauguration; Major J. G. Seamans, Captain Arthur McCollum, Campbell Wallace, Major John L. Grice, Mrs. F. M. Cochran and Fritz Jones, of Macon, secretary to Governor Harris.

NEUTRALITY VIOLATION CHARGED TO SERBIANS

Chicago, June 26.—Twenty-three reservists of the Serbian army alleged to be United States citizens either native born or naturalized, were held by federal officers here today to answer charges of violating the nation's neutrality.

The reservists were taken into custody by fifteen United States deputy marshals as they were leaving, with about 400 of their countrymen, for London, Ont., last night. Their arrest was effected soon after the mob had brought a score of police reserves to the assistance of the federal officers. When the train was stopped and federal agents boarded it the reservists began shrieking in their native tongue that German spies had attacked them. They scambled out of the coaches and fought off the federal officers. Police were obliged to swing their clubs in the crowd made the Serbians before order was restored.

THERE ARE NO NEUTRALS IN QUESTION OF RIGHT

M. Deschanel, in making a speech, paid a high tribute to the great love of justice and right which the American nation possessed and concluded with a toast to the presidents of the French republic and the United States and the king of England.

The American ambassador, William Graves Sharp, and Admiralty Lord Beresford, president of the Anglo-American Press association, responded to toasts of the foreign office; Emile Laurent, the prefect of police, and others made addresses.

NO MORE CUBE ROOT IN SOUTH BEND SCHOOLS

South Bend, Ind., June 26.—School children of this city no more will have to ponder over problems of greatest common denominator, troy weight and the like if the recommendations of a committee of eight public school principals are accepted. This committee, which reported to Superintendent of Schools L. J. Montgomery yesterday declared that this study is a waste of time and offers as substitutes such practical tests as the following:

Working out of problems in city finances, figuring estimates on city improvements, computation of budget and measuring of the city's area, etc.

The committee also recommended that "stage" money, check books and cash registers be used in the city schools. The report adds that by the elimination of useless work and the substitution of practical problems—the kind the students will meet in everyday life—greater efficiency can be obtained.

LABOR UNIONS URGED TO RALLY TO BRITAIN

London, June 26.—Trade union leaders today issued a manifesto addressed to their fellow trade unionists saying:

"We are faced with a great responsibility and at the same time are presented with a magnificent opportunity. We are called upon to assist in saving our nation and its allies, who are fighting for civilization and international right against barbarism and brute force."

After calling attention to the serious position of the French and Russian armies in the field, in consequence of the shortage of munitions, the manifesto appeals to "every skilled workman of the engineering and allied trades who is not already engaged upon war work, to enroll himself as a volunteer in this hour of need, demonstrate to his comrades in the trenches and in the whole world that British trade unionism stands for all that is best in national life, national freedom and the natural security."

The manifesto is signed by Arthur Henderson, chairman of the labor party and in the house of commons, and other prominent trade unionists.

LESSONS OF THE WAR DISCUSSED BY DANIELS

Secretary Makes Address at Opening of the Naval War College.

Newport, R. I., June 26.—In an address at the opening session of the Naval War college here today Secretary Daniels emphasized the opportunity of American naval officers to profit by the lessons of the European war, and referred briefly to the navy program for the coming year, expressing confidence that congress would authorize any increase recommended.

"In personnel and material the navy is larger than ever before," Mr. Daniels said. "Its men are trained and fit. Its experts in every department are active to remedy any defects of the past and to take advantage of all that has been gleaned in the only true school in which this knowledge may be obtained, by observing through our experts in Europe all that may be learned from actual war.

Old Theories Crumbling.

"As you look abroad, you see the foundation of all old theories crumbling every day. If war upon the land has reverted to the hammer and the hand grenade, war upon the sea has leaped forward at a single stride and broken almost every shackle of ancient convention.

"We have seen the main fleet of the greatest sea nation in the world withdrawn from the seas to some secluded harbor without having fired a shot during the first year of a mighty conflict. We have seen long-range ranges believed to be impossible, and ships disabled by shots from guns not in sight. We have been told that modern sea fights would be determined in the first ten minutes, yet we have seen that it took six hours to decide one of the greatest ocean battles of the present war. We have seen ships of shallow draft used successfully to protect land armies on the Belgian coast.

"We read only yesterday of submarines gliding unchallenged past the implacable forts of Gibraltar, and of the guardian ships that watch the straits. We have seen fast cruisers raiding the coast and eluding their pursuers by the help of dirigibles, hovering far above and warning through the new miracle, wireless telegraphy, the ships beneath.

Wireless Telephone.

"With what weapons, by what strategy, shall we meet the terror of the submarine? What will unreveal the possibilities of the airship? It is to you gentlemen, that this question must be put. It is to you our secretary of the navy looks for an answer. My earnest word, my solemn charge is to urge you fearlessly to discard worship of all things that are old, and to adopt courageously anything that is new the moment that some development of the future convinces you that the old way is no longer the right way, or that the new way points the path to victory. Holding wisely to what is good in the past, to such principles as stand the acid test of this great war, do not fear to cast aside what have proved to be mere shackles of convention and daringly to go forward, hereby pledge myself to spare no effort to assist this onward march. Rest assured that what you plan will find a sympathetic and attentive ear."

SHUT DOWN ORDERED IN BUILDING INDUSTRY

Chicago, June 26.—A general shutdown of Chicago's building industry, which, it was said, will throw out of employment more than 200,000 workers, went into effect today.

The shutdown is regarded by contractors and labor leaders as the beginning of one of the greatest labor wars in recent years. It was decided on at a meeting last night of representatives of the allied building and material interests, as an answer to the referendum vote of 16,000 striking carpenters, who overwhelmingly defeated the proposal to arbitrate.

Several attempts have been on strike since April 30, when their agreement with the Contractors-Employers' association expired. The men had demanded a wage increase from 65 cents to 70 cents an hour.

By the shutdown, the employers, it was said, hoped to prevent the independent workmen from obtaining supplies, and thus throw out of work the 10,000 carpenters who are working under individual agreements.

Business in many parts of the country will suffer as a result of the shutdown here, according to James Pryor, a member of the press committee of the employers. Mr. Pryor said he had telegraphed out-of-town concerns to cancel orders and to countermand shipments already on the way to Chicago.

The shutdown will not become general for a week or more, it is said. In some cases, where it is needed only that stop machinery, it took place today, but in others, where perishable goods are handled, there may be continuance of work for several days.

Herbert Ballou, a carpenter contractor, was stabbed, it is thought fatally, in a dispute early today with a man who contended about the wage demand for 70 cents an hour was justified.

ARGUMENT CONCLUDED IN RATE ADVANCE CASE

Washington, June 26.—Argument was concluded before the interstate commerce commission today in the far western advance rates case, after a five way discussion by attorneys for interested railroads and shippers touching the reasonableness of the proposed advances in western territory.

The case was submitted to the commission. Its importance was said to be such that a board for the instance here that it would be decided during the summer.

Chairman McChord, of the commission, announced at the conclusion of argument that hearings scheduled for Chicago next month on proposed increases in the same territory on commodities other than those on which argument here has been made, will be cancelled by the commission since the carriers have agreed to suspend these proposed advances until September.

WILSON PARTY LOST ON AUTOMOBILE TRIP

President Had to Call to Natives Along Roadside to Learn the Way.

Windsor, Vt., June 26.—While President Wilson was taking a long automobile ride with members of his family today three negro employees of his private car were busy putting out a fire which caused intense excitement in this small New England town. The president, an honorary member of the Gulfport, Miss., fire department, expressed pleasure when he heard of the men's work.

Eugene Batcher, known to many public men as the head porter of private cars which have carried several presidents, was with D. Green, the cook, and B. Johnson, the assistant porter on the private car "New York" on a siding here, when they noticed smoke coming from the roof of a frame house nearby. They dropped their work and ran toward the fire.

Found Fire With Hands.

The negroes found that flames from a stove on the second floor had ignited some rubbish, and that a woman was vainly trying to smother the fire. Without waiting for help they set to work to extinguish the flames with their hands. A few minutes later the entire Windsor fire department, dragging their apparatus, appeared. The fire was quickly extinguished and Batcher, Green and Johnson received the thanks of the citizens.

Mr. Wilson's private car is being kept here constantly in case a crisis in the foreign situation arises and the president should be called hurriedly to Washington. At present he has no expectation of returning before July 4.

With members of his family the president spent a quiet and uneventful day and night. He remained at the "summer white house," working on some correspondence this morning and late this afternoon went automobiling through the Connecticut valley to Hanover, N. H., and White River Junction, Vt. He was accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. Francis B. Sayre, Miss Margaret Wilson and Dr. Cary T. Grayson.

Party Lost Several Times.

During the ride, the president and his party became lost several times and Mr. Wilson personally called to three natives along the roadside and inquired the best route. On one instance did the men show any sign of recognizing him.

The president received word from Washington that everything was "quiet" there and letters from friends expressing the wish that he might enjoy his vacation.

Tomorrow the president plans to attend church with members of his family and after an automobile ride in the afternoon, and next week he will begin to play golf.

STOP CALOMEL! TAKE DODSON'S LIVER TONE

New Discovery! Takes Place of Dangerous Calomel—It Puts Your Liver To Work Without Making You Sick—Eat Anything It Can Not Salivate—Don't Lose a Day's Work!

I discovered a vegetable compound that does the work of dangerous, sickening calomel and I want every reader of this paper to try a bottle and if it doesn't straighten you up better and quicker than salivating calomel just go back to the store and get your money.

I guarantee that one spoonful of Dodson's Liver Tone will put your sluggish liver to work and clean your thirty feet of bowels of the sour bile and constipation poison which is clogging your system and making you feel miserable.

I guarantee that one spoonful of this harmless liquid liver medicine will relieve the headache, biliousness, coated tongue, ague, malaria, sour stomach or any other distress caused by a torpid liver as quickly as a dose of vile, nauseating calomel; besides, it will not make you sick or keep you from a day's work. I want to see a bottle of this wonderful liver medicine in every home in the South.

Calomel is poison—it's mercury—it attacks the bones, often causing rheumatism. Calomel is dangerous. It sickens—while my Dodson's Liver Tone is safe, pleasant and harmless. Eat anything afterwards, because it cannot salivate. Give it to the children because it doesn't upset the stomach or shock the liver. Take a spoonful tonight and wake up feeling fine and ready for a full day's work.

Get a bottle! Try it! If it doesn't do exactly what I say, tell your dealer to hand your money back. Every druggist and store keeper in the South knows me and knows of my wonderful discovery of a medicine that takes the place of dangerous calomel.

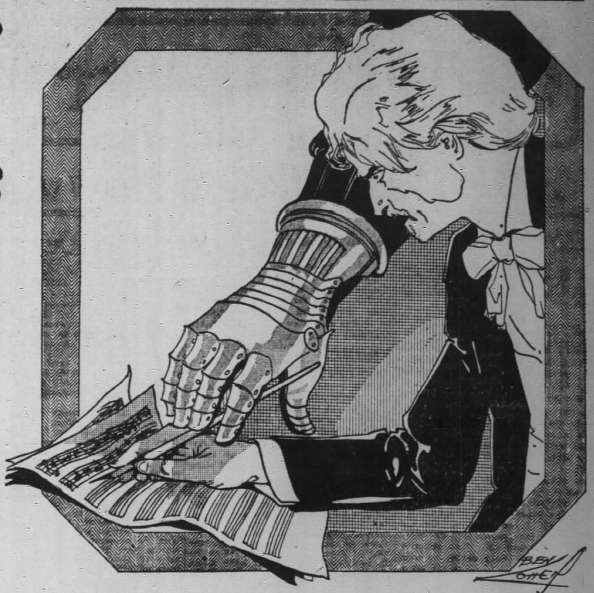
PADEREWSKI'S UNFINISHED MASTERPIECE

Mailed Fist of War Cut Short Composition That This World's Genius Believed Would Be His Greatest Work—But War, He Says, Will Eventually Prove a Boon to Art by Simplifying It and Giving It a New Virility



WHEN the last gun is fired in the great conflict of nations now raging in Europe art will be born anew—but not the elaborate art to which we have been accustomed. The effect will be the same as on human life—a tendency toward simplification.

This is the opinion of Ignace Jan Paderewski, the noted pianist, whose visit to America in the interest of devastated Poland indicates that love of country rivals music in the heart of this genius. Paderewski, grieving over the unhappy fate of his land, has not played the piano since the beginning of hostilities, devoting all of his time toward raising funds with which to assist the millions of families that are helpless, hungry and sick.

"All of us, even the poorest, indulged in some luxuries during the days of peace," said Paderewski. "The first accomplishment of the gigantic struggle was to simplify our mode of living. Those who had horses found them commandeered. Automobiles and carriages, too, were requisitioned. The net result was to make people partake of more exercise, especially that of walking, and to eat more wholesome food—in fact, to lead a simple and sane life.

"As art is, after all, the reflection of human life, so will it be simplified. Artists will try to find more accessible forms of expression. I presume it will be a benefit for art itself, which in every one of its branches tended toward excess and exaggeration to the detriment of real thought."

Cancels Engagements to Work for Poland.

Paderewski was in England when he learned that the war presaging general hostilities had been declared. He immediately canceled all engagements and returned to his chalet in Switzerland, where he formulated plans to aid unhappy Poland.

While in England Paderewski had begun the composition of what he believed would be his masterpiece. From the start of his career it had been his ambition to compose music rather than to play it. Well-known musicians will tell you that some of his interpretations of the masters, especially in his earlier years, were marvelous improvisations, for the magic of his talent supplied what at the start his knowledge lacked.

Paderewski has not supplied a single note to his composition since the war began. "How can I?" he asked, tears filling his eyes. He wasn't ashamed to cry. When you know that in times other than these Paderewski often played seventeen hours a day, a muscular task which the world's strongest men would not care to essay; that he frequently indulged in the strenuous exercise of swimming; that he personally superintended his estate and was even a breeder of horses, you are compelled to readjust the thought that this great artist is effeminate.

Vast Area Is Laid Waste.

"How can I?" he repeated, "when my Poland is in misery? War is raging over her soil, sweeping away every sign of civilization, destroying dwellings, devastating fields, gardens and forests, starving and exterminating human beings and animals alike. An area equal in size to the states of New York and Pennsylvania has been laid waste. Two hundred towns, fourteen hundred churches, seven thousand five hundred villages have been completely ruined.

"A total of eighteen million inhabitants, including nearly two million Jews, are continually enduring the horrors of this gigantic struggle. Only very few could flee to the places which are still holding their own against the aggressors; the great majority, almost eleven millions of helpless women and children, homeless peasants, unemployed workmen, the very essence and strength of a nation, have been driven out into the open. Thousands and thousands are hiding among ruins, in woods or in hollows, feeding on roots and on the bark of trees.

"And you ask me why I do not compose! Why I do not play in concert! Can one with true patriotism, true love of country, set his mind on aught else than the heartrending cries of his people, 'Some bread for Polish women and children! Some seed for the Polish farmers!'"

A glance went, instinctively, to his hands. They were as long, as thin, as white, as delicately shaped as ever.

"Ah, but they are stiff," said Paderewski, divining the meaning of the glance. "And my wrists—they, too, are no longer wrists of steel."

Yearns to Return to Own Work.

He said it pitifully, as if he yearned to return to the strenuous life of concert work which Henry T. Fink described so well in the following extract from an article he wrote several years ago:

"Genius involves hard work, in a pianist as in a poet. Ease and finish are the rewards of years of toil. When we know how persistently Paderewski works to perfect his playing we hardly wonder that he shirks the duty of writing letters. His triumphs were not too easily won; he had to practice and study many years to earn them. To this day he will practice ten to twelve hours or more a day when preparing for a concert tour, to keep his fingers supple and his memory reliable. But the secret of his success lies in this, that he practices not merely with his fingers but with the brain too. He once told me that he often lies awake for hours at night, going over his next program mentally, note after note, trying to get at the very essence of every bar.

"This mental practice at night explains the perfection of his art, but it is not good for his health. Indeed, if he ever sins it is against himself and the laws of health. He smokes too many cigarets, drinks too much lemonade, loses too much sleep, or sleeps too much in the daytime. For this last habit he is, however, not entirely to blame; for whenever he gives a concert all his faculties are so completely engaged that he is quite exhausted at the end, and unable to go to sleep for hours. His favorite antidote to this artistic insomnia is a game of billiards. Of this game he is passionately fond, and he regards it as a sort of tonic, for, he says, 'If I walk or ride or merely rest I go to thinking all the time, and my nerves get no real rest. But when I play billiards I can forget everything, and the result is mental rest and physical rest combined.'"

This Striking Portrait of Paderewski, Taken a Few Weeks Ago, Has Been Pronounced by His Wife to Be the Best Likeness of the Polish Pianist Ever Made. Copies of It Are Now Being Sold to Swell the Fund to Relieve His Suffering Countrymen.

[Copyright, Chicago Herald, 1915.]

And to return to this life is Paderewski's wish, but grief forbids.

Were Paderewski's emotions and sentiments less delicately tuned; if he could woo back the perfect contentment of mind which he says is necessary to musical genius, he could aid his country materially by concert work. Following are a few figures covering fourteen consecutive concerts on his second tour of America:

Binghamton, $1,500; New York, $5,060; Boston, $2,364; New Haven, $1,926; New York, $5,069; Rochester, $1,862; Albany, $1,350; Hartford, $1,915; Boston, $2,995; New York, $5,524; Buffalo, $2,050; Philadelphia, $5,824; Brooklyn, $3,162; Boston, $3,999; total, $43,390, or an average of $3,113.

What Concerts Really Pay.

The total number of concerts given during this second tour in twenty-six American cities was sixty-seven, and the receipts amounted to $180,000—a sum never before equaled by an instrumental performer. Of this amount about $150,000 was net.

"But it is impossible for me to play until the war is over—rather until my Poland rises from the ashes of her unhappy fate," said the master pianist recently. He rose to prepare for an address to Polish sympathizers in behalf of the General Polish Relief Committee. Paderewski's gift of oratory is second only to his genius as a musician, as shown in the following extract from speech he made:

"We are in sore need of strengthening, of reinspiration. Blow after blow has fallen upon our stricken race, thunderbolt after thunderbolt; our whole shattered country quivers, not with fear, but with dismay. New forms of life which had to come, which were bound to come, have waked among us on a night of dreadful dreams. The same wind that blew to us a handful of healthy grain has overwhelmed us in a cloud of chaff and siftings; the clear flame kindled by hope of universal justice has reached us fouled by dark and blackening smoke; the light breath of freedom has been borne toward us on choking, deadly waves of poisoned air.

"Our hearts are disarrayed, our minds distorted. We are being taught respect for all that is another's, contempt for all that is our own. We are bidden to love all men, even fratricides, and yet hate our own fathers and brothers should they think otherwise, albeit no less warmly, than ourselves. Our new teachers are stripping us of the last shred of racial instinct, yielding the past in prey to an indefinite future, thrusting the heritage of generations into the clutches of the chaotic ogre whose monstrous form may loom at any minute above the abyss of time.

"The immemorial sanctuary of our race, proof until now against the stoutest foe, is being assailed by brothers who batter at the wall, meaning to use our scattered stones for the building of new structures—as if these poverty-stricken architects were unable to afford material of their own. The white-winged, undefiled, most holy symbol of our nation is being attacked by croaking rooks and ravens; strange, ill-omened birds of night circle around her, screeching; even her own demented eaglets defy her."

Paderewski Not a Young Man.

Paderewski is no longer young—he was born in 1860—and he spends the greater part of the day in conference with the leaders of branch relief societies. Yet no weariness shows in his dignified figure or in his eyes, and he talks with animation. This animation is particularly noticeable when Poland is the subject of conversation. On music, painting, America—on most subjects he talks with interest, but with no great eagerness. But when the wrongs of Poland are mentioned he rises from his chair and speaks with fiery passion.

His masterpiece?

"It shall not be born for the time being," says Paderewski. But when it is given to the world who doubts but that it will express yearning maidenhood, grave manhood, tragic and sad old age, light-hearted, joyful youth, love's enfolding softness, action's rigor, valiant and chivalrous strength—all of Poland, for whose tragic fate Paderewski grieves, and which is dearer to his heart than music itself?

Grief Over War Stays Hand of Polish Genius

HOW can I compose when my Poland is in misery? War is raging over her soil, sweeping away every sign of civilization, destroying dwellings, devastating fields, gardens and forests, starving and exterminating human beings and animals alike. Only very few could flee to the places which are still holding their own against the aggressors; the great majority, almost eleven millions of helpless women and children, homeless peasants, unemployed workmen, the very essence and strength of a nation, have been driven out into the open. Thousands and thousands are living among ruins, in woods, or in hollows, feeding on roots and on the bark of trees. And you ask me why I do not compose! Why I do not play in concert! Can one with true patriotism, true love of country, set his mind on aught else than the heartrending cries of his people, "Some bread for Polish women and children! Some seed for Polish farmers!"

Is Love a Disease? If So, What Is the Cure?

IS LOVE a disease?

Nearly three hundred theories, the majority of them scientific, exist as to the nature of love. Most are physiological theories. It remained for William Brown, M. A., D. Sc., of King's College, London, to show that the mental phenomena involved—the ideas, thoughts and feelings of lovers—can be to some extent explained by mental causes.

Says Professor Brown:

"Whatever may be the theory adopted to explain how it comes about that the ideas and emotions of two people become centered each about the idea of the other, we are still left with the striking resemblances which love presents to certain forms of mental disease. Besides the 'fixed idea' there is the period of 'incubation,' during which the individual does not know what is the matter with him, but feels restless, depressed and 'out of sorts.' There is feebleness of will power, which may, in a few cases, even persist after love has become manifest. Again, there is often a complete change of temperament and character.

"Once more: Some natures seem to be more susceptible to the love fever than others, and would appear to be possessed of a special mental 'diathesis' or disposition, resembling the physical diathesis—the tendency to cancer, scrofula and so forth—so well known to the physician. And the greater proneness to the affliction when in ill health, mental or physical, brings it also into line with physical disease. There are, however, exceptions.

"Again, a love affair of a certain type makes the individual, in many cases, partly or entirely immune to one of a similar nature for the future. Whether it is possible to be in love with more than one person at the same time is a difficult question, but we are, perhaps, a little too ready to answer it in the negative.

"No one will deny that extreme cases abound which are obviously diseased, but these shade off to the so-called normal cases by imperceptible degrees, and the dividing line is not easy to draw. How are we to regard the numerous love tragedies of history? What are we to say of the love murders and suicides which we read about in the newspapers? Can we honestly convince ourselves—those of us who are not entirely inexperienced in the matter—that these cases belong to a class by themselves, and have no closer relation to ordinary love than, say, a cancerous liver to a normal one? Perhaps if a larger proportion of people were insusceptible to the passion—that some such people exist cannot be doubted—we should be more ready to class it among our diseases.

"If disease it is, we must look for its cause in the subconscious, and therefore the ordinary healing method of 'suggestion,' in which the patient's interest is turned in some other direction, is in most cases useless unless helped out by some means of getting down to the subconscious life of the individual. Such means are afforded us by the method of 'psycho-analysis' invented by Professor Freund of Vienna and employed by him and his disciples."

The principle of this method is similar to that of cross-examination as employed in a court of law, except that single words instead of questions are used as the bait. The physician learns of the cause of the disease simultaneously with the patient, and is then able to help the matter by thoroughly "talking the thing out" with him. It has been used with remarkable success, say scientists, in certain forms of mental disease.

"The case of love is very similar," adds Professor Brown. "Love is a disturbance in which the subconscious is largely involved, hence its seeming mysteriousness and irrationality. Not all love affairs need to be cured, but in cases where this is desirable the method of psycho-analysis enables the reason and will power of the lover to be directed upon the irrational emotional tendencies that have gained a footing in his subconsciousness, so that they are seen in their true light and combated accordingly.

"Let us imagine the instance of a pair of lovers where, owing to some internal reasons, jealousy, for instance, love is not flowing smoothly. If these two people be tested separately and independently with the same list of words much information can be obtained as to the nature of their subconscious selves, and also of the more hidden parts of their explicit consciousness.

"Cases of 'hopeless love' could be treated in a similar way, so that indirectly the method might even prove to be a new and efficacious way of curing some cases of consumption, or at least directing the physician's attention to the mental factor which is not infrequently present in these instances. The actual curative treatment, so far as it is mental, would in every case take the form of 'suggestion' and the talking of the matter out with the patient; the psychologist would prescribe measures for directing the flow of the patient's ideas and emotional tendencies into other channels."

Tragedy of Child Life Is Lack of Education

No person unless actively engaged in teaching or in directing the common schools of Georgia can possibly know the hopelessness of educating the children of the illiterate whites of our state, until a compulsory attendance school law has been enacted.

Well-trained teachers, comfortable and attractive schools and grounds cannot change the conditions that exist. The child attends school only as he chooses, or as his parents may see fit to send him.

Teachers will tell you those children who are in greatest need of an education are the very ones who attend only occasionally. Those parents who have been awakened to the benefits of education in the more ignorant communities are few and far between. It is difficult to get hold of them; they resent industrial and all progressive education; they fight local taxation, and the consolidation of schools. They consider the work of the home and of the farm of far greater importance than that of the school.

Irregular attendance makes the child dislike his school work: he falls behind and his lessons become distasteful to him. He loses interest and soon drops out of school for the year, and perhaps forever.

Are not these lost opportunities to gain an education and training for life the real tragedies of thousands—aye, tens of thousands—of children of the Empire State of the South?

Do you ask upon whom rests the responsibility of this greatest of all curses—illiteracy and ignorance—and who is criminally negligent?

We answer, every sane man and woman who has enjoyed the privileges of an education: It is our duty to bestir ourselves—to loosen the fetters that hold tight and fast those who are in ignorance and utter darkness.

We, herewith, send a clarion call to all organized bodies of women throughout the state, and we urge that they shall, for the next four weeks, center their activities upon work for this bill.

Let every member of every club in Georgia get busy and gain the promise of her representative to work for the passage of a compulsory attendance school law, and something will be done before the legislative session of 1915 adjourns.

Do not circulate petitions, but do active, personal work!

Figures are often convincing. As an evidence of the real need of a compulsory school attendance law, we had enrolled on the opening day of our Tallulah school eighty-two children. The average attendance of the last month was only about fifty. When it is hot, or cold, or raining, or for the slightest excuse, the child stays at home.

Children Write Interesting Tallulah School Compositions

Just before the close of school the teacher assigned to the children of the fifth, sixth and seventh grades the topic, "My Past Year at School," as a composition.

Two or three are given below with the idea that they will be interesting to the club women as reflecting somewhat the spirit of the school and at the same time some of them reveal the mental status of the children who are normal in every respect, but who, because of lack of training, have not been able to give expression to their thoughts as well as most children of their age.

My Past Year at School.

Situated on the brow of a hill in the village of Tallulah Falls is the Industrial School of Tallulah. It is on the side of a hill in a little grove of trees.

In the school building there are five rooms, a hall and porch. A circulating library is in the school, also a shop, tools, cooking equipment and desks of the common school branches, shop work, domestic science, drawing and gardening are taught.

There are three teachers and about seventy-five pupils, ten of whom are being educated by the Women's clubs of Georgia.

The cottage in which the teachers and scholarship pupils live is beautiful and has a rough stone foundation. Large columns of stone support the roof of the porch. The outside is of rough planks stained brown. The cottage is set in a large grove and has a quaint rustic appearance which is very charming.

There are eight bedrooms, two halls, two porches, a sitting room, butler's pantry and kitchen.

The boys room upstairs and the girls downstairs.

There is a large fireless cooker in the kitchen. We have just received a victrola and a number of records. We also have a piano and small library in the cottage.

There are five boys and five girls in the dormitory. I think we could have a more congenial family, for we are just like a large family.

A farm is situated on the west top of the hill. An orchard has been put there by the side of the farm. We also have a garden, in which we raise vegetables for the school.

We have one hour each school day for industrial work and four hours on Saturday.

The girls do the cooking and housework, with the help of the boys. Three girls do cooking, one girl each week, while the other girls do the dishes with the help of the boys. Flowers have been planted in boxes around the porches. Window curtains and blue spreads were made by the girls. The boys have made a beautiful drive from the road to the house. We have also made others on the campus and the larger pupils play volley ball.

We hope to have a baseball diamond, a tennis court and basketball some time in the future.

BYRD IVESTER,
Eighth Grade. Age 16.

My Past Year at School.

When I first came up here I had to wash the dishes.

We had grits every day.

Miss Woods had us to work on the rock wall every day.

I had to make fires every week. It certainly was cold, too. We had to build a barn up on the mountain. When we got through we found that they were going to get a cow.

Harry and I worked on some post holes.

We have a George Washington in one school room. The boys and girls play football all recess. We have a good swing also. We have set out an orchard. We have lots of beautiful flowers up here, and have always some in the school room and cottage. The birds wake us up very morning. I think we will have apples in the orchard next spring.

Note—When this boy entered school, two years ago, he could not read. He was an orphan and a boy of 10 who had never had a home, or known a parent's care. This is his first composition.

My Past Year at School.

The cottage is just above the road, and is very pretty with its rock wall and large rock columns and with its live oak and hickory trees that shade the porch. This is a very cool place to sit in the hot summer time. While sitting here just look beyond at the beautiful forest, the stately oaks towering over the laurel and rhododendron. Isn't it a pretty view here?

Now let us look inside the building. First, we will take a look at the sitting room. In one corner stands an old-time piano, in the opposite corner stands the bookcase, with lots of nice books for children and grown-ups. Near the window is the victrola, which is very nice to listen to after the evening tasks are finished. The table stands by the door, with a flower pot of wild blossoms gathered by the boys.

Now we will step across the hall into one of the bedrooms. Here we notice the blue spread made and worked in a pretty design by one of the girls. There are also dresser scarfs and table runners to match.

We will now surely have time to peep into the dining room, but just look at everything, isn't it artistic, with the flower pot of wild blossoms gathered from the woods.

Now we will now walk over to the school. A piano is at one end of the auditorium and two large bookcases, filled with the best literature and other helpful books. A large clock hangs on the wall. Also a fine portrait of George Washington and Longfellow and other beautiful pictures.

On one side of this room is the domestic room, and on the opposite side is the shop containing tools for almost any kind of work. There are two other rooms besides these in which the primary grades are taught.

We also have a fine garden above the house, with all kinds of vegetables growing in it. Near the garden is the young apple orchard which the boys cleared and planted, and this work was done by the scholarship pupils, who are glad of the chance to learn to do all kinds of work that will help them in their future lives.

What Federation School Has Done the Past Year

After reading my first outlined plan for our Tallulah school one of our wisest and most interesting friends said, "I approve heartily of your proposed plans, but do not allow your enthusiasm to run the school into debt."

The wisdom of this advice was impressed upon me on several occasions when imperative needs had to be met and no money was in sight to pay for them.

It has always been the policy of our management not to incur debt, but to work for the most needed improvement first, taking only one at a time, pay for it and as rapidly as possible undertake others when funds are provided.

As the school has just closed and the school year ended, it is my desire to report some of the work accomplished the past year.

Support of School.

For the support of the school $2,141 has been collected. Of this amount ninety-nine clubs contributed $1,666. Mrs. Lipscomb and Mrs. Hays turned over to me a balance of $231.20 belonging to this fund; Rabun and Habersham counties together paid $125. The small balance being given by friends.

From the sum collected the salaries of the three teachers, amounting to $1,449, were paid; over $600 was spent for absolutely necessary improvements and equipment for the school and cottage.

Less than $25 represents the sum total of our "maintenance fund" bank account after all bills are satisfied.

Sixteen clubs are pledged to pay $110 before the end of their year. Even when these pledges are met there will not be sufficient funds to run the school until the time of the convention, when many of the clubs send their contributions and thus help to relieve the temporary embarrassment of the fall months.

All clubs by sending money promptly will greatly relieve the anxiety and heavy burden necessarily imposed upon the director.

Improvements Made.

On an appointed "work day" a small barn was nearly completed by the boys in addition.

A driveway from the public road to the cottage and a sanitary toilet have been built by the industrial scholarship boys.

Three stoves for the class rooms and a car of coal were shipped up early in February.

A three-compartment fireless cooker and a new sewing machine have been purchased. A school victrola, a set of hotel china, a large school clock and some valuable pictures for the school rooms were given.

Bath tubs have been put in, thorough repair and the walls of both were done over early last fall. One-half of the cottage roof was retinned at a cost of $82.80.

In the spring a small apple orchard was planted, the trees were all given by Mr. Magid, and to protect our young trees from the stock a wire fence was built by the boys.

Practical gardening is taught in all of the grades, and as an evidence of successful teaching we had fine vegetables in both the garden and orchard. The tomato plants and early lettuce were set out in a hotbed. The vegetables will be sold through the summer to those of our young day pupils.

Through the influence of our friend, Mr. Hoke Smith, a rural telephone was installed in the cottage at no cost to the school.

Clothing and cotton goods were donated by our Georgia mills after the expenditure of $100 for material from this material curtains, sheets and pillowcases were made by the scholarship girls.

School Spirit.

Every effort is being made to center the community life about the school and to create a school spirit among the pupils.

We have provided a swing, volley ball and some indoor games for the diversion and amusement of the children.

We are still hoping for a community playground, where we can have baseball, basketball, croquet, and possibly a tennis court for our every morning. I think we will have apples in the orchard next spring.

Now—When this boy entered school, two years ago, he could not read. He was an orphan and a boy of 10 who had never had a home, or known a parent's care. This is his first composition.

Needs.

A well, with a hand pump and tank, from which water can be carried down to the cottage and school, is of great-est necessity. Water must now be installed in the cottage and a bubble fountain for use in the yard.

Screens for the doors and windows of the dining room are a necessity, the kitchen is already screened.

Chicken houses and runs must be built, as we are to add poultry raising to our industrial work.

More land is important for the development of the school. This will be used for a playground and for agricultural purposes.

In making out our annual budget we should make provision also for the great emergency fund. All housekeepers know that we must count upon the unexpected happenings—be an example, the need of repairs on the cottage roof was a great surprise, and just a week or two before the school closed.

In closing the future of our school recently our president asked the question, "Is it not our plan to make our Tallulah school one of the great rural schools of the country?"

This is a question, I leave with the club women of Georgia. What will we do with it?"

AUDIENCE ENJOYS TALLULAH SCHOOL CLOSING EXERCISES

The following program, an entirely creditable performance, was given by the children of the school on Friday evening, June 11, and marked the closing of the school for the year.

An appreciative audience frequently encored the numbers, and from the crowded auditorium one would judge that the people in the community were very much interested in the children's exercises. The practical tale of the director, Mrs. Hugh Willet, and the able address of Dr. F. C. McConnell, who spoke on "Education."

INTERESTING FACTS ABOUT OUR SCHOOL

The Atlanta Woman's club and State Association for Education of Georgia Mountaineers contributed $879 toward the support of our school.

After the closing exercises of the school on the 11th, announcement was made that Mr. Louis Magid had given a milch cow, to be delivered when the school opens.

A beautiful dress pattern, donated by Mrs. Lyman J. Amsden, of Atlanta, for the best made dress was awarded to Miss Ruby Ivester, who lives near Clarkesville.

On the porches of both the school and cottage are flower boxes filled with beautiful blooming plants.

Even though the school is closed, Sunday school will be held in the school auditorium by the people of the village. This fact is particularly encouraging to those who are working for the co-operation of the local people.

Miss Nannie Davis, our new principal, is a well-known educator of Virginia, and she has the enthusiastic indorsement of Miss Parrish. In her last letter she said: "We can easily make the school a community center by establishing clubs among the women, having a playground for young and old, and entertainments and fairs in which they take an active part. It will be my aim to get into the life and hearts of the people and have them work with us as one."

Children of Confederacy Hold Annual Conference in Macon

The third annual conference of the Children of the Confederacy, held in Macon June 22 and 23, proved a vitality in the auxiliary work that was a surprise to each and every friend of the junior organization. On Monday evening occurred a brilliant ball, the Macon people being hosts to the delegates. A full orchestra furnished delightful music, to the inspiring strains of which the beautiful Ball, and the U. D. C.—danced gaily through the evening.

Tuesday morning the directress of the Children, Mrs. Elizabeth Bryant, opened the conference. After prayer and music, words of welcome were made by the mayor of Macon and by Gen. eral Preston, for the U. C. V., by Judge Daly, for the S. C. V., by Mrs. Walter Grace, of the Macon U. D. C., and Miss Edith and Miss Hall Dewy, for the Macon C. of C. Mrs. Lamar, state president, gave greetings and welcomed the cordial co-operation of the Children. Miss Griffith, of Atlanta, responded most graciously to the welcoming words.

Tuesday at 1 o'clock Mr. and Mrs. W. D. Lamar entertained the delegates and their directresses at an elaborate and much-enjoyed Red Cross luncheon. Tuesday afternoon the Macon U. D. C. at the home of Mrs. Joseph Neil, entertained Mrs. Charles Hall Dewy, for the Miss Rutherford's Address.

Tuesday night Miss Rutherford, historian, D. C., addressed the conference on "Heroism in Daily Life," and remarks were full of historical facts and interesting incidents. Of her many flights of eloquence none stands out more strongly than the beautiful tribute she paid to our peace president: "Our president, standing like the Rock of Gibraltar, over all the battering rams of malice, envy and disloyalty, yet unswerving in the right." And again: "He holds the reins of government and guides aright his eyes fixed upon the stars." Her oration at the close of the evening's program the enthusiastic applause which greeted the distinguished visitor, whose popularity and ability are everywhere conceded.

State Regent D. A. R.

On this occasion the state president, Mrs. Lamar, presented the state regent, D. A. R., who in a few well-chosen words expressed her pleasure in the work which the children had done and a similar band would soon be helping in the fall.

Wednesday morning was continued the business discussion and reports of chapters were made. A feature of the morning was the enthusiastic indorsement of Mrs. Lamar for the office of president general of the U. D. C. On motion of Miss Rutherford the conference indorsed Mrs. Lamar by a rising vote.

After considerable friendly discussion as to a plan to change the present badge, the conference finally decided to retain the pin as it is at present.

Among the distinguished visitors to the conference were, Miss Rutherford, Mrs. Adams Lamar, of Atlanta; Mrs. Elizabeth Hanna, of Atlanta; Mrs. Bryant, of Atlanta; Mrs. Louis Burns, of Barnesville; Mrs. Burns, of Sylvania; Mrs. Grace and many members of the Walter Taylor chapter, as well as Mrs. Duncan Brown and Mrs. J. A. Sedion, of the executive board of the Georgia U. D. C.

The music, rendered by the orchestra of the Macon U. D. C. was beautiful and inspiring.

The resolutions of thanks were most heartily indorsed, and the conference adjourned with a deep sense of fresh inspiration for the work of the year, in the acceptance of an invitation beautifully worded and gracefully presented by young Mr. Rogers, inviting the conference to hold its fourth session next year in Barnesville.

Not forgetting absent friends, telegrams were sent to Mrs. Adams Lamar, Wolfe, organizer C. of C., Atlanta, and Miss Adeline Baum, directress Dublin C. of C. A message of regret for absence on account of ill health from Mrs. Hugh Willet, state director C. of C., was read by Mrs. Lamar.

The closing morning Mrs. Lamar for president general, presented by Miss Anna Bryant, directress Macon C. of C., who responded in a few words. Miss Rutherford, state historian, reads as follows:

Mrs. Lamar Indorsed.

"Whereas our loved state president, Mrs. Walter D. Lamar, is so well qualified by her executive ability and by the grace the highest position in the gift of the organization of the children, the office of president general U. D. C., therefore, be it

"Resolved, That we, the Children of the Confederacy, exert every effort to that end.

"That, although we are the baby organization of the U. D. C., we, in conference assembled, do hereby heartily indorse our Mrs. Lamar, and pledge to her support all the influence we can command.

"Respectfully submitted,
"ANNA BRYANT,
"Directress."

On motion of Miss Rutherford, state historian, the conference expressed its indorsement by a rising vote.

Our Scholarship Pupils

Through the scholarship pupils the most far-reaching work of our school is being done.

The three teachers and ten scholarship pupils live in the cottage together, sharing the work alike. There they have the privacy of a home, and they are taught practical home-making and simple lessons in agriculture. All of these children come from mill and factory districts where there are no good schools.

They are bright, capable, and they do nearly all of the constructive work in the school. Their schedules include not only the industrial work and the regular morning session, but one hour of afternoon work (Monday excepted) and four on Saturdays.

Mrs. Hugh Willet, Director, gave me $533.36 belonging to the scholarship fund, and through the year $323 was added to this total by the clubs, so the actual living expenses of the cottage are met out of this fund. All necessary improvements and equipment for the cottage are met by the maintenance fund, which income from each club each, and are given by clubs, other organizations and private benefactors. So far only four scholarships are promised for next year.

It is earnestly to have the parents of the children, if possible, help pay part of the board. One poor father, whose child was given a scholarship the past year, when told what would be expected of him replied, he said: "Miss Willet, I shore am goin' to hep you nex yur. I'm goin' to giv you 50 cents or $1 every month, if the Lord wills." This represents the condition we have to meet.

The cottage accommodates about fifteen persons, which makes it possible to give a scholarship pupil.

These scholarship boys and girls are essentially a part of the school. Without them the work will be seriously handicapped and our best opportunity for service lost.

The maintenance fund will fall short if it does exceed $1,000 by $200 or more. It is our ambition, with nearly three hundred clubs, to add very materially to this sum.

These scholarships should not be wholly dependent upon individual contributions, but our general fund should be adequate and cover all of the school work.

In the meantime, we are facing a crisis. Before the next opening, at least ten scholarships secured for 1915-16.

Who will come to our aid? One hundred dollars gives a full scholarship, $50 a half and $25 a quarter. Any amount sent will be gratefully received.

MRS. HUGH WILLET,
Director.

Through Three Generations This Dress Has Seen Service

Miss Annie de Vore, night telephone operator in the city of Amity, came to work a night or so ago clad in a dress that has known three generations, and, could it talk, would deliver an exceedingly interesting discourse on the evolution of times since the days before the war.

The dress was first worn eighty years ago by Miss de Vore's grandmother, Miss Kitty de Vore, eighty years ago it was worn by her mother, Mrs. Jane de Vore. In accordance with a custom established in the family it is now being worn by the girl, and will be handed down to her children, and so on.

The grandmother, then a lovely young girl, wore it in hooped style, with a full skirt reaching around the bottom, and pantalets concealing the ankles. She wore it when she first looked through a shadowy lane that led across the spot where the lofty Ansley now stands, and saw the sun sinking behind the skies and vast fields and hills stretching out on all sides.

Worn Next by Mrs. de Vore.

The first daughter, Mrs. de Vore, was bequeathed the dress upon beginning the days Dixie was being reborn, when Atlanta was rising from the smoke and ruins of Sherman's advance, and the sound of hammer and saw had replaced the joyous quietude of the ante-bellum day.

A year she wore it, and then carefully folded it away in a new trunk, where, according to a custom dictated by her mother, it should be handed down to generation after generation until it became so tattered and torn that it would serve as nothing but a rag-carpet weaver.

Now it is seeing the newest advance of life, the new-born Dixie, and the Atlanta that can hardly be distinguished from the big cities of the north. It has been reshaped to accord with the extreme fashion and the day, and its wearer sits manipulating the latest style phone system over the main spot its first wearer strolled leisurely through a monolithic pathway.

Then and Now.

Where the dress' first wearer passed spick broughams and span horses traveling through the country byways, nonly and goggled taxi chauffeurs stand at the doorways in the dead of night waiting for generous fares; where the cool stream bade lingerers sip from its depths, over the telephone, comes to the present owner of the dress a husky and impatient demand at 3 a. m. for ice water.

The quietude the dress knew in its first days is no longer, and it would seem, if it had feelings, that it is tired of the city's night traffic; the occasional roar of a taxi; the fleeting song of joyriders; frequently the din of fire apparatus; the clang of police patrol or ambulance's alarm.

It has seen a life, indeed. No doubt it will be happier to get back into the South this time than it was either of the two previous occasions.

Georgia D. A. R. Presents State Flag to Postoffice Department

Washington, D. C.
June 3, 1915.

Mr. William I. Denning, Superintendent of Equipment, Postoffice Department, Washington, D. C.

My Dear Mr. Denning: At the request of Hon. Nat E. Harris, governor-elect of Georgia, I am writing to you about our Georgia flag. The Georgia Daughters of the American Revolution will be glad to place the flag of our state in the court of the postoffice department at Washington, D. C.

Will you please give me the dimensions of flag. I understand that you wish it to be of silk and that it is to be raised on June 14. Do you wish Georgia to be represented on the program, and, if so, please state what would be expected?

I have consulted with our chairman of flags and as soon as you give the necessary information, I will telegraph the order to her, so that there may be no delay about our flag. I am glad that we have a Georgia man at the postoffice. With many thanks to you for calling our attention to this matter, I am, respectfully yours,

(MRS. T. C.) SUSIE DERRY PARKER,
Georgia State Regent D. A. R.

Washington, May 10, 1915.

Mrs. T. C. Parker, Georgia State Regent D. A. R., 124 West 83d St., New York, N. Y.

Dear Mrs. Parker: I have your kind letter of May 7, in response to mine to Judge Harris, in regard to furnishing a Georgia state flag for the flag day exercises of the postoffice department, June 14, next.

It is desired that the flag be of silk and the dimensions should be 4 feet by 6 feet. You may use your own discretion as to whether a staff is provided. It can be furnished either with one or without a staff.

Doubtless I should have been more definite in my statement with regard to the presentation. Many of the state flags that are sent to the department are not presented in person, being merely shipped by freight or express. What I had in mind was that if you so desire some representative of one of the donors of the flag could present it in person in the morning before the Flag day exercises in the afternoon or any prior time. If this method is followed, I think we could arrange for the assembling of as many as possible of the clerks from Georgia in the room of the chief clerk of the department, at which time a brief presentation might be made and the chief clerk, or possibly the first assistant postmaster general, could accept on behalf of the department. This was the method followed in the case of the presentation of the Tennessee flag two or three months ago. After the acceptance of the Georgia flag it may be displayed in the decorative scheme of the court.

The Flag day exercises proper consist principally of patriotic music by a trained chorus, accompanied by a section of the Marine band, and possibly one or two brief speeches, at the close of which, during the singing of the "Star Spangled Banner, the enormous United States flag which hangs in the court is unfurled.

I would be pleased to hear from you to hep you nex yur. I'm goin' to giv you 50 cents or $1 every month, if the Lord wills." This represents the condition we have to meet.

The cottage accommodates about fifteen persons, which makes it possible to give a scholarship pupil.

These scholarship boys and girls are essentially a part of the school. Without them the work will be seriously handicapped and our best opportunity for service lost.

The maintenance fund will fall short if it does exceed $1,000 by $200 or more. It is our ambition, with nearly three hundred clubs, to add very materially to this sum.

These scholarships should not be wholly dependent upon individual contributions, but our general fund should be adequate and cover all of the school work.

In the meantime, we are facing a crisis. Before the next opening, at least ten scholarships secured for 1915-16.

Who will come to our aid? One hundred dollars gives a full scholarship, $50 a half and $25 a quarter. Any amount sent will be gratefully received.

MRS. HUGH WILLET,
Director.

Letter Is Read and Placed.

Postoffice Department, Office of Chief Clerk, Washington, June 15, 1915.

Mrs. Susie Parker, Dear Mrs. Parker: During the absence of Mr. Denning last week, the beautiful flag from the D. A. R. of Georgia was received and forwarded to me, as the decorations had not been put in the building for Flag day were under way.

Your letter of June 3 was handed to Mr. Denning reached me yesterday when a message was sent immediately to the president of the Senate, and also in the hope that she might be present at the exercises in the afternoon. Word was received that she had gone to her summer home last Saturday.

Mr. Denning has just returned to the city, and we regret very much that there was no one present capable of such a beautiful emblem as has been presented by the Daughters of the D. A. R. of Georgia. The banner was well placed and elicited much admiration. Mr. Denning has prepared and framed a list of the flags which have been presented to the department together with a chart showing their position in the court of the building during the exercises yesterday.

Will you please convey to each and every member of the D. A. R. of Georgia our appreciation of their courtesy in making it possible for the department to possess such an exquisite flag for use on patriotic occasions. Sincerely yours,

M. O. CHANCE,
Chief Clerk.

State Flags Presented.

In 1906, when the department Inaugurated among the departments in Washington the celebration of June 14 as flag day, and ever since, and ever since then each year the day has been observed with appropriate exercises. A musical program is rendered in the court of the department building which is decorated as effectively as possible for the occasion. This is the only day of the year on which the flag of the thirty-eight Stars and Stripes hanging in the court is displayed, as on all other days exercises it is again unfurled.

As the postal service is so closely connected with each and every state of the union, it has seemed proper that the state flags should be placed in the headquarters of that service when the department does supreme honor to the Glory of the State flag—use in these exercises have been presented by organizations of patriotic women of—

Craycroft-Harrison.

The announcement of the engagement of Miss Love Craycroft, of Oklahoma, and Mr. Orrin Lea Harrison, of Dallas, Texas, will be received with cordial interest in Atlanta, where Mr. Harrison was reared and where he has a large circle of relatives and friends.

In telling of the reception at which the engagement was announced, The Oklahoma City News says:

"While the engagement has been a matter of conjecture for some weeks past, the good news was a surprise to many of the callers, who hastened to shower upon Miss Craycroft every wish for her happiness in the future—wishes that breathed the sincerest interest in one of the most charming young women who has ever graced the society of Oklahoma City. Having as her heritage the social graces of both her parents, and reared in a home that is synonomous for hospitality of the most charming kind, Miss Craycroft, although very young, possesses the grace of one long accustomed to place and power. She has moreover a marked individuality and independence of spirit that is thoroughly refreshing, a great deal of chic and that natural vivacity which springs from a nature which is at once gracious and womanly. Since her debut three years ago she has been in demand for every social occasion of importance, for she has the ability to make and retain a large circle of friends. She radiates all the happiness of youth, beauty and romance.

"Mr. Harrison, who had a silent share in the joyous occasion, resides in Dallas, where he is agent of the Cotton Insurance association for the states of Texas and Oklahoma. Before removing to Dallas several years ago he had lived in Atlanta, Ga. Miss Craycroft's friends who have had the pleasure of meeting him on his rather frequent visits to this city during the past six months have pleasantly commented upon his distinguished manner and bearing.

"The marriage will be a brilliant event of the early fall, and it will be preceded doubtless by many beautiful festivities in honor of the bride-to-be."

Jubilee Union of Mission Workers.

The members of the Ladies' Aid and Missionary societies of the Baptist churches are cordially invited to attend the meeting of Mission Workers on Friday, July 2, at the North Avenue Presbyterian church at 4 p. m.

Boy Scouts Entertain.

One of the most delightful events of the season was the al fresco party given by the College Park Boy Scouts of America to their young lady friends at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. C. F. Holt last Saturday evening. The spacious lawn of this lovely home was brilliantly lighted by electricity, the wiring being done by the scouts. They had also prepared a novel surprise feature, this being a fully equipped camp which had been set up in a far corner of the lawn, to show the girls what scout life really is. This was very attractive, especially the artificial log fire. A favorite resort of the evening was the beautiful summer house. Entertainment was furnished the guests by progressive conversation. Punch was served from the flower garnished bowl by Miss Anna Quillian. Also a delightful ice course was served. Assisting in entertaining were the scout master, Mr. L. A. Niven, and his wife. About sixty guests enjoyed the hospitality of the scouts. Buick 1916 Buick

ANNOUNCEMENT

The Public Wants Buick Sixes—So Many of Them That We Shall Build Nothing Else in 1916

More enduring than chrome vanadium steel, more wonderful than the finest workmanship, is the idea that can dominate an industry.

In this day when more Buicks are being built than ever before it is interesting to remember that the distinguishing characteristic of the Buick, the Valve-in-Head Motor, has existed as an idea for twenty-five years and been built into Buick cars for thirteen years.

From 1903 to 1907 the Buick Valve-in-Head was a two-cylinder engine. From 1908 to 1914 four cylinders dominated the field and the Buick Valve-in-Head Four dominated other types. The Buick Valve-in-Head Six was first put on the market in 1913. Fours were also continued—but the Valve-in-Head Six had stirred the imagination of the car-buying public. The demand from the start outpaced the production.

This demand has become so overwhelming that now—for 1916—the Four gives way to Sixes. Two chassis, both Sixes, with roadster, touring car, coupe, sedan bodies. The Six has been made standard because in the Six the Valve-in-Head idea has its greatest opportunity for service. Also since the first appearance of the Buick Six there has arisen an insistent demand for smaller Buick Sixes.

Buick Valve-in-Head Motor Cars Enter Their Fourteenth Season of Successful Manufacture

Price, completely equipped, f. o. b. Atlanta $1015

On the smaller of the two Buick chassis for 1916 there are four body models, thus offering a complete range in both open and closed cars, and for both individual and family use. This smaller Buick roadster, introduced this season, is the companion car to the touring model illustrated aove. It is magnificent in appointment and finish, with a 45-horsepower, six -cylinder, smooth, vibrationless, Valve-in-Head Motor. It offers the greatest possible motor value to those who desire a handsome roadster. It sets a new standard of automobile value, and one by which all nineteen-sixteen cars will be judged.

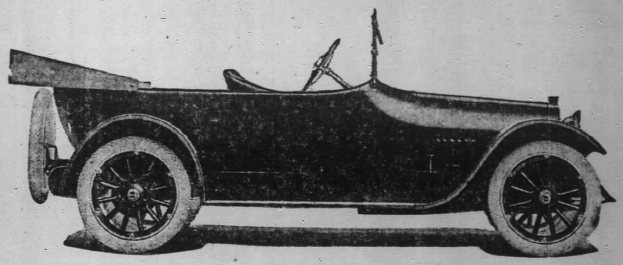
Price, completely equipped, f. o. b. Atlanta $1540

This roadster is the successor to the "Big Six" Buick Roadster which created such a stir in the motor world last season. It is built on the same chassis as the seven-passenger Touring Car, with Valve-in-Head motor of 55 horsepower, and in both construction and appearance will rank with any car at any price.

Buick Pleasure Cars for 1916 Will Be Confined Exclusively To Six-Cylinder Models



Model D-45 Buick Valve-in-Head Six-Cylinder Touring Car
Price, completely equipped, f. o. b. Atlanta $1050

The car about which everybody is talking when they think of motor cars. The car that will inspire the utmost pride of ownership. The car we know is right, not only in theory and test, but in actual service.

Buick Valve-in-Head Seven-Passenger, Six-Cylinder Touring Car, Model D-55. Price, completely equipped, f. o. b. Atlanta $1575

This, the third season for this model of the Buick, finds Buick ideals in motor car manufacture and Buick Valve-in-Head principle of motor construction brought to their highest development and refinement. In this car are combined all the essentials for perfect motoring pleasure. First, there is that abundance of power which only the Buick Valve-in-Head Motor insures. Then there is a grace of line and finish which stamp this car as a motor car beauty. Buick construction insures the utmost of "under the floor" value in workmanship and material. Nothing is lacking to make this car ideal from every possible viewpoint.

ARTEMAS WARD HEADS KING MOTOR COMPANY

Secretary and Treasurer Vollbrecht Is Elected Vice President.

Detroit, Mich., June 26.—(Special.)—Vice President and Advertising Manager Artemas Ward, jr., has been elected president of the King Motor Car company, while Secretary and Treasurer F. A. Vollbrecht has been elected vice president and general manager. He also continues as treasurer.

This announcement was made in Detroit at a dinner given at the Statler hotel, when J. G. Bayerline officially stated that he had resigned the presidency of the King Motor Car company to give his undivided attention to other duties which have been formulating for some time. It was with regret that the resignation was accepted. Mr. Bayerline is not in a position as yet to announce his new plans.

The newly elected president, Mr. Ward, jr., praised Mr. Bayerline for the indefatigable efforts he had put forth, giving the King a unique position in the automobile manufacturing industry of today. Mr. Bayerline thanked the department heads for the part they played in the success of the company, and assured all that he was personally sorry to sever his connection.

It was also announced at the dinner that Factory Production Manager J. B. Seigfried would continue in charge of the factory as assistant general manager. The sales continue in charge of Sales Manager W. L. Daly, with H. C. Bradfield assuming the position of sales promotion and advertising manager at the factory. J. S. Emerson is purchasing agent under Mr. Seigfried.

FINE RECORDS MADE BY VACUUM CUP TIRE

Baltimore Figures Show That They Are Good for Long, Hard Runs.

Big averages continue to be piled up by Pennsylvania Oilproof Vacuum Cup tires, the latest noteworthy performance being announced by Schnuit Bros., Baltimore dealers of the Pennsylvania Rubber company.

According to a statement just issued by this firm, nine tires used by prominent Baltimore car owners have scored a total run of 89,199 miles, or an average of 11,022 miles.

The highest mileage recorded by an individual casing was 14,025. The next highest total was 11,695, the lowest score being 7,326 miles, the only casing covering less than 9,000 miles. The intermediate totals were 9,469, 9,476, 9,642, 9,644 and 9,994.

One of these tires was a Ford size casing, and it is interesting to note that, with two exceptions, it covered a distance which surpassed even those attained by its big brothers.

The statement also directs particular attention to the remarkable endurance performance of a V. C. motorcycle tire used by the Baltimore police department. This casing ran a total distance of 18,037.

Deducting the heavy mileage scored by this motorcycle tire leaves an average for each of the eight automobile casings of 10,146 miles, or 2,386 miles over and above the certified average scored last year in the official test of strictly stock Vacuum Cup tires by the Automobile Club of America.

It is pointed out, however, that 1915 V. C's, owing to the development and application of a new toughening process, possess fully 50 per cent greater wear resistance than that embodied in the 1914 models; and this fact, it is claimed, accounts for the higher average showing made by the improved tires in Baltimore.

The final results of the A. C. A. test, coupled with the added endurance values effected by the new process of toughening, have led the Pennsylvania company to announce an increase in guaranteed mileage service to 6,000 miles.

BUICK FACTORY PLANS TO FEATURE THE "SIX"

New Car Is Sure to Win Favor of Public, Say Auto Enthusiasts.

By Press Huddleston.

One of the most important automobile announcements of the season has just been made—the question of what the Buick factory is to build in 1916. Never since 1908 has the Buick announcement created the sensation it has this year.

In 1908 the Buick White Streak was built to sell in San Francisco for approximately $1,000. In those days this sum was not supposed to buy anything in the way of an automobile, but from the very start the White Streak proved itself to be a regular automobile and won a large number of friends.

Those who are wise in the matter of motor cars predict the same success for the new 1916 Buick Six, which sells in San Francisco, completely equipped for approximately $1,100. This car is not a light, flimsy six, but is a full-grown" automobile, essentials, which are endurance, power, economy of operation and flexibility. Coupled with these essentials are plenty of road clearance, peculiarly pleasing body lines, and as fine a finish, both in paint and upholstering, as anyone could ask for.

McCutcheon Pleased.

In commenting on the new cars, Manager George D. McCutcheon, of the local Buick branch, says: "We were partly prepared for the surprise the new 1916 Buicks have given us. For some time the factory sales manager has been assuring me that he had a surprise in store for us. The engineers surely have succeeded in building a car at an unheard-of price, and yet have not cheapened either its construction or appearance, as a glance at either the car or the specifications will show.

"The new Six is made in four body designs, as follows: A two-passenger roadster, a three-passenger coupe, a five-passenger sedan and a five-passenger touring car. The motor, a six-cylinder, long-stroke, valve-in-head type, with four main bearings and three-point suspension, is of the regular Buick design and construction. The transmission is attached to the rear of the motor and forms a unit with the motor. The power is transmitted to the full floating axle by an inclosed driving shaft. The lines and general appearance of the car are much finer than anything Buick has ever built up to this season.

High-Grade Equipment.

"The equipment is high grade in every respect and includes a silk mohair one-man top, Delco lighting, starting and ignition system, rain vision windshield and double-bulb head lamps. The easy-riding qualities are guaranteed by the long wheel base and the cantilever springs.

"Experience in motor car manufacturing teaches that eternal caution is the price of success. Expediency walks constantly at the elbow of every maker of motor cars, whispering, 'Do this' or 'Do that,' and he is wise and fortunate who turns a deaf ear to all save the performance that is proven in service.

"The motor car that exists on the draughtsman's drawing board or in the designer's fancy may prove a fragile delusion in the rough hands of Mr. Average User. Blue prints are beautiful and alluring, and inventors are often persuasive.

"Looking at the one or listening to the other, the motor car manufacturer must forever keep in mind the great fact that ruts and hills and rough roads are relentless, and that inexperience back of the steering wheel constitutes a factor that must be met with the closest reckoning.

"Progress in motor car building is not progress unless it is of proven worth. The next step is unsafe until the last step is of established wisdom. Past performance is vastly more important than future promise.

"Four years ago the first Buick sixes were built. At that time we knew the six was right in theory, and our exhaustive tests convinced us it was right in fact. Now we know it is right, not only in theory and test, but in actual service. We had faith in Buick designers and engineers, but we have an even greater faith in Buick users. Service is the real test of a motor car, and since the verdict of our users was overwhelming, we now offer sixes exclusively."

MEN ARE ENCOURAGED TO SERVE IN MILITIA

Tire Company Will Pay Employees While Engaged in Military Duty.

Following the lead of Colonel Samuel P. Colt, president of the United States Rubber company, Elisha S. Williams, president, has instructed the heads of the various departments of the United States Tire company to encourage all employees to join the militia of the states in which they reside.

In conjunction with the United States Rubber company, this means that over 55,000 men are to have the sanction of the United States Rubber company, if they choose, to join the state militia or naval forces.

The United States Tire company will continue the pay of any employee who does military duty, and the annual camping or cruising tour of duty will not interfere with the regular vacations given by the United States Tire company.

This policy has been adopted by the United States Rubber company and the United States Tire company because the executives feel that it is the duty of large corporations to aid in creating an effective military reserve which they believe the United States should have.

A STEP TOWARD CONFEDERATION.

THERRE had been some noteworthy passages in the reports which Colonel Francis Nicholson sent to the government at home when he was first governor of Virginia (1690); for he studied his duties in those days with wide-open eyes, and had more times written of what he saw with a very statesmanlike breadth and insight, other things, that he had urged a defensive confederation of the colonies against the French and Indians, under the leadership of Virginia, the most loyal of the colonies. He had made it his business to find out what means of defense and what effective force there were in the other colonies, particularly in those at the north, conferring with their authorities with regard to these matters in person when he could not get the information he wished by deputy.

The king and his ministers in England saw very clearly, when they read his careful dispatches, that they could not wisely act upon such suggestions yet; but they knew that what Colonel Nicholson thus openly and definitely advised was what must occur to the mind of every thoughtful and observant man who was given a post of authority and guidance in the colonies, whether he thought it wise to advise action in the matter or not.

It was evident, indeed, even to some who were not deemed thoughtful at all. Even the heedless, negligent Lord Culpeper, little as he really cared for the government he had been sent to conduct, had suggested eight years ago that all questions of war and peace in the colonies should be submitted for final decision to the governor and council of Virginia, where it might be expected that the king's interests would be loyally looked after and safeguarded.

No doubt the colonies would have objected to and resisted such an arrangement with a very hot resentment, and no one in authority in London dreamed for a moment of taking either Lord Culpeper's or Colonel Nicholson's advice in the matter; but it was none the less obvious that the king and his officers must contrive some way, if they could, by which they might use the colonies as a single power against the French in America, if England was indeed to make and keep an empire there.

If King James, who leaned upon France as an ally and prayed for the dominion of the Church of Rome, had seen this, it was not likely that William of Orange, who was the arch-enemy of France and the champion of Protestantism against Rome, would overlook it.

He was no sooner on the throne than England was plunged into a long eight years' war with the French. And so it happened that the colonies seemed to reap little advantage from the "glorious revolution" which had put out a tyrant and brought in a constitutional king.

William of Orange, it presently appeared, meant to unite groups of colonies under the authority of a single royal governor, particularly at the north where the French power lay, as James before him had done; for, owing to the governors of the principal colonies the right to command the military forces of the colonies about them even if he gave them no other large gift of power.

He did more than James had done. Being a statesman and knowing the value of system and thoroughness, he did systematically what James had done loosely and without consistent plan. The board of trade and plantations, which he organized to oversee and direct the government of the colonies, did more to keep their affairs under the eye and hand of the king than any group of James' ministers had been able to do.

The great Dutch king was determined to wield England and her possessions as a single imperial power in the game of politics he was playing in Europe.

The French power, which he chiefly feared, had really grown very menacing in America; was growing more every year; and must very soon indeed be faced and overcome, if the English were not to be shut in to a narrow seaboard, or ousted altogether.

It was not a question of numbers. It was a question of territorial aggrandizement, rather, and strategic advantage. Probably there were not more than 12,000 Frenchmen, all told, in America when William became king (1689); whereas the subjects of James swarmed there full 200,000 strong, and were multiplying by the tens of thousands from decade to decade.

But the French were building military posts at every strategic point as they went, while the English were building nothing but rural homes and open villages. With the French it did not seem a matter of settlement; it seemed a matter of conquest, rather, and of military occupation. They were guarding trade routes and making sure of points of advantage.

The English way was the more wholesome and the more vital. A hardy, self-dependent, crowding people like the English in Massachusetts and Virginia, and the Dutch in New York, took root wherever they went, spread into real communities, and were not likely to be got rid of when once their number had run into the thousands.

Their independence, too, and their capacity for managing their own affairs without asking or wanting or getting any assistance from government, made them as hard to handle as if they had been themselves an established continental power.

FRENCH ACTIVITY.

THE French had an advantage, nevertheless, which was not to be despised. They moved as they were ordered to move by an alert and watchful government which was in the thick of critical happenings where policies were made, and which meant to cramp the English, if it could not actually get rid of them.

They extended and organized the military power of France as they went, and found fortresses and garrisons the English about with a chain of posts and settlements which bade fair to keep all the northern and western regions of the great continent for the king of France, from the mouth of the St. Lawrence round about 2,000 miles, to the outlets of the Mississippi at the gulf.

Their movement along the great rivers and the lakes had been very slow at first; but it had quickened from generation to generation, and was now proceeding with the full attention of any man who could hear news and had his eyes abroad upon what was happening about him.

Jacques Cartier had explored the noble River St. Lawrence for his royal master of France a long century and a half ago, in the far year 1535, fifty years before the English so much as attempted a settlement. But it was not until 1604, the year in which James came to the throne, that Samuel de Champlain established the first permanent French settlement, Acadia, and there were still but 200 lonely settlers there when nearly thirty years more had gone by (1636).

It was the quick growth and systematic explorations of the latter part of the century that made the English uneasy.

The 12,000 Frenchmen who were busy at the work of occupation when William of Orange became king had not contented themselves to the settlements long ago made in the Bay of Fundy and at Montreal, Quebec, and Tadousac, where the great river of the north broadened to the sea. They had carried their boats across from the upper waters of the rivers of the north to those of Lake Huron; had penetrated thence to Lake Michigan, and even to the farthest shores of Lake Superior, establishing forts and trading posts as they advanced.

They had crossed from Green bay, in Lake Michigan, to the waters of the Wisconsin river, and had passed by that easy way into the Mississippi itself. That stout-hearted explorer, Father Marquette, had descended the Father of Waters past the Ohio to the outlet of the Arkansas (1673); and Robert La Salle had followed him and gone all the long way to the spreading mouths of the vast river and the gates of the gulf (1682), not by way of the Wisconsin, but by crossing from the southern end of Lake Michigan to the stream of the Illinois, and passing by that way to the Mississippi itself.

And so the lakes and the western rivers and the Mississippi itself saw the French, and French posts sprang up upon their banks, to overawe the dusky tribes, and lived or died with a like fortitude and devotion, never willingly quitting their sacred task or letting go their hold upon the hearts of the savage men they had come to enlighten and subdue; some hardy captains who, in the companies of gentlemen-at-arms from the fields of France --at the front indomitable explorers, far in the rear timid farmers clearing patches in the silent woodland for their scanty crops, and little towns slowly growing within their walls where the river broadened to the sea.

THE CONFEDERATED IROQUOIS.

THIS stealthy power which crept so steadily southward and westward at the back of the English settlements upon the coast was held at arm's length throughout that quiet age of beginnings, not by the English, but by the Iroquois, the fierce confederated power of the great confederated Iroquois tribes, who made good their mastery between the English and the French, the Senecas, Cayugas, Onondagas, Oneidas and Mohawks.

They were stronger, fiercer, more constant and indomitable, more capable every way than the tribes amidst whom the French moved; and Champlain had cast in his lot with the enemies of the French forever. Long, long ago, in the year 1609, which white men had forgotten, he had done what the Iroquois never forgot or forgave.

He had come with their sworn foes, the Algonquins, to the shores of that lake by the sources of the Hudson which the palefaces ever afterwards called by his name, and had there used the dread firearms of the white men, of which they had never heard before, to work utter ruin of the Mohawks in battle.

They were always and everywhere ready after that fatal day to be any man's friend, whether Dutch or English, against the hated French; and the French found it necessary to keep at the back of the broad forests which stretched from the eastern lakes to the Hudson and the Delaware, the wide empire of these dusky foes, astute, implacable. They skirted the domains of the Iroquois when they were prudent, and passed inland by the lakes and the valley of the Mississippi.

But, though they kept their distance, they advanced their power. The colonists in New England had been uneasy because of their unwelcome neighbors there at first. Once and again there had been actual collisions and a petty warfare. But until William of Orange made England a party to the great war of the Protestant powers against Louis XIV. few men had seen what the struggle between French and English held in store for them.

The English colonies had grown back not a little way from the sea, steadily pushing their axes and fields into the thick set forests which lay upon the broad valleys and rising slopes of the interior by mere increase of people and drift of enterprise.

Before the seventeenth century was out adventurous English traders had crossed the Alleghenies, had launched their canoes upon the waters of the Ohio, and were fixing their huts here and there within the vast wilderness as men do who mean to stay.

Colonel Dongan, the duke's governor in New York (1683), like many another governor, had instructions and duties made to watch the humors and keep the friendship of the Iroquois, the masters of the northern border, had been quick to see how "inconvenient to the English" it was to have French settlements "running all along from one end of the back of Virginia and Carolina to the Bay of Mexico."

There had been rivalry in trade, and had been these many years, between the men of the English and Dutch colonies and the men of the French for the profits of the fur trade which lay to hand at the north; and it was already possible for those who knew the forest countries to see that the English had the better of it in the end; that it was already possible for those who knew the forest countries to see that the English had the better future, knowing, as they did, that the English gave better goods and dealt more fairly for the furs than the French, and that many of the wary Frenchmen who ranged the forests in search of gain themselves preferred to trade where they had to deal with no fraud. But, except for a few lonely villages in far-away Maine, there was nowhere any actual contact between French and English in America.

Few, except traders and thoughtful governors and pioneer villagers, who feared the tribes whom they sought to cheat to attack and massacre, knew what France did or was planning.

King William's war (1689-97), with its eight years of conscious peril, set new thought astir. It made America conscious at the stage upon which the great European conflict between French and English was to be fought out; and immediately a sort of consciousness began to blow through colonial affairs.

Colonial interests began to seem less local, more like interests held in common, and the colonies began to think of themselves as part of an empire. They had no great part in the war, it is true. Iberville (Pierre Le Moyne, William Phipps (an adventurer, led an expedition against Acadia in 1690, took Port Royal, and stripped the province of all that could be brought away) was the only hardly had the dignity of formal war. He had chiefly relished the private gain and the sport as a pleasant variation of that day of fortune when he had found the Spanish treasure ship sunk upon a reef in Hispaniola.

His second expedition, made the same year against Quebec, no doubt smacked more of the regular business, for he undertook it as an accredited officer of the crown; but when it failed it is likely he thought more of the private booty he had described than of the loss of the royal arms.

There was here the irritation, rather than the zest, of great matters, and the colonial leaders were not becoming European statesmen of a sudden. Their local affairs were still of more concern to them than the policies of European courts.

Nevertheless the war made a beginning of common understanding. The colonies were a little drawn together, a little put in mind of matters larger than their own.

THE MOVEMENT AGAINST THE FRENCH

NEW YORK felt herself no less concerned than Massachusetts and Maine in the contest with the French, and invested in the establishment of trouble with the Indians; and Jacob Leisler, plebian and self-constituted governor though he was, had made bold to take the initiative in forming plans for the war.

Count Frontenac de Buade had been made governor of New France the very year William established himself as king in England (1689), and had been instructed as every Englishman in America presently heard rumor say, to attack the English settlements at their very doors, if New York itself.

It was this rumor that had made Leisler hasten to seize the government in King William's name, send to the James governor hesitated, and hearing it cried in the streets that the French were in the very bay. He had thought it not impossible that Dongan might prove traitors and friends of King Louis in that last moment of their power. And then, when the news arrived, it was in his hands, this people's governor called a conference of the colonies to determine what should be done for the common defense.

Massachusetts, Plymouth and Connecticut responded, and sent agents to the conference (1690), the first of its kind since America was settled.

It was agreed to attempt the conquest of New France. Sir William Phips should lead an expedition by sea against Quebec, and another force should go by land out of Connecticut and New York to attack Montreal, the only other important town, taking their Iroquois allies with them.

But the land expedition was every way unfortunate, and got no further than Lake Champlain. Frontenac was able to devote all his strength to the defense of Quebec, and Sir William Phips came back whipped and empty-handed. The first effort at a common undertaking had utterly miscarried.

But that served only to whet the war. Its fires burned hot in the forests.

Frontenac prosecuted the ugly business to the end as he had begun it. He had begun, not by sending a fleet to New York, for he had none to send, but by sending his Indian allies to a sudden attack and savage massacre at Schenectady, where sixty persons, men and women, old and young, saw swift and fearful death (1689), and year by year the same hideous acts of barbarous war were repeated—not always upon the faraway border, but sometimes at the very heart of the teeming colony—once (1697) at Haverhill, not 35 miles out of Boston itself.

Such a war was not likely to be forgot in the northern colonies, at any rate, and in New York. Its memories were bitten into the hearts of the colonists there at the first. Once and again there had been actual collisions and a petty warfare. But until William of Orange made England a party to the great war of the Protestant powers against Louis XIV. few men had seen what the struggle between French and English held in store for them.

U. C. T. BOYS BACK FROM BIG MEETING

Delegates to Supreme Council, Held at Columbus, O., Enthusiastic Over Growth and Financial Strength of the Order.

The delegates to the twenty-eighth annual session of the supreme council United Commercial Travelers, which has just ended in Columbus, Ohio, returned to the city Saturday. In the party were R. L. Wallace, of council 505, of this city; E. D. Weir, of Athens, and W. A. Freeman, of Macon. These three represented the Georgia-Florida jurisdiction.

T. B. Lewis, of Atlanta, who was a member of the committee on jurisprudence, and had visited Columbus a week ahead of the regular session, will return to the city Sunday.

The delegates were enthusiastic over the work of the big convention of travelers. Mr. Wallace, in speaking of the growth and progress of the U. C. T., as brought out in the convention, said:

"The reports submitted by the various officers were very interesting and inspiring. They showed a steady growth in membership in all the states, and showed the organization to be in a healthy financial state. Our reserve fund shows a balance of $375,000, while the widows and orphans' fund showed a balance of $50,000.

"Some interesting facts were brought out in connection with the death claims paid out during 1914. Out of sixty death claims, twenty-four were due to automobile accidents, the amount paid out for these kind of deaths aggregating $151,200.

"Some of the important things accomplished by the convention were the creation of a national railway and grievance committee; also a committee to endeavor to have both baggage and passenger rates equalized and reduced. The South Carolina anti-tipping law was indorsed, and a movement started to try to effect similar laws in other states. The good roads movement was also highly indorsed.

Mr. Wallace was placed on the roll-age and per diem committee, one of the most important committees of the organization. He is secretary of his local council, secretary of the Georgia-Florida division, and one of the most active among the live U. C. T. members in the south.

250 CITY SALESMEN OFF FOR CHARLESTON

Business of Wholesalers and Jobbers Will Be Done Coming Week Over Phone.

With two of the longest and best filled strings of coaches the Georgia road has ever pulled out of the city, about two hundred members of the City Salesmen's association, accompanied by their families and many friends, left the old station last evening at 7:30 o'clock, bound for a week of sport and recreation at the Isle of Palms, at Charleston, S. C.

It was a happy and jolly crowd, and was decidedly the largest number the salesmen have ever taken on their annual outing. They will spend a week at this famous resort, where bathing, boating, fishing and other out-of-door sports will be enjoyed to the fullest.

The committee having the affair in hand was on hand Friday night to see that their members and guests received the best of attention and care, and were exceedingly busy around the depot until the train pulled out, looking after the wants of those making the trip. Some of these busy fellows were President Thomas, of the association; C. F. Holt, John Owens, J. C. Harrison, Paul Pause, Jim Massey and Bert Simmons.

The departure of the salesmen will mean a busy week for the phones, as practically every wholesale and jobbing house in the city has agreed to solicit no business in the absence of the salesmen. Merchants desiring goods will be compelled to use the phone to announce their wants to the big dealers, so have kept behind only enough men to fill such orders as may be received in this manner.

Junion Counselor H. D. Shackelford and his wife are sojourning for a fortnight at Wrightsville Beach. The hot weather has so affected the health of the junior counselor that he has to go to the seashore for recreation. We expect him to return very greatly recuperated.

H. M. Ashe, our secretary-treasurer, has suffered for some time past from neutritis as a result of a sprain. Brother Ashe thinks he is now in condition to write a treatise on how to crank a car.

Brother Starbuck, representing Gurney Heater and Manufacturing company, is just in from a very successful trip and went out again Friday.

Brother R. N. Fickett, Jr., and his wife have recently made an extended trip through Florida. Mrs. Fickett expected to return last night.

Senior Counselor W. D. Hart returned to the city Saturday after a very successful trip through southwest Georgia, visiting his married daughter, Mrs. E. M. Nichols, wife of the assistant cashier of the Savannah Bank and Trust company.

The regular meeting of No. 18 held last night was of more than usual interest, it being from the fact that the second meeting of the month, the night on which No. 18 is especially emphasizing the social life of the order. The members, old and young, great and small, were on hand enthused and sweethearts with the intention of having a good time and the evening was thoroughly enjoyed. A brief program of music and reading was rendered and the talent was exceptionally fine. After this light refreshment was served. All seemed to enjoy themselves and promised to be present at the next social event.

SWEET EIGHTEEN.

HONESTY AND EFFICIENCY REQUISITES FOR SALESMEN

Editor Firing Line: I noticed in the papers a few days since that at a recent convention of the Add Men in Chicago that either in a report that was made or a paper that was read the fact was proclaimed to the world at large that the best results from newspaper advertising was from such papers as are known to be reliable, largely because the cream of advertisers use such papers more extensively than any class, and probably pay the highest price for the space used, admitting this to be true, is it anything but natural that it should be so? Upon reflection it will be remembered that all of the successful men in business and politicians have dwelt on the importance and value here, and hereafter, the fact was proclaimed to the world at large that the best results from newspaper advertising was from such papers as are known to be reliable, largely because the cream of advertisers use such papers more extensively than any class, and probably pay the highest price for the space used, admitting this to be true, is it anything but natural that it should be so? Upon reflection it will be remembered that all of the successful men in business and politicians have dwelt on the importance and value here, and hereafter, of "honesty is the best policy," as the motto, "Honesty is the best policy," to all of which this scribe lends his unqualified indorsement.

We have seen the smooth tongue of a skillful but an unworthy and unreliable salesman on his first few trips would pull up big orders, but his personal honesty and integrity was so little removed from a crook as a confidence man has past. This is what should be in this day of advanced thought and complicated, interlocking system of business methods, as it is necessary to have the cog in this mammoth business machine as near perfect as human ingenuity can make them, and "honesty" is the first requisite, and efficiency the next. A salesman who can qualify under these two requisites never finds it necessary to hunt for positions, but the best business houses know every time they place upon such men and are always on the alert to find them.

Considering the above, the suggestion naturally arises as to why any scarcity in either men or newspapers to qualify under these conditions should exist. In regard to the matter we may say that we are in position to know that there is a gradual evolution whereby a great many more salesmen are meeting these requirements now than did twenty-five years ago, which demonstrates the value of educational campaigns even in a field of this character, and it is to be hoped that the same rule may apply to the press of the country, the great medium by which public opinion is moulded and crystallized, thus furnishing the greatest opportunity for good or evil any machine, if such it may be called, that the world has ever known to exist.

Permit us to sound a note of warning that in our opinion is one of the highest types of fraud and dishonesty, which is for any business house in any line to conduct their methods of business with their customers upon a plane that establishes confidence and creates customers after they have welded to their business a large line of patrons and customers, they should use this established following as a means by which they may systematically fleece their customers by charging greater profits than they would if they felt insecure in their hold upon the patronage of the public, at least to the extent of their own customers. Carefully analyzed, could not this be construed as the highest type of dishonesty by getting that to which they are not entitled from those who are friends from long association?

It is our opinion, without knowledge of the facts, that this might also apply to the press of the country.

We believe the foregoing suggestion invites careful and systematic study with the view on the part of the general public in overcoming obstacles created through channels of this sort.

Post B of this city held its regular monthly meeting Saturday night, the 19th, at the Hotel Ansley. After a short business session all present were invited to the dining room, where a nice banquet had been prepared, and was enjoyed by all present, during which a number of speeches from the various members were made.

The chairman of the entertainment committee, appointed some months ago, R. A. Burnett, is making quite a reputation for himself in his efforts to provide entertainment for the members on each meeting night, and thereby increase the attendance, as well as the influx of new applicants for membership.

Our delegates to the national convention in Omaha have returned and all report a jolly good time. The convention elected R. A. Broyles, of Post B, national chairman of the railroad committee of the Southeastern Passenger association, and as they have the chairman for the five passenger associations, Mr. Broyles was also elected chairman of this college of railroad chairmen.

Yours very truly,

Good Fall Business.

Joseph T. Hamilton, the genial traveler for the W. J. Dabney Implement company, returned last Friday from a successful two weeks' trip through his territory. He reports that sales on machinery has been exceedingly good, with harvesting machines in better demand than ever. "I have never seen the crop conditions better," he said. "All around in the section of Carrollton, where I was a week ago, cotton is blooming nicely, and the grain crop looks most promising. If farmers can get anything like a fair price for their crop this fall, we ought to have a corking good business." Mr. Hamilton will get back among his trade about the 1st of July.

Big Opening Order.

Cliff C. Johnson, one of the "Red Seal" boys, who makes headquarters at Columbus, spent several days at the Orr shoe house last week. While here he had the good fortune to put over a big opening sale to a southwest Georgia customer, which ran up to almost $4,000. Mr. Johnson says that while the crops are a little late around his section, that they give promise of being exceedingly fine, and that business conditions are on the mend in his locality.

W. L. COLEMAN,

COLEMAN ASSISTANT MANAGER AT DEERE'S

W. L. Coleman, for the past three years general auditor and systematizer for all the branches of the John Deere company, has been made assistant manager of the John Deere Plow company, of this city, entering upon his duties last Wednesday.

Mr. Coleman had only recently concluded an audit of the books of the Atlanta company, and had returned to St. Louis, when notification came to him of his promotion. This was brought about through the influence of W. H. Stents, secretary and manager of the Atlanta house, who had become much impressed with the ability and thoroughness of the work of Mr. Coleman while he was in charge of the audit, and had been very closely confined to his duties of late, and desired the services of an assistant upon whom he could rely to relieve him of much of the detail work. He wanted Mr. Coleman—and he got him.

Mr. Coleman was connected for some time with the credit and collection department of John Deere Plow company at Omaha. He was for twelve years credit man for the Cudahy Packing company, and is a man of splendid business attainments. His home is originally in Omaha, where his parents now reside. Mrs. Coleman will join him here in a couple of weeks.

Mr. and Mrs. Coleman will be a distinct addition to the social life of the city. McCLURE CO. TO MOVE LATTER PART OF AUGUST

In keeping with its progressive policy, and in order to take care of its increasing trade, the McClure Five Cent company has leased the Eiseman Brothers building on Whitehall street. This building is six stories in heighth, with a basement, and has floor space of 44,000 square feet.

In speaking of the change soon to be made, Manager Wilbur Carter said, as of the publicity department, said:

"The four upper stories are to be devoted to wholesale business, which has outgrown its inadequate quarters on Broad street, between Hunter streets.

"We expect to get into our new home about the latter part of August, as we will have more room and better facilities for handling our business, and will be able to enlarge our line and our service to our customers.

"In order to reduce our present stock and save the additional expense of moving, we are giving our customers the advantage of saving the difference at removal sale prices."

POPULAR CITY SALESMAN BURIED ON SATURDAY

E. Y. Culbreath, one of the most popular among the city's salesmen, who died suddenly Thursday morning, was buried at Marietta Saturday afternoon. Mr. Culbreath worked the city trade for Kelly Brothers, and was not only personally a genial and clever fellow, but regarded as one of the best salesmen in this section. He was a member of the T. P. A., and also the City Salesmen association. He was taken suddenly sick on last Thursday in the neighborhood of the Baptist Tabernacle infirmary, and was rushed to this institution, where he lived only about ten hours. His wife was visiting in Tennessee, and, though wired immediately, failed to reach his bedside before his death.

ATLANTA NECKWEAR GOES TO INDIANAPOLIS

Mail orders from distant states continue to reach the All Star Manufacturing company in gratifying numbers these days. Not only do the mails bring in an abundance of orders from the nearby cities and states, but the company enjoys a most liberal patronage from cities quite distant from Atlanta.

The latest nice batch of orders reached the Neckwear company Friday from Indianapolis, Ind., and it was an order of consequence. The product of the All Star company seems to have its admirers in many of the western states, and the shipping department is busy these days getting out goods to Ohio, Kentucky, Indiana and other western points.

W. O. Stamps left the city Saturday at noon, accompanied by his family, to motor down to Indian Springs. He will return Sunday or Monday.

Nicholas Themelis, vice president of Themelis Brothers company, headquartered in New York, returns to New York Monday, accompanied by Miss Kate Themelis, who has been visiting in Atlanta for two months.

Busy Making "Sport" Shirts.

The factory force of the A. M. Robinson company are kept quite busy these days turning out the number of good orders being received for the "Sport" shirt. These are the cool, roll-back open collar, quite a few of them being worn around the city, but somehow are not generally worn in other sections. These shirts had their beginning last summer, but are not as popular then as now. The company reports that a number of volunteer orders are coming in for them, and predicts that within the next summer or two they will be almost universally worn throughout the south on account of the comfort they afford.

General sales manager for Themelis Bros. company, E. H. Patterson, leaves for New York Monday in the interest of the Themelis Rose-Tip cigarette.

Motored to Warm Springs.

E. F. Malone, vice president of the Capital City Tobacco company, together with Mrs. Malone and a genial party of friends, motored down to Warm Springs last Saturday. It was a most delightful trip, the three big motor cars journeying along and covering the nerty 100-mile distance in about five hours. Sunday was delightfully spent at the resort, and the party left late Sunday afternoon, reaching the city Sunday night. W. E. Park, city man for the Capital City, and R. S. Abbott, manager of the Ford Motor company, were in the party. Another trip is being planned by them for next Tuesday, when they will motor to Tallulah Falls to spend about two days.

In Railroad Wreck.

A. J. Garner, north Alabama firing liner for Rice & Hutchins Atlanta Co., writes in to the house that he was in a bad railroad wreck a few days ago near Haleyville, but that outside of losing his baggage he escaped none the worst. Several people were badly shaken up, he writes. He thought he would be able to get his baggage within a few days after the wreckage was cleared up and the tangles straightened out.

B. H. Messer, wife and daughter, and W. F. Gaston, wife and daughter, were among those who will spend the week at Charleston with the City Salesmen. Both Mr. Messer and Mr. Gaston are city men for Fain & Stamps.

ALBANY BOYS TO HAVE BARBECUE AND PICNIC

Secretary Wallace, of T. M. S. and P. Association, Predicts Good Times for Travelers.

Editor Firing Line: I am knocking at your door again, feeling, as I do, that the latch-string hangs on the outside, and that you are always willing to contribute space to those who have the best interests of the traveling men at heart.

With some prospect of an understanding between this country and Germany before us, also a fairly good crop outlook in this part of Georgia, in the way of melons, cantaloupes, grain and cotton, the traveling boys figure on "killing a big one" this fall, if everything goes well.

Along with this assurance of good business we shall make preparations for a barbecue and picnic for traveling men and their wives about the first week in September. We want to make this occasion one not soon to be forgotten by those who attend. Entertainment as well as refreshments will be provided and we will expect all the "boys on the road" here that day.

While this it not a political organization, still, if with political aspirations, this will be a fine time to get acquainted and to extend the usual hearty handshake.

I received a letter a few days ago from President Wilson thanking me, as secretary of this organization, and all other members, for expressions of confidence at this critical moment in his diplomatic relations with Germany. We hear very few people talking in a warlike vein towards Germany. Don't know how the other "boys" feel about it, but will acknowledge I am not as mad now as I was a few days ago, though I could get mad again if I was forced to do so.

F. A. WALLACE,
Sec. T. M. S. & P. Asso.

BIG OPENING BILL FOR RAGAN-MALONE CO.

One of the largest and best house sales recorded at Ragan-Malone company's was put over last week. It was an opening bill for a Florida merchant and ran well up into the thousands. The company reports that the past week was one of the best it has enjoyed for some time, being larger than any week so far in the month, and that it looks quite likely that the business for this month will eclipse the sales for June a year ago.

"We consider that a splendid record," said Walter Barnwell, of the notion department. "Our house sales have been remarkably good, the boys on the road are sending in a nice volume of business, and we will round out the month ahead of last June. This month last year was a good one with us, so if we can top it a bit we will feel like a good old times are sure enough back with us.

Appetite Follows Good Digestion

Nearly everyone indulges their appetite and the digestive organs are abused, resulting in a congestion of poisonous waste that clogs the bowels and causes much misery and distress.

The most effective remedy to correct this condition is the combination of simple laxative herbs with pepsin, known as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. This is a natural, pleasant-tasting remedy, gentle yet positive in action, and quickly relieves indigestion, constipation, sick headache, belching, etc. Drug stores sell Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin at fifty cents and one dollar a bottle, and in thousands of homes it is the indispensable family remedy. For a free trial bottle write Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 452 Washington St., Monticello, Ills.

DIAGRAM OF EMORY UNIVERSITY CAMPUS.

The plans for the campus of Emory university have been completed by Architect Henry Hornbostel, and they carry out the design outlined by him last week, that is, the grouping of buildings will be such as to allow elasticity for future encroachment.

Rather than to get the picturesque, an effort has been made to provide the monumental effects sought in the buildings of Virginia and California universities.

In drawing the plans, advantage was taken of the central plateau which is flanked by parallel streams.

The buildings to occupy the central plateau will be the library, the school of divinity, the law school, the school of arts, the school of design and the school of natural science.

In the quadrangular placement the commanding library building shall occupy the central position on the front of the plateau, flanked in the foreground by the schools of design and theology.

The medical college will be placed in the background and on the higher part of the central plateau. The buildings for the nurses, the clinics and the laboratories will be in the rear of the medical college.

As will be seen by the diagram, provision will be made for an open field with a gymnasium and track. Near the field will be the tennis courts.

Full advantage has been taken of the natural scenery and the campus will not only have buildings conveniently located, but the whole effect will be artistic.

Dr. Hornbostel states that Emory university will have for its location one of the most ideal spots in the south.

EICHELBERGER UPHELD BY ANTI-SALOON LEAGUE

Attacks on Him Are Declared to Be the Work of Opponents of Prohibition.

Declaring that the attacks which have been made against Dr. G. W. Eichelberger, superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League of Georgia, in various papers of the state are the work of opponents of prohibition, the officers of the league, including several of the prominent ministers of Atlanta, have issued to the public a reply upholding Dr. Eichelberger.

It is pointed out that he was induced to take up this work in Georgia because the league was unable to find in the state a capable and qualified leader not already engaged in some other line of civic and moral uplift. Dr. Eichelberger, the report says, has a long and unusual record for efficient work in this service in Texas and Mississippi. He was brought to his present post only after insistent effort had prevailed against the protests of the anti-saloon workers of Mississippi, they say.

The friends of beer and liquor clubs make no protest," the report continues, "when the wholesale brewers and liquor dealers of America send their highly paid representatives into Georgia, as they have been doing for years past and are now doing, as is well known to us, in an effort to defeat prohibition and law enforcement legislation. They do not protest if 'foreign' preachers are invited to our pulpits, especially if they show 'liberal' tendencies, nor do they hesitate to recommend the employment of 'foreign' teachers for our school rooms. They are quickly up in arms if we call a stalwart prohibition leader from a prohibition state. There are no state lines in the common battle against liquor and its destroying work. The attacks made on Dr. Eichelberger show that his work has been splendidly effective."

Those signing the vindication of Dr. Eichelberger follow: William D. Upshaw, vice president National Anti-Saloon league; J. L. Wise, president Georgia Anti-Saloon league; Frank J. Dudley, vice president Georgia Anti-Saloon league; H. M. DuBose, chairman headquarters committee; R. H. Kime, assistant treasurer Georgia Anti-Saloon league; Peyton H. Todd, treasurer Georgia Anti-Saloon league; E. C. Cartledge, secretary Anti-Saloon league; W. H. Preston, secretary board of trustees; A. R. Holderby, S. R. Ledbetter, A. F. O'Kelly, W. A. Ward, J. E. Wilhelm, members of the board, and Jerry E. Moore, pastor Harris street church, and C. O. Jones, pastor Trinity Methodist church.

CHARGES A FRAME-UP, SAYS JAMES H. SURBER

Internal Revenue Agent Arrested on Orders From Department at Washington.

On the general charge of conspiracy, James H. Surber, for fourteen years internal revenue agent for the district comprising Georgia and Florida, was arrested yesterday by Deputy Marshal J. R. Brock, pending an investigation which has been ordered by the department at Washington of his connection with the service.

It is said that the government charges that certain of the distillers in the neighborhood of Fort Smith, Ark., were notified in advance of the visit of the department inspectors and were thus enabled to cover up any alleged nefarious dealings under the federal laws, and that Mr. Surber was a party to these evasions of the inspectors. Knox Booth, the agent for the Nashville district, has already been indicted for alleged conspiracy and several distillers of Arkansas are now awaiting trial under heavy bonds in the same connection.

"The issuing of this warrant came to me as a thunder clap from a clear sky," said Mr. Surber. "I am at a loss to understand the purport of it. I have been in the service twenty-five years and head of the local division for fourteen years, and during that time have never had any jurisdiction in the district of which Arkansas is a party. I know nothing of the government's charges so far. It is only a guess on my part, but I have concluded that it is a frame-up in the service, a matter of politics, so to speak, which has nothing to do with my connection with the Georgia branch of the service.

Mr. Surber was brought before United States Commissioner Carter Saturday and was admitted to bond under $5,000. It is his understanding that the charges preferred against him will be considered at Fort Smith in the near future, where the violations are said to have been discovered. This case is said to be only one of many which have been made as a result of a general shake-up in the internal revenue service, and many others may be involved.

Who Found the BROKEN COIN

The finding of The Broken Coin in an old Curiosity Shop in New York is the starting point of a startling galaxy of adventures of pretty Kitty Gray, the clever girl reporter. The Broken Coin has the earmarks of a news story to Kitty but it changes the whole trend of her life. The story of The Broken Coin is the latest product of that master writer, author of "The Mississippi Bubble," "54-40 or Fight," "The Law of the Land," "John Rawn," "The Purchase Price," and many other popular stories.

Emerson Hough

Mr. Hough has attained a place in the foremost ranks of American writers of fiction of the present day. Many others of our popular authors are more prolific, but few of them have written more books that will stand the test of time.

The Broken Coin is the greatest story Mr. Hough has ever written. It is a wonderful story of love and romance leading to a throne, written in an absorbing series of fascinating chapters throbbing with real red-blood interest without the slightest tinge of sensationalism or unreal situations; in fact, a clean-cut romance that you will enjoy to the last line.

George Jordan Led Flag Hitters for First Season

By Dick Jemison.

George Jordan, Brunswick's brilliant young catcher, was the leading batsman of the F. L. A. G. league at the conclusion of the first half-season, which ended, Tuesday, June 22, with an average of .319. His teammate, Reilly, with .317, and another teammate, Willard, with .310, were next in line.

Dunning, of Gainesville, made the most hits, with 61. Reynolds, of Brunswick, was next, with 60, and Reilly and Willard, of Brunswick, tied for third, with 58 each.

Reddy, of Dothan, led the run-getters, with 47 tallies. Reynolds, of Brunswick, was next, with 39, and-Reilly, of Brunswick, third, with 35.

Reilly, of Brunswick, led the base-stealers, with 22 pilfers. Wilkes, of Gainesville, and Stewart, of Waycross, were next, with 20 each.

Heck, of Dothan, led the sacrificers, with 27. Nance, of Brunswick, with 19, and Jordan, of Brunswick, with 17, were next in line.

The reason that Brunswick led the pennant race is at once apparent, with the number of men that they have at the top in all departments of play. Here are the records of the players through Tuesday's games:

John N. Willys Believes In Newspaper Advertising

The Overland is frequently referred to as the most advertised of all motor cars. And this extensive publicity is declared by John N. Willys, president of the Willys-Overland company, to be the principal reason why the Overland can be sold at a price which would mean a loss on every car to the majority of manufacturers.

Mr. Willys points out how the widespread advertising done by his company has made it possible to market the new Overland Model 83 for so low a price as $765.

"I recently overheard a remark during a conversation in the smoker of a Pullman, indicating that the talker believed Overland advertising must cost about $200 per car. This, of course, is preposterous. Last year our advertising cost per car was a little less than 2 1-2 per cent; this year it will be a trifle less; next year materially less—due to greatly increased production.

"The quantity of our production spreads all overhead, so that the item per car is so small that the buyer pays for but little more than the actual material and labor, plus a reasonable profit, which, also because of quantity, is small per car.

"Given two cars of equal mechanical and structural worth—the one built in large quantities can always sell for a lower price than the one built in limited numbers. The larger the production, the greater the supply of materials purchased. And the larger the order for raw materials, the lower the price to the manufacturer.

"There is a benefit other than price which the consumer gets from the advertising—a guarantee of quality. Good advertising may sell a poor article for a time, but we doubt if it can do it continuously on a profitable basis. Extensive advertising to pay continuously must be backed by a good article."

Mr. Willys states that the advertising done by his company in the newspapers has brought big results.

"I have all the faith in the world in newspapers," he says. "The daily newspaper is the university of the masses. People who read no other publications read newspapers. They get their news of the world and form their opinions of people and things from what they read in the dailies.

"And the influence of the newspaper is by no means local. It extends for a radius of many miles around the center of publication. The great body of newspaper readers is composed of millions of city residents and hundreds of thousands of people who live in neighboring cities and towns and in the country. The vast army of travelers which every city draws read the newspapers.

"Consequently we bring the Overland message to the attention of the public through the medium of these papers. We find that our efforts in this direction have met with much success. Our newspaper advertising, together with advertising in other fields, is, in a way, a measure of our success."

RENFER RELEASED; CHANDLER SIGNED

Memphis, Tenn., June 26.—(Special.) Memphis today sold Pitcher Renfer, recently secured from Nashville, to the Dallas club, of the Texas league. Lane Chandler, the University of Mississippi pitcher, with Memphis last season, sent to Roanoke and recalled, was signed today.

LIBERAL OFFER MADE BY GOODYEAR COMPANY

Will Refund Cost if S-V Tires Are Not Superior to Competing Makes.

The Goodyear Tire and Rubber company announces a continuance through July, August and September of the offer to refund the entire purchase price if Goodyear S-V tires fail to prove superior to competing makes on a basis of cost per mile.

The announcement made covering April, May and June, was to the effect that where opposite wheels are equipped at the same time, one with a Goodyear S-V and one with any other standard tire of like rated size, bought in the open market, if the Goodyear S-V fails to cost less per mile than the other, the full purchase price will be refunded.

"There are two main reasons for our continuance of the offer," says C. W. Martin, jr., manager motor truck tire department. "First, many truck owners desiring to take advantage of our offer, have been unable to do so, as they did not need a replacement of tires during the months specified. And second, the magnificent response to our challenge has rendered it such a complete success, that we simply can't let go.

"Many truck tire users have wondered why we dare make such a positive proposition. Our offer is based on records of 5,000 test tires and we know what our S-Vs can do. We are not arguing that we excel rival truck tires. We are guaranteeing it absolutely.

"The tires are pressed on in a few minutes at a minimum pressure of 25 tons. This prevents any possibility of creeping and eliminates all auxiliary fastenings.

"This new Goodyear S-V appears to me to be the limit of perfection in a truck tire. It certainly excels anything heretofore offered. On this fact we are staking the whole price of the tire."

SAXON MOTOR COMPANY PLANS NOVEL CONTEST

A novel contest among automobile dealers is about to be staged by the Saxon Motor company. The contest will take place on July 15, which will be known as Saxon "Six" day. On that day dealers from all over the country will start from the factory driving new Saxon "Sixes" to their home towns.

A silver loving cup will be given to the dealer making the best record on gasoline and oil consumption. The loving cup will be presented by the Saxon Motor company and will be engraved with the dealer's name, date of the contest and the record made on the trip.

According to the rules of the contest, only those dealers will be eligible for the prize who drive at least 100 miles in making the trip home. Each dealer taking part will order one or more "Sixes," which he and members of his organization will drive home on July 15.

Following a banquet on the evening of July 14, the start will be made at noon, July 15, from Cadillac Square, in the center of Detroit. Mayor Marx acting as official starter, and representatives of the Detroit newspapers officiating as checkers. The local newspapers in the dealers' home towns will check the arrival of the contestants and send to Detroit a statement of gasoline and oil consumed. No effort will be made to make any speed records, the contest being entirely for economy and efficiency.

From the way entries are coming in to the factory it is expected that a great many dealers will take part in the contest. In fact, the practice of coming to Detroit to drive cars away is already the custom of a great many Saxon dealers who make the trip to Detroit for the purpose of trying to get additional cars over and above their regular allotment.

Trainload shipments and an operating schedule of 120 cars a day are making the June record of the Saxon factory the largest month in the history of the company. The Saxon is now one of the leading producers of motor cars in the industry.

MOTORCYCLE RIDERS SEEK TAX REDUCTION

Do Not Believe They Should Have to Pay as Much as Drivers of Machines.

One of the most important questions of interest to the 4,000 motorcycle riders in the state of Georgia which the legislature now in session will be asked to act upon is the $5 tag tax that is imposed upon the rider of a motorcycle for the privilege of riding his machine over the roads of the state for a year. He has to pay the same tag tax that is asked of the driver of an automobile, whether his machine costs $500 or $5,000.

It is generally conceded by very nearly every member of the legislature and senate that have been approached on this question that the tax of $5 on motorcycles is unjust and unfair. This question was brought before the legislature last year, but was defeated by a small majority, although the rural mail carriers, who are greatly interested in this bill, had passed a resolution at their convention held in the Kimball house on July 4 last, asked the legislature to amend this act in such a way as to reduce the price of the tag tax on motorcycles to $2, as there are probably over 500 rural carriers in the state who carry the mails on motorcycles.

Gus Castle, who is director for the southeastern states of the Federation of American Motorcyclists, has taken the matter in hand and has been promised the support of quite a number of the members of the house to vote for the amendment when brought up.

Several of the members who are present at this session have automobile bills or amendments to bring before the house during this session. Among them is Senator Callahan, in talking over the difference between the tax as charged the automobile and motorcycle, Senator Callahan saw that it was unfair, and has promised to take care of this in his amendment.

Mr. Blackburn, representative of Fulton county, has been approached, and is heartily in favor of the amendment asking for a reduction of the tax, bringing it down to at least $2 a year. The R. F. D carriers all over the state have taken the matter up with their various representatives, S.; it is an almost assured fact that this unfair taxation of the motorcycles will be remedied during this session, and in all probability the reduction will be brought to the figure that will not be over $2 a year, which, of course, will meet the approval of every rider of a motorcycle in the state.

GULL SCRIBE WISHES KELLY BETTER LUCK

Says Barney Sheridan in The Mobile Register:

"While the Gulls have been floundering around losing game after game through tough breaks and the like, Herb Kelly, Mobile boy, now pitching for Atlanta, seems to be troubled with the same ailment. Herb recently held New Orleans hitless for eight innings, but a couple of hits in the ninth beat him. Yesterday he held Birmingham hitless for nine innings, then lost in the tenth when he walked a man, made an error and allowed one hit. Such are the tough breaks of the game and though beaten, the youngster has pitched himself into good standing all over the Southern league. Maybe Herb has a touch of Mobile luck; because of the place he calls his home, we're pulling for him to break the streak and ring up victories such good pitching deserves."

This year the Studebaker announcement is more significant than ever before. It demonstrates more conclusively than ever Studebaker's leadership in the industry. For once again, Studebaker is announcing new cars at prices that completely recast all standards of value in the automobile industry. And never before has a dollar bought so much as it buys in these new Studebakers. They are the best cars in every detail that Studebaker ever built.

But while the prices are remarkably low, Studebaker has made no effort to manufacture a small, low-price car, to compete purely on a price basis.

THE PRICES ARE LOW SOLELY:

1—Because of largely increased volume of production:
2—Unrivaled manufacturing resources:
3—The Studebaker policy of manufacturing our cars complete in our own factories and thus eliminating parts-makers' profits:
4—The greatly increased efficiency resulting from 4 years study and concentration on the manufacture of two chassis:
5—The high percentage of interchangeability of parts in the two chassis.

And Studebaker is merely passing along to buyers of the new cars the FULL benefits of these notable economies. You may question in your own mind the quality of these cars, considering the remarkable reductions in price when compared with our last year's models.

But we simply invite you to make any comparisons you like with last year's cars or with this year's models of other makers to see what resources and manufacturing experience such as Studebaker has at its command can accomplish.

A whole Book of Specifications couldn't begin to convey the impression that your first glimpse of the cars will give—you must see the cars to appreciate them.

SOCIAL LIFE IN MACON

Macon, Ga., June 26.—(Special Correspondence.)—Enthusiasm as to social affairs seems to have descended principally on the younger set during the week just past.

The galeties of the week were ushered in by a dance given by Misses Elisabeth and Mary Del McCaw at their home on College street, Monday evening. About forty couples were on the floor during the evening.

The Children of the Confederacy conference, which was held Wednesday morning, was preceded on Tuesday by a delightful buffet luncheon given by Mrs. Dorothy Blount Lamar, for whom the Macon chapter was named. Miss Mildred Rutherford, of Athens, the "children's" directress, was an honored guest of the occasion. Mrs. Jack Solden presided at the punch bowl.

Miss Ruth Hardwick, of Atlanta, and Miss Frances Hardwick, of Cleveland, Tenn., were the inspiration of two pretty parties on Tuesday. In the morning Miss Margaret Wise complimented them with a sewing party. Hot luncheon followed, where covers were laid for twelve. Tuesday evening, Miss Margaret Brown, whose house guests the Misses Hardwick are, was hostess at a prom praty in their honor.

Miss Loulie Ellis was the gracious hostess at a supper given for Miss Harriett Kennedy, of Athens, who is visiting Mr. and Mrs. Robert Ellis at their beautiful suburban home at Rivoli. Covers were laid for eight.

A pretty compliment for Mrs. Rogers Wilson, of Savannah, who was formerly her uncle, Mr. W. R. Rogers, was the bridge tea at which Mrs. James McCraw was hostess Tuesday afternoon. The guests included Mrs. Wilson, Mrs. McCaw, Mrs. Marshall Ellis, Mrs. Cecil Roberts, Mrs. Ross Chambers, Mrs. Arthur Dasher, Misses Gray Goodwin, Mary Chambers, Leila Rogers, Evelyn Estes and Mrs. Frank Rogers, Jr. Clusters and shasta daisies graced the mantels in the rooms where the game was played, and dainty handkerchiefs were given for top score at each table.

In honor of Miss Carolyn Ross and her guests, Miss Ida Brannon and Miss Marion Powell, Mrs. Everett was hostess Tuesday evening at a beautiful supper party at her home on Washington avenue. After supper a number of young men stopped in and dancing followed until a late hour.

Miss Anne Mercer entertained at two tables of bridge Tuesday morning in honor of Miss Harriett Seymour, of Thomasville, the charming guest of Miss Mildred Taylor. The interesting game was played on the porch, which was beautiful with hanging baskets of coreopsis, and boxes of ferns and petunias. A delicious luncheon followed the game. Miss Seymour was again an honor guest at a prom party Thursday evening given by Miss Taylor at her home in Ineville.

One of the smartest affairs of the week was the barbecue at Lakeside Wednesday evening given by Mr. and Mrs. Tom Lowe for the much feted guests of Miss Carolyn Ross. Miss Ida Gentry and Miss Marion Powell, the party, which motored out about 6:30, included Misses Anna Clark, Addie Small, Margaret McKenny, Messrs. Pete Burks, Cleve Massee, Everett Pitman, Edgar Pope, Milton Riley, Dean Blackwell, John Ross and John Brown, Mr. and Mrs. E. M. Everett and Mr. and Mrs. Ross.

The regular dance at the Hussars was well attended Thursday evening, and unusually enjoyable.

Wednesday evening Miss Charlotte Norris entertained a number of friends at her home in Baconsfield with a prom prty which broke the ice of entertainment seems quite the hit of the season, with the college set.

Tea served on the porch by Misses Martha Nottingham and Enna Davis. The color scheme was yellow and white, nasturtiums, daisies and coreopsis being the favorite flowers. The lawn was a veritable fairy land, lighted by Japanese lanterns.

Golf particularly enjoyable on account of the heat of the past few days was the picnic given Tuesday afternoon, when boating and swimming were the principal features of the evening. The guests were those of Miss Claude Estes and her popular guest, Miss Lovett, Inglesby.

Miss Evelyn Estes entertained her weekly bridge club Thursday afternoon. Those included Misses Estes, Mrs. Archie Drake, Mrs. Ross Chambers and Miss Leila Rogers.

Misses Fannie Blow and Alice Witt, of Knoxville, Tenn., who were out-of-town guests at the Adams-Gray wedding last week, have been visiting Miss Helen Hines, where they have been delightfully entertained. They left the end of the week for St. Simons, where they are guests of Miss Ruth O'Berry. The girls will be chaperoned by Mrs. Fred Hines, Jr., of Atlanta, who, with three children, is spending some time at that attractive coast resort.

NORCROSS, GA.

The most enjoyable event of the season was "Camp Chattahoochee" given the night of June 18th at the Norcross station by Misses Mary Summerour and Hallie McClure.

The lake, on the banks of the Chattahoochee, was a most ideal one for such festivities as boating, swimming and dancing. Special attractions, which added much to the pleasure of the guests, were the auto ride to "Silver Hill," where tobogganing was enjoyed; the "Camp Bar" around the camp fire on Saturday night, and the barbecue on Sunday, when about sixty-five guests were present.

A unique factor, which displayed the originality of each genius of the guests was the edition of "The Chattahoochee Breeze," which needs mention only as a souvenir of the occasion. Perhaps the most pleasant event of the week-end was the informal reception given the camp members by Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Miller at their beautiful home on Needmore farm. Various toasts were given, and other amusements enjoyed.

MADISON, GA.

One of the prettiest rook parties of the season was that given on Tuesday afternoon by Mrs. John Torbert on Tuesday afternoon. Vases of roses, sweet peas and nasturtiums were the decorations and these were served during the game. The prizes were both handsome and beautiful, attractive, consisting of Tiffany salad, served in orange baskets, open-shaped sandwiches, chicken and beaton biscuit, dressed tomatoes and iced tea, with cherries. The ices and cakes were delicious and enjoyable one.

The June meeting of the Morgan county U. D. C.'s is always the social event of the year, and the elegant home of Mrs. Henry Fitzpatrick was the scene of much merriment on last Tuesday; the final meeting of the season, according to recent by-laws, the following officers were re-elected: President, Mrs. S. S. Thompson; vice president, Mrs. J. W. Snelling; second vice president, Mrs. W. H. Barnett; recording secretary, Mrs. Mary Ware; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Hearl Hitchcock; treasurer, Miss Bessie Atkinson; press reporter, Mrs. Ben Vason; historian, Mrs. Ben Anderson; registrar, Mrs. Robert Douglas; auditor, Miss Mary Dougherty; Mrs. K. S. Anderson, the enthusiastic historian, made quite a talk portraying the glorious days of the Confederate reunion, which she recently attended.

Mrs. Robert Douglas entertained delightfully Wednesday at rook. A nice crowd was present, and the afternoon passed off most pleasantly.

ANY KIND OF A JOB WILL SUIT THIS MAN

Applies to Associated Charities for Work in Order to Support Sister.

"I'll take just anything in the world you can get for me to do," said Sam Roberts, Saturday afternoon while applying to the Associated Charities for work. "I don't care what it is. You can't get a job too mean or too distasteful for me. I need the money."

For almost an hour Sam had been waiting in the outer office of the Associated Charities to see someone who could help him.

His tale was not unusual, according to Superintendent Logan, but his desperation in telling it and eagerness for work, no matter what kind, was.

Sam stated that he had been a resident of Atlanta for the past nineteen years, having come here from Macon. He and his sister live together. She takes in sewing and Sam does any kind of odd jobs.

According to his story they had managed to get along very nicely until just a few weeks ago when work for both of them became scarce.

"We will have to have something before Monday or we will be hungry," he stated. "This is the first time in my life that I have had to ask of alms. I am fifty-three years old and for the first time am up against it."

"I used to be a lot better off than I am now," he continued, "but after my wife died about twenty years ago I somehow lost my grip on things and since then I have not cared just how I did things. All I have wanted is a place for my sister and myself to stay and something for both of us to eat."

The superintendent promised to help Sam and immediately set about fixing things so he and his sister would not have to go hungry. Mr. Logan stated that he felt Sam's was a worthy case.

RECORDER JOHNSON ASKS EXAMINATION OF OWNERS OF CARS

Because Max Cohen's auto ran amuck, broke down an iron post and came near killing a policeman, Recorder Johnson wants a city ordinance passed that will require all persons who drive auto cars to stand an examination.

Cohen's car got away from him opposite the union passenger station last week, backed up on the sidewalk and knocked down an iron post that holds up the shed. The post hit Officer W. C. Hardy and injured his leg so badly that he was laid up for five days.

Cohen's excuse was that he had been driving an auto only ten days and was so green that he did not know how to control the car.

Under the evidence the recorder said he was obliged to dismiss the case. He said he would try to get council to pass a law to require all auto drivers to stand an examination.

S. V. D. WINS GOOD GAME FROM G. ELECTRIC.

After playing in hard luck for the past four games, the S. V. D. team came to life Saturday and triumphed over the General Electric team by the score of 5 to 2. Murphy pitched wonderful ball, striking out eleven men and giving up only three hits, two of them scratches. His support was all that could be desired. Robertson, Smith and William Morgan featured with their hitting, each getting two hits. Fox, the Georgia star, pitched a nice game for General Electric, but was hit when hits meant runs, while his support failed him at critical times.

Romance of a Machinist Who May Become a Rear Admiral

ATTAINMENT! Rank! Position! Romance!

Attainment.—Achieving everything in life that his fondest dreams had conceived.

Rank.—Winning a place in his chosen field that places him on a footing of equality with men who have enjoyed early advantages that were denied him and the chance to rise, step by step, to the position of rear admiral.

Position.—A place second to none in the social scale.

Romance.—The right to woo and win the one girl in this world he deemed worth while and who will stand loyally at his side in the later years of his fight to win life's battle.

All these things, and more, have been crowded into the life of Mr. Louis Randolph Ford, Ensign, United States Navy, who perhaps before these lines have appeared in print will have been promoted to the rank of lieutenant.

At the recent commencement exercises of Columbia University Ensign Ford received the degree of Master of Arts. That in itself was enough to create a ripple of interest, inasmuch as the general but erroneous impression prevails that when a youth emerges from the United States Naval Academy, at Annapolis, he is through with his studies, for the time being at least, and from then on has only to don gold braid, much gold lace, buckle on his sword, pace the quarterdeck and win a wealthy wife. But none of these day dreams was ever permitted to enter into the reckoning of Mr. Ford. In the very first place he was not fortunate enough, when a barefooted youngster of far away Texas, to obtain an appointment to the United States Naval Academy as a cadet. True, he had wanted to enter the navy ever since he was old enough to turn the leaves of the books depicting the valiant deeds of John Paul Jones, Decatur, Farragut, Porter and all the other heroes of the seven seas. But if this ambition was to be fulfilled only an indomitable will, pluck, no end of hard work and the expenditure of much gray matter could make it possible.

Mr. Ford adheres to that ironclad rule which most of our officers of the navy and army have laid down for themselves—don't talk for publication. None of the facts gathered here could be drawn from Mr. Ford, who courteously but modestly remarked:—"In the first place, I don't care to see my name in print; in the second place, under no circumstances will I talk for publication; and, third but last, I don't think any gentleman, especially an officer in the United States service, care to prattle about himself. I not only don't care to but I don't intend to."

Then he snapped that firm, strong jaw of his and shut up as tightly as an oyster, and nothing could induce him to utter another word on the subject.

But the lord and master Mr. Ford has sworn to honor, obey and protect—Uncle Sam—is not quite so modest when it comes to discussing the achievements of his loyal sons. He keeps a very well tabulated record of all that those who enter his service have done and, further, what he expects them to do. It is no violation of his confidence to say right here that he expects great things of Mr. Ford, and when he elevated him to the dignity of an officer in his navy he did so with a full knowledge of this young man's capabilities and the odds he had overcome to make himself worthy of such an honor.

Here are the facts I gleaned from the departmental files, and here they are set before the reader without the least embellishment:—

Louis Randolph Ford was born at Jasper, Texas, on February 3, 1883. That, of course, makes him just thirty-two years old. He was one of seven children—three girls and four boys. When he was four years old his parents removed to Orange, Texas, a little lumbering town remarkable only for a very well equipped and extensive machine shop. Louis attended the public schools of Orange and graduated when fourteen years old. Conditions in his family were such that a college course was out of the question, and as there wasn't sufficient influence at hand to induce the Representative of that Congressional district to give young Ford an appointment to Annapolis there was only one thing left for the boy—and that was to go to work.

Louis Ford had been a deep and discriminating reader from earliest youth. His taste ran to works of a historical nature, although for fiction he invariably turned to dashing tales of the sea. A commission in the navy seeming unobtainable by the surest and easiest route, young Ford flatly announced that the day was not far distant when he would make Uncle Sam accept him as one of his officers. Naturally such a prophecy met with jeers, for it hasn't been so many years back that mere mention of rising from the ranks of the navy to a full fledged officer was regarded as next to impossible. But Ford kept his own counsel and cast about for a job.

His love of the water directed his steps to the piers of the boats that plied up and down the Sabine River, on whose banks Orange was pitched, and it was not long before young Ford got a job aboard one of the tugboats touching that little port. For three years he continued at this work, and then applied at the machine shop of his home town for a berth as an apprentice machinist. It was understood that this apprenticeship was to extend over a period of four years, but the youth showed such a marked aptitude for mechanics of all sorts that after two years in the shops he was doing the work of a full fledged machinist.

At about this time one of the travelling recruiting squads that the Navy Department at that time sent through the country, a practice not now in vogue, came to Houston, Texas, and, seeing the alluring advertisements that appeared in the newspapers, Ford went to Houston and after satisfying himself that there was a chance for advancement from the ranks, provided the young recruit did his duty, he decided to enlist. He was sent to the Mare Island Navy Yard, at San Francisco, as a machinist of the second class, his pay being fixed at $40 a month. He was soon transferred to the receiving ship that was being outfitted there, and a little later was attached to the monitor Wyoming, which was just being placed in commission. That vessel has since been rechristened the Cheyenne. After working on board this ship for three months Ford was advanced to the grade of machinist of the first class, with an increase of $15 a month in pay. This advancement came to him through the personal recommendations of the chief engineer to the captain in charge of the vessel, and the promotion was looked upon by his fellow machinists as one of the most rapid that any enlisted man had won.

From then Ford, the machinist, got the sea experience he had so long dreamed of. He was at Panama when the revolution started there, and was in those waters about nine months. Then he returned to the Puget Sound Navy Yard, and on the way from Panama made application for examination as a warrant machinist, he having been made a machinist mate while at Panama. Ford had no sooner arrived at the Puget Sound yard than he received notice that the department had appointed an examining board on engineering subjects before which he must appear. He took the examination and returned to his work in the yard's shops. His papers had been forwarded to Washington, and while waiting to hear the outcome of the examination he was ordered to report to Mare Island Navy Yard to stand an examination for the grade of chief machinist, a rank to which all warrant officers are advanced after six years of service. He passed this examination with flying colors, and after being assigned to the West Virginia he was transferred to Charleston, S. C., where he was assigned to the post of senior engineer officer on board the Baltimore.

All this time Ford had never lost sight of the fact that he intended to continue his meteoric flight through the various grades of non-commissioned rank until he became eligible for promotion to the commissioned grade. He wanted to be an ensign, which meant that a chasm yawned before him which his fellows among the warrant officers tried to convince him could not be bridged. But Ford would not be convinced. He had won his way thus far against terrific odds, and he saw no reason why he should not continue to advance. Accordingly, he made application for permission to stand an examination for an ensign's commission.

In July, 1912, Ford was ordered to Washington for the examination. To say that the trip meant more to the Texas boy than any he had ever taken expresses it but mildly. But he was confident from the outset and had no idea that he would fail to pass whatever test he was required to undergo. The grilling the young machinist went through lasted for sixteen days. At its expiration he was notified that he could return to his ship, the Baltimore, where he would receive word of the outcome of the examination.

His suspense was not of long duration, for in a few days he was officially notified that he had passed his examination with the highest marks ever made by a warrant officer. He was a full fledged officer of Uncle Sam's navy at last—the goal he had set for himself as a barefoot boy in Texas. He was ordered to proceed without delay to Mare Island Navy Yard, where his commission would be forwarded. In the meantime he was to go aboard the Vicksburg and report for duty. But these orders were countermanded before they could become effective, for while en route Ensign Ford was ordered to proceed to San Diego and report on board the San Francisco, whither his commission would be sent. In sixteen days it came.

Ensign Ford was soon transferred to the Iris, where after doing duty as officer of the watch he later was placed in charge of a gun division. Later he was transferred to the Denver and went with that ship during its cruise of South American waters. This experience was of inestimable value to him, but his fondest hopes were realized when, a few months later, he was ordered to go to Annapolis, where he was to report to the commandant of the Naval Academy for duty and receive instruction in the Academy's post graduate course. The Navy Department each year selects about fifteen young officers of exceptional standing to take this course, thereby fitting them for some special duty. The course which young Ford took included the study of radio engineering, structural engineering, naval construction, ordnance and gunnery.

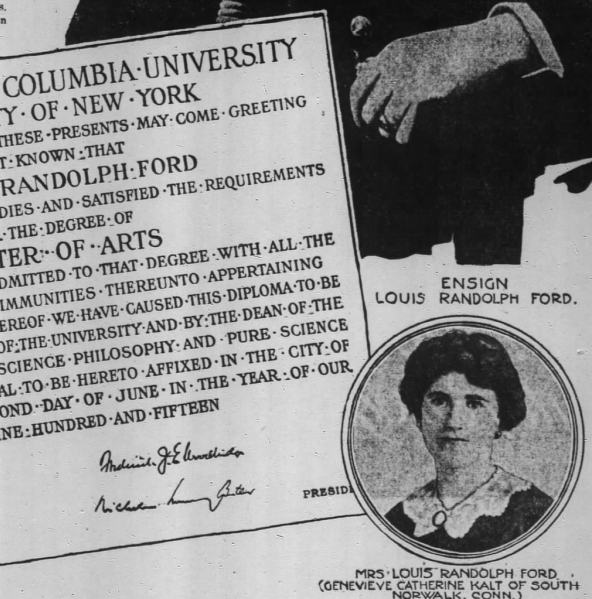
Ensign Ford spent the full term at the Academy, and at its close in June, 1914, he was ordered to the Naval Experimental Station, where he assisted in conducting numerous tests of naval machinery. He completed this work after a month and then went to New York city on his first leave as an officer of the line.

At the expiration of his leave Ensign Ford was overjoyed to learn that he had been ordered to return to New York and enter Columbia University, where he was to take a post graduate course, a line of which was to be outlined and selected by the university authorities in collaboration with the naval heads. This is as far as the Navy Department records show the career of Ensign Ford, and what follows has been learned from other sources.

Ensign Ford entered Columbia University and, as one of the professors there said, "he worked his head off from the moment he entered. I never saw a better student." At the close of the academic year he received his degree of Master of Arts.

Entering the navy as a machinist at $40 a month, Mr. Ford finds himself to-day enjoying a salary of $2,000 per annum, and this will be materially increased in a few weeks when his rank has been elevated to that of lieutenant. Every five years of service there comes an increase of ten per cent for twenty years. He cannot get more than a forty per cent increase of pay for this on this longevity basis.

ENSIGN LOUIS RANDOLPH FORD.



MRS. LOUIS RANDOLPH FORD. (GENEVIEVE CATHERINE KALT OF SOUTH NORWALK, CONN.)

When Mr. Ford went to New York on his first leave of absence as an officer he renewed acquaintance with close friends of his family he had known in Texas during his youth. Through them he received an invitation to a reception and dance to be given by some mutual friend living in Riverside Drive. It was at this dance he met Miss Genevieve Catherine Kalt, daughter of Mrs. Catherine Kalt, formerly of South Norwalk, Conn., but now of New York city. It was evident to all that it was love at first sight between the young naval officer and the girl with whom he danced all evening. Both were good dancers, and it was remarked by their friends that nearly all the invitations the two accepted for the ensuing fortnight were at functions where dancing was indulged in. The courtship was ardent, for in less than three months their engagement was announced.

They were married on New Year's Eve, 1914, the wedding being attended by many well known New York families and navy people. With his bride he went to Texas to spend his honeymoon and there present to his parents the first and only girl he had ever paid serious attention to since the day he announced to his family:—"I have no time for play or girls. I intend to win a commission in the United States Navy, and I guess that is a big enough job for any youngster who hasn't influence or pull to rely upon."

Ensign Ford is now attached to the New York Navy Yard, where he is to engage in further study along the line he pursued at the university with the purpose of eventually devoting himself to the designing of all sorts of naval machinery and the organization and management of shops in navy yards. The degree conferred upon the young machinist at Columbia University was all the more remarkable inasmuch as he had never taken the full course at the Naval Academy, and in consequence had never enjoyed the distinction of receiving his degree of A. B. But the faculty at the university decided that since he had taken and successfully passed an examination which earned him the rank of ensign he was, therefore, on an equal footing with other officers taking the same course who had entered the Naval Academy as cadets and graduated. Other enlisted men had been promoted to a commission, but young Ford was the first to continue on his upward course and become eligible for a degree at the hands of a university.

A day or two after receiving his degree at Columbia Ensign Ford was asked if his brother officers, men who had graduated from Annapolis, had been cordial toward him.

"No man could have been treated with more consideration and kindness than I have been since receiving my commission. The officers with whom I have been so fortunate to be associated all have been gentlemen of the finest type. The warm hand of fellowship was extended to me at the very outset of my career, and I owe a great deal to these same men. They have helped me over many a rough place, and as for snobbishness—well, if such a thing exists it must be outside the navy, for I have never seen the slightest indication of it."

It might be interesting to add, now that Mr. William Jennings Bryan is so much in the limelight, that Mr. Ford's brother, John D. Ford, for many years has been editor of the Timpson (Texas) Times. He was elected Mayor of Timpson and was several times re-elected. He was an ardent Bryan supporter, and each time Mr. Bryan ran for office Mr. Ford contributed his entire salary as Mayor to the Bryan campaign fund. Mr. Ford's salary as Mayor of Timpson is one dollar per annum.

Statement Made by Rear Admiral Evans on Day He Retired

Rear Admiral Robley D. Evans on the day of his retirement from the United States Navy, August 19, 1908, while at Lake Mohonk, in the course of an interview, said:—

"It has always been my policy to give the young Americans under my command every opportunity for advancement. I am proud of the fact that there are many young Americans holding commissions in the navy who won them fairly, and some of them are warrant officers performing valiant service for their country. MY EXPERIENCE HAS BEEN THAT IT IS IMPOSSIBLE TO KEEP DOWN AN AMERICAN BOY IF HE DESIRES TO ADVANCE HIMSELF. THERE IS NO MORE PROMISING FIELD FOR SUCH LADS AT PRESENT THAN THE UNITED STATES NAVY."

KILLING OF A BRIDE DESCRIBED IN COURT

London, June 26.—George Joseph Smith, whose three wives died in their baths and who now is on trial charged with the murder of one of them, Beatrice Mundy Smith, today was put through the ordeal of facing a partial reconstruction in court of the scene immediately after the death of Alice Burnham Smith, second of his three brides.

The bath tub in which Alice Burnham met her death was placed on a table in the court room while a physician, Dr. Billings, illustrated how, when he was summoned to the house where the couple lived, he found Smith supporting his wife's head just above the surface of the tub full of water. The witness testified the woman's head was toward the barrow end of the tub.

Evidence was introduced to show that Smith had purchased annuity insurance from a company after the woman's death. The trial judge explained to the jury that the significance of the evidence was that the prisoner in October told an insurance agent he would have $2,000 or $2,500 to invest in an annuity on his birthday in January.

"On the arrival of his birthday in January," said the judge, "he did have such a sum to invest, and that money was insurance money, payable upon his wife's death."

The case of the third bride, Margaret Lofty Smith, was then opened. She died in her bath in a house in Highgate. After brief testimony court was adjourned until Monday.

APPEAL FOR BOOKS FOR POOR CHILDREN OF PUBLIC SCHOOLS

An appeal to the parents of Atlanta school children for all second-hand text-books not to be used next year is being made by Superintendent Logan, of the Associated Charities, who intends to give them to the poor children of the city.

The superintendent states that there are worthy children in the city who are anxious to go to school, but who are denied that privilege on account of the inability of their parents to buy them supplies.

In many cases he states that the parents are too poor, and in some instances not enough interested to buy the books, although they would not object to their children going to school if someone else would pay the expenses of supplies.

"It is a shame to deny children an opportunity to get a smattering of an education just because they have not had the chance to get books," stated Mr. Logan, "and there are lots of children who will have complete sets of books left over from the past school year and never look at them again."

Mr. Logan will receive all donated books and supplies at the main Associated Charities office on the seventh floor of the Gould building.

ATTORNEY FORNEY TOOL OF A GANG OF CROOKS

Pittsburg, Pa., June 26.—That Thomas G. Forney, attorney, of Atlanta, Ga., is now being held here on a charge of having attempted to kill his father-in-law, Franklin A. Schneider, wealthy candy manufacturer, also of Washington, was today the report of a band of crooks, was the opinion expressed by the police tonight. The attack upon Mr. Schneider took place in the room of a local hotel early Thursday morning. He was struck on the head with a hammer, but his straw hat deflected the blow.

Forney, according to Captain Homer Crooks, of the detective department, today received a detailed written statement to the police, confessing his part in the plot to assault Schneider, his father-in-law and implicating George McHenry, said to be a waiter, now under arrest in Washington. Detectives left tonight to get McHenry and he will be brought here tomorrow.

According to the statement, McHenry was to have been paid $500 for killing Mr. Schneider. Forney admitted, the police claim, that he accompanied McHenry to Pittsburg to pay the latter's fare, but insisted that he came with McHenry to prevent him from doing any harm. Forney said he was 32 years old and that he and Schneider's daughter were married last December.

Mr. Schneider, who is president of a chain of candy stores throughout the country, said tonight that the confession of his son-in-law staggered him.

"I had hoped that developments in the case would establish his innocence although the detectives had placed almost positive proof of his part in the affair before me.

"I have no pity for him. I will not have anything further to do with Forney. The law must take its course for the attempt upon my life."

The material will be white granite, with inscription in white bronze. The detail will be floral. A fund of $110,000 has been raised for erection and maintenance of the memorial.

HUERTA ADHERENTS RUSHING TO BORDER

ceived most authentic information that on a train early this morning en route from Kansas City to El Paso there passed through San Antonio, Texas, Generals Ygnacio Bravo, Eduardo Caus, Vicente Callero, Jose Alessio Robles, Victor Huerta, Enrique Corositeta and several other military chiefs with former congressmen and senators of the Huerta administration.

"It is also reported, though not stated positively, that Victoriano Huerta is with the party.

"The agency is advised that the purpose of the visit of these men to Huerta's ranch in El Paso is to organize expeditions against Juarez and Ojinaga with mercenaries recruited along the border. In view of the suspicious circumstances of the trip, the confidential agency, by means of a note to the state department, has officially transmitted to the American governor the facts and advices on the subject.

"The confidential agency was advised today that the Carranzista army under General Obregon was engaging at Penoalas, south of Aguascalientes."

Statement by Carranza Agency.

The Carranza agency issued the following statement:

"Former officers of the federalist army are concentrating at El Paso with a view to organizing a new movement against the constitutionalist government in Mexico and in favor of the reactionary elements, according to information received today. In the group en route last now for El Paso are Generals Bravo, Caus and Elise Robles, together with a number of officers of lower rank in the old army of Porfirio Diaz and Victoriano Huerta.

"Nothing of Truth. It is known that the plan of the ex-federals is to eliminate Villa, assuming control of his forces and driving that army into line for the old regime. This is the plan of General Felipe Angeles, and it is on his initiation and as the result of his recent activities in the United States that the movement has been started.

"Elise Arredondo, head of the agency, tonight expressed the opinion that the attention of the United States government might be directed immediately to the present situation in view to stopping the organization of a reactionary movement at a time when the settlement of the difficulties which have beset the republic for nearly five years is at hand."

Such a Move Long Rumored.

While such a move has been rumored for several months and many conferences have been held in the United States by Mexicans identified with the Diaz and Huerta administrations, no effort thus far has been made to gain a military foothold in Mexico.

The fact that both the Villa and Carranza agencies here indicated in their announcements that they expected the United States in some way to use its influence toward preventing the former federals and their supporters from re-entering Mexico was regarded in some official quarters as likely to impress the present factions that they must reconcile their differences if they wish to get the moral support of the American government.

The Carranza agent, Mr. Arredondo, declared General Carranza believed the so-called reactionary party, formerly in control in Mexico, was busily engaged in fomenting a situation that would cause American intervention.

"My government," he said, "directs me to explain that efforts of the reactionaries are backed by diplomatic and consular representatives of foreign countries in Mexico who are serving the American state department false information with regard to the conditions prevailing in Mexico."

Charles A. Douglas, legal adviser to General Carranza, left tonight for Vera Cruz. He issued a statement saying:

"I am called to Vera Cruz by General Carranza for a conference. I understand he wishes to explain to me the present situation in Mexico in order that it may be known and understood here. I will remain in Vera Cruz for a week."

Carranza Forces Defeated.

Reliable reports reached here through official channels tonight that General Pablo Gonzalez, the Carranza commander, has met with a severe check by the Zapata troops in his effort to capture Mexico City. Details still are lacking. A brief report that General Carranza had ordered all available rolling stock from Vera Cruz to assist General Gonzalez, however, tended to confirm previous intimations that Gonzalez had suffered a decisive check.

For nearly a week Mexico City has been isolated from the outside world by rail and wire and the American government does not know whether or not the fighting has affected the safety of foreigners or their property.

The state department's summary of conditions in Mexico revealed today that the silence of the newspapers at Vera Cruz on the campaign against Mexico City had spread the impression in Vera Cruz that General Gonzalez had met with reverses. Officials generally were of the opinion that if the forces of General Carranza continued to meet with reverses the possibility of peace as between the factions might be more favorable since the Carranza faction, hitherto stimulated by military successes, has been uncompromisingly opposed to peace parleys.

VILLA AND ANGELES ARE IN HARMONY.

El Paso, Texas, June 26.—Miguel Diaz Lombardo, foreign minister in the Villa cabinet, emphasized the cordial relations existing between Villa and the Washington government at a conference with newspaper men here today. He said he probably would go to Washington later, but that the date of his departure still was uncertain.

"General Felipe Angeles is working in complete harmony with General Villa," said Lombardo.

There have been no further developments regarding Villa's invitation to Carranza for a conference on Mexican soil. Lombardo conferred with Villa supporters and leaders of various Mexican factions were closeted with their adherents, the report was received in private advices from Washington that the Eleventh United States cavalry and eight troops of the Thirteenth cavalry would be sent to Fort Bliss within the next two months.

Conflicting reports regarding the trip to San Francisco of Victoriano Huerta caused wide discussion in Mexican circles.

Recent activity of Mexicans along the border east of El Paso, the reported discovery of fourteen machine guns and 500 rifles in a local warehouse owned by parties known to be connected with the Cientifico party and the reported appearance of General Ynez Salazar with a small band of men in western Chihuhua, were discussed in connection with the destination of General Huerta.

Observers likewise professed to find significance in the reported presence of former General Pascual Orozco in El Paso.

Advices reching here tonight stated that several Mexicans, former adherents of General Huerta, were en route here from San Antonio, Texas.

FLOUR DENIED TO CIVILIANS.

Douglas, Arizona, June 26.—Flour mill owners in Sonora, Mexico, have been notified by Villa military authorities not to sell flour to civilians, as it will be needed for the army, according to reports brought here today.

Because of these orders farmers are said to be making their own flour in primitive stone mills.

Grain crops in many localities are going to ruin because of lack of labor to harvest them.

Laborers in southern Montesuma and northern Sahuaripa districts are refusing to accept issues of scrip, demanding wheat in payment of wages.

ANGELES NOT AIDING HUERTA MOVEMENT.

Boston, June 26.—General Felipe Angeles, visiting his family here, denied emphatically tonight that he had anything to do with the reported intentions of a large party of Huerta adherents to start a new military movement in Mexico, as charged in a statement from the Carranza agency in Washington.

"I know nothing of such a movement," he said, "and my purpose in this country has nothing to do with such a plan."

MORE U. S. TROOPS FOR THE RIO GRANDE.

Austin, Texas, June 26.—Governor Ferguson tonight announced that assurances had been given him by the federal government that more cavalry tropos will be detailed to the Rio Grande country. Orders also have been issued by the government for the increase of the ranger forces, particularly in the Big Bend country, where recently occurred encounters between rangers and Mexican bandits.

Owing to the present grave situation the people of the Rio Grande country are fearful of depredations on the Texas side of the border.

FRIENDS OF HUERTA GO TO EL PASO.

San Antonio, Texas, June 26.—Victor Huerta, nephew of General Victoriano Huerta, and several other men who held high places in the Mexican federal army during the Huerta regime, left here today for El Paso, where it was stated, they expected to meet General Huerta next week. The party included Ignacio Bravo, Jose Alessio Robles and C. M. Caus, all of whom formerly were generals in the federal army.

Santos Chocano, regarded as the spokesman here for General Felipe Angeles, tonight refused to discuss the report that a new Mexican party was being formed in the interest of Huerta and Angeles.

It was reported here that Vasques Tagle was favored by some of the leaders of the proposed new party as provisional president of Mexico. Eduardo C. Herrezza, formerly a Villa commander, declared that Tagle virtually had been selected.

STUDEBAKER MODELS STARTLE AUTO WORLD

Examinations Show That Cars Will Be High Grade in Every Particular.

By announcing for 1916 a seven-passenger, 40-horsepower four at $885 and a seven-passenger, 50-horsepower six at $1,050, Studebaker has once more startled the motoring public.

And once more Studebaker has proved that quantity production, scientific manufacturing methods and a wealth of manufacturing experience can produce prices and yet maintain high standards of quality.

That these are high-grade cars in every essential will be evident from the most superficial examination, and the specifications as given by the engineering department at the Detroit factory indicate that the quality is even higher than with last year's cars. They show that finer steels are to be used; that the upholstery is of the highest grade of leather on the market affords; that the finishing operations have been increased to twenty-five in number, while numerous other refinements of manufacture are still further indicative of quality.

Yet, despite all these improvements and changes, the prices have been radically reduced in comparison with those of last year. No four of this size and power has ever been offered at anywhere near the price of $885. No seven-passenger, 50-horsepower six ever came within hundreds of dollars of the new price of $1,050.

The new cars illustrate more conclusively than ever the accepted Studebaker policy of dignity in design. The Studebaker has never gone in for unusual lines, believing that the public does not care for cars that follow the fads of style that each new season sees.

Accordingly, in this year's cars, Studebaker has adhered to its customary lines, simply improving them in some slight details that add to effect. The line of the hood melts into the cowl, and the cowl itself has been made longer. The crown fenders are of a deeper design than ever and cling more closely to the curves of the wheels, and the lines of the entire car flow in unbroken curves from the radiator back to the tail-lamp. Grace is the dominant note of the whole design, and while the new cars are longer than ever and more massive in looks they are among the handsomest cars that have ever been produced.

EFFECT OF THE WAR ON FRENCH FARMERS

Paris, June 26.—The ministry of agriculture reported today that France has less corn, fodder, beets, sugar beets and potatoes under cultivation today than a year ago. The contrary is true of beets for the making of alcohol. The acreage in grapes is slightly less.

Corn	766,239	1,140,942
Alcohol beets	50,886	14,528
Fodder beets	1,168,184	1,549,135
Grapes	4,043,929	4,094,837

The foregoing applies to the whole of France, no distinction being made between invaded and uninvaded territory. Observing this difference, the following figures are given:

Invaded Territory.

Potatoes	272,206	437,385
Sugar beets	145,993	512,006

	1915.	1914.

AMERICAN COTTON SHIP ALLOWED TO PROCEED

London, June 26.—The American cotton steamer Leelanaw, under detention at Kirkwall since early June, has been allowed to proceed to Archangel to discharge her cargo, consigned to Russia.

The Leelanaw was detained because her cargo was consigned by way of Gothenberg, Sweden, which country forbids the export of cotton.

It was explained shortly after the Leelanaw's detention that because of the prohibition by the Swedish government on cotton exports, the British government desired some assurances that the cotton would reach Russia.

EVELYN NESBIT THAW SOUGHT AS A WITNESS

Fruitless Search Is Made for Harry Thaw's Wife in New York City.

New York, June 26.—In the lull today in the court proceedings to determine the sanity of Harry K. Thaw, it became known that the state is trying to find Evelyn Nesbit Thaw, central figure in the shooting of Stanford White, to place her on the witness stand. Process servers made a fruitless search throughout the city.

William T. Jerome, former district attorney, who has balked all Thaw's previous efforts for freedom, may be another witness for the state. Mr. Jerome is not connected in a professional capacity with the present proceedings. Other witnesses include a number of persons who are prepared, it is said, to testify concerning Thaw's early life.

It became known today that a representative of the attorney general commissioned to take the deposition of Dr. Charles W. Eliot regarding Thaw's days at Harvard, will be sent to Massachusetts next Wednesday.

JAPAN HAD PLANNED TO CAPTURE PEKIN

If Her Demands Had Been Refused by the Chinese Government.

Tokio.—(Correspondence of the Associated Press.)—If China had declined to meet the demands of the recent ultimatum by Japan, the Japanese program would have been to capture Pekin, which would have been "a matter before breakfast," and to have effected a military occupation of other centers of political power and wealth, according to semi-official newspapers.

The Japan Times, a journal printed in English, but controlled by representative and influential Japanese, which is usually believed to have good authority for its utterances, undertook to outline the course Japan would take, even before the diplomatic crisis with China had been passed.

In most quarters its publications of these details, customarily forbidden before the outbreak of war, was regarded as officially inspired, very likely with the object of convincing China that Japan was determined and would brook no delay.

The article made it clear that the "independent" action which Japan in her ultimatum said she would take if China was obdurate, would not necessarily be war. It would be better styled perhaps, a military and naval occupation of China pending acceptance of the Japanese demands. Nevertheless, it would be effectively an execution of the demands by force of arms.

The general staff had estimated the military force of China at 47 divisions, including 200,000 troops of modern training and 150,000 men of the old school. However, as these troops were scattered all over the Chinese empire, their mobilization and concentration would be difficult.

Japan's military base would be established at Tientsin. A fundamental necessity being the control of the principal means of communication, the Tientsin-Pukow and Pekin-Mukden railroads would have to be captured. Their occupation would firmly establish a Japanese foothold in China. The troops stationed at Tsingtau would be able to occupy Tsinanfu in a minute. The northern part of the Tientsin-Pukow railway, that is, the line between Tientsin and Tsinan, could easily be occupied, and with Tientsin the base of operation, Japanese soldiers would soon be seen marching on Pekin. In Pekin there was stationed one company of infantry, while in Tientsin were two companies, with machine guns. The soldiers in Pekin would act as escort for Minister Hioki in Tientsin where he would embark in a warship and proceed to Japan.

The account declared that in the south moves would have to be made jointly by army and navy, and then the better part of China would be under Japanese sway. Special care would be taken to protect Japanese and other foreign residents.

"When the centers of China are guarded by a garrison, the soldiers will be disbanded. Then all places will be put under the control of our army; peace and order are to be maintained by our military administration. If the Chinese army offers no resistance, things will be carried out in peace; but when they show any resistance our soldiers will be obliged to fire upon them. And it is to be feared that engagements will take place between the Chinese and Japanese troops here and there, as the land of China is so extensive that peace cannot be established at a moment's notice."

In Manchuria, the program continues, the two divisions under Lieutenant Generals Hungo and Ando would be concentrated in Mukden and marshaled against the seventeenth, eighteenth and twentieth divisions of the Chinese army. The two Chinese generals, Chan Tso-lin and Feng Lin-ko, who command these divisions, would soon surrender when informed of the real situation. The northern part of the Pekin-Mukden railway would be captured by Japanese troops. Great forces would then be landed at all points in the province of Chihli; Pekin would be seized immediately. Indeed, the fall of Pekin, as stated, would be a "matter before breakfast."

The outline concluded:

"In the south the power of our navy will soon tell. The Chinese ships can immediately be swept from the coast; and soon our land forces can be disembarked without any difficulty. The British troops garrisoned in Hongkong may be asked to co-operate with our soldiers in this part of the country. Thus our troops will carry all before them wherever they go in the land."

Bryan Visits Lansing.

Washington, June 26.—Former Secretary Bryan paid a farewell visit to the state department today before his departure for the Pacific coast. He called on Secretary Lansing and other officials.

"Did Alice take her husband's failure in the right spirit?" "Oh, yes. Just as soon as she knew he was going under she went out and bought her entire summer outfit"—Boston Transcript.

ANTI-LOCKER CLUB LAW DECLARED TO BE VOID

Judge Edrington Holds Tennessee Measure Unconstitutional—Appeal to Be Taken.

Memphis, Tenn., June 26.—Tennessee's new locker club law, prohibiting storage of liquors for individual use in social and fraternal clubs, was held unconstitutional in a decision handed down here today by Judge Jesse Edrington in the criminal court. The law became effective June 1, last. The ruling was made in a test case brought by a local fraternal organization.

The contentions were that the act was unjust and discriminatory; that the caption of the bill did not meet the requirements of the state constitution and that it was in violation of the fourteenth amendment of the federal constitution. The state supreme court is expected to pass upon the case at its September term.

AMERICANS MUST CARRY PHOTOGRAPH PASSPORTS

New York, June 26.—Americans leaving here today on board steamships for Europe were warned by agents of the various lines to provide themselves with passports with photographs of all members of their families more than 14 years old. This was in part due to receipt of information that during the last month seventeen Americans have been detained upon arrival in Liverpool for failure to carry such documents. Any alien leaving New York for Europe is permitted to travel on a steamship of his own nationality without a passport, but most of the lines reject all other passengers not so identified. This rule, it was learned, has been put into effect by the Holland-America, French, White Star, Scandinavian-American and Italian lines. Considerable delay in the landing of passengers at Liverpool is said to have caused by persons who, having been naturalized in the United States, declare when they arrive in England that they are British subjects.

Rev. Theodore Flood Dead.

Meadville, Pa., June 26.—Rev. Theodore L. Flood, well-known in Methodist Episcopal church circles, died at his home here tonight. Rev. Mr. Flood was associated with Bishop John H. Vincent in founding the chautauqua institution, and was founder and for twenty-five years editor The Chautauqua Magazine. He was 74 years old.

UNITED STATES LOSING ITS ORDNANCE EXPERTS

Army Officers Resign to Work for Private Manufacturers at High Salaries.

Washington, June 26.—Offers of big salaries to expert ordnance officers of the army by private manufacturers of war munitions have created such a serious problem in the war department that Secretary Garrison called on Attorney General Gregory for an opinion as to whether an army officer has an "inalienable right" to resign his commission in time of peace.

Four such resignations have been accepted, but two others recently tendered are being held up pending the attorney general's decision and the formulation of a general policy by the department. Ordinarily this question, frequently raised in the navy as a result of offers from shipbuilding companies to young constructors, gives the army little trouble. Few officers have been anxious to abandon their military careers and the certainty of retired pay for life to accept such inducements as usually are held out, and when an occasional resignation has been tendered acceptance has followed as a matter of course.

High Salaries Offered.

Now, however, the tremendous and growing demands of the warring European powers for arms and ammunition has made it well worth while to private manufacturers to pay handsome salaries to attract ordnance experts.

High government officials are reluctant to permit wholesale resignations under such circumstances, and even are inclined to consider it unpatriotic for officers to quit the service for more money. Apparently, however, the legal authorities seriously doubt that any law can be found to keep an officer in the army against his will, particularly if he has served a reasonable number of years after receiving his education at the Military academy.

Many officers on the retired list are employed by munitions companies, but the propriety of this never has been questioned, as there men have left the active list either for acceptable cause or after giving the government the full term of service required by law. Moreover, they still are at the call of the army in case of war or other emergency.

Another source of concern for the war department is the considerable number of civil employees, scientific men and skilled mechanics, leaving government arsenals and powder plants for private employment.

Waiting for Decision.

High government officials and army officers generally are awaiting with more than ordinary interest the determination of the issue by the attorney general. On his decision will depend whether ordnance experts will be permitted to enter private employment.

The problem thus presented to the war department is admittedly a serious one. Already six resignations have been submitted, two being held up pending the decision of the attorney general. The other four were accepted before the gravity of the situation was realized.

An effort will be made to prevent resignations if a way can be found to do so, although legal officers are said to be doubtful on this point. Officials consider it unpatriotic for officers to quit the service for more money.

Barons Sign Lindsay.

New Orleans, June 26.—The Birmingham Southern association club today signed Lindsay, a third baseman, formerly with New Orleans. Lindsay will succeed Hemingway, who is ill.

The trade was predicted in The Constitution several weeks ago.

Fayetteville Wins.

Fayetteville, Ga., June 26.—(Special.) Fayetteville won over Union City here today, 8 to 7. With the score tied in the last half of the ninth inning, Burks hit the ball over left field fence, scoring Jackson, who was on first, with two out.

SAXON MEANS STRENGTH
STAMINA AND SERVICE
This is the day of common sense in buying motor cars

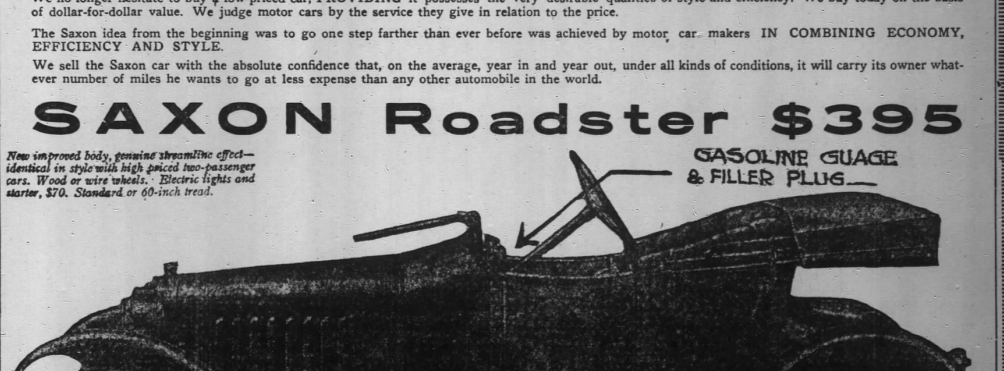
The day of false pride and extravagance over motor cars is past. They are no longer bought on a "price tag" basis to show that the buyer "had the price." We no longer hesitate to buy a low-priced car, PROVIDING it possesses the very desirable qualities of style and efficiency. We buy today on the basis of dollar-for-dollar value. We judge motor cars by the service they give in relation to the price.

The Saxon idea from the beginning was to go one step farther than ever before was achieved by motor car makers IN COMBINING ECONOMY, EFFICIENCY AND STYLE.

We sell the Saxon car with the absolute confidence that, on the average, year in and year out, under all kinds of conditions, it will carry its owner whatever number of miles he wants to go at less expense than any other automobile in the world.

SAXON Roadster $395

New improved body, genuine streamline effect—identical in style with high priced two-passenger cars. Wood or wire wheels. Electric lights and starter, $70. Standard or 60-inch tread.



The first cost of the Saxon places this sturdy car within the reach of every one. Its price is $395. Owners are amazed at the economy records of their new Saxons—28 to 36 miles per gallon of gasoline, 75 to 100 miles per pint of oil; 3,500 to 5,000 miles on a set of tires. Saxons average half a cent a mile in operation cost—one-fourth of a cent per mile per passenger—and will stand up. Think of the price—$395.

SAXON "Six" $785

WALK, WALK, WALK! Says Uncle Sam.

Government warns that we are becoming a sedentary nation and that the death rate before the age of forty has materially increased. If you take no other form of exercise you should walk five miles a day.

By DELIA AUSTRIAN.

"WALK, walk, walk," says Uncle Sam in a recent government bulletin. This comes not merely as a word of warning to the American men and women; it is almost an imperative command.

You must walk if you would maintain your health and prolong your life.

You may be surprised to learn that the death rate after the age of 40 is rapidly on the increase, notwithstanding the fact that the average length of life has been increased ten or fifteen years in the last twenty-five years. This is being caused, says our official health bureau, by our increased sedentary practices, which lead to hardening of the arteries, high blood pressure and other diseases of degeneration.

True, our mode of living as a great deal more sanitary than it was thirty years ago and greater protection has been secured against communicable diseases. Counteracting these measures, however, is the fact that most of us are occupied with more sedentary work than were our parents and grandparents. Either we work at home or in the office from seven to ten hours a day.

The average worker feels that because he is interested in his work little harm comes from it. This hypothesis is incorrect. The scientific facts are that the muscles, arteries and other organs as a result of sedentary occupation are weakening.

You should be instinct be fond of walking, because it is the most primitive and therefore the most natural exercise. Long before there were motor cars, trains or carriages men and women walked. Their only other means of conveyance were horses, and riding is not such a bad exercise in itself.

Our ancestors, the cave man and cave woman, had no tennis, golf, no rowing matches. Their only sport was walking and swimming, though occasionally they may have used the skull and bone for hockey or a similar game.

Those who do not have to walk now because they have motor cars and street cars at their command should take as much exercise as possible.

If you walk erectly the upper muscles of your body are energized, while the lower extremities are alternately contracted and relaxed. The muscles of the chest are also contracted and strengthened. In walking you increase your respiratory action and this actually tends to increase as well as facilitate the burning up of poisonous tissues.

By exchanging pure air for foul air the appetite is increased, digestion promoted and the flow of the blood to the brain is stimulated. This means not better physical condition alone but a better quality of mental work.

Dr. William S. Sadler Advocate of Walking

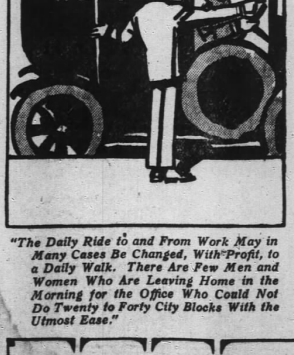
DR. WILLIAM S. SADLER, one of America's leading nerve specialists, is a firm believer in walking, and plenty of it. He says:

"Walking is a great aid in the management of nervousness. It improves the circulation, not to mention the digestion. It helps the neurasthenic to sweep away his mental cobwebs. I have found walking especially helpful in case it can be carried on in groups—in congenial company, but in the lesser forms of neurasthenia even the lone cross-country walk is found diverting, if it can be indulged in in the spirit of James Whitcomb Riley's 'A Country Pathway':

I come upon it suddenly, alone—
A little pathway winding in the weeds
That fringe the roadside, and with dreams my own
I wander as it leads

Full wistfully along the slender way,
Through summer ran of freckled shade and shine,
I take the path that leads me as it may—
Its every choice is mine.

And though it needs must lure me mile on mile
Out of the public highway, still I go,
My thoughts, far in advance in Indian file,
Allure me even so.



"The Daily Ride to and From Work May in Many Cases Be Changed, With Profit, to a Daily Walk. There Are Few Men and Women Who Are Leaving Home in the Morning for the Office Who Could Not Do Twenty to Forty City Blocks With the Utmost Ease."

"The daily ride to and from work may in many cases be changed with profit to a daily walk. There are few men and women who are leaving home in the morning for the office, or in the evening from the office for home, who could not do twenty to forty city blocks with the utmost ease and with the use of very little more time than is consumed in waiting on the corner for street cars, and in the slow journey of the trolley through traffic-crowded streets.

"The amount of daily exercise required has been the subject of much discussion in scientific circles. It is impossible to offer definite rules. Everything depends upon the individual, his strength, the condition of his muscles, etc. It is my opinion that for the average healthy man or woman the daily amount of exercise which would keep the body strong and healthy is represented by a five or six mile walk in the open air, arms swinging, chest well expanded, abdominal muscles rotund, the spinal curve well maintained—in fact, the whole body thoroughly energized.

"It must be remembered that this represents the sum total of exercise for one day. Now, if one does housework, walks to and from the office, climbs stairs or engages in any other line of work calling into use various muscles of the body—this work must be subtracted from the six-mile walk. This walk is suggested as representing an agreeable form of exercise.

"Walking on a level surface at the rate of three miles an hour represents an amount of physical work equal to lifting one-twentieth of the body weight through the distance walked; that is, a man weighing 150 pounds walking six miles has done physical work equivalent to transporting seven and one-half pounds over the distance walked—six miles.

"Stair climbing can be made to serve the place of mountain climbing. In order to perform the exercise of lifting 150 tons one foot high (the daily required exercise for the average healthy person—equivalent to walking six miles), it would be necessary to go up and down an ordinary flight of stairs 150 times during the day.

"A good form of indoor exercise is 'running in place'—such as taught at the gymnasium. 'Heel raising' is another good form of exercise. Rising on the toes (raising heel two inches each time) fifteen hundred times is equal to walking one mile, or (in case of person weighing 200 pounds) lifting twenty-five tons one foot high.

"Some hearty individuals when threatened with a cold are able to abort it by taking a long walk in the open air. This is a good idea, provided there is no fever and the cold is taken early. In the case of weakened or only moderately strong persons, and where the cold has had a good start, it would certainly be unwise to attempt to break it up by such measures."

Coach Stagg Says "Walk More, Ride Less"

ALONZO STAGG, professor and director of departments of physical culture and athletics at the University of Chicago, approves of the statement made by the public health service and by Dr. Sadler. As he puts it, "Walk more and ride less. Frown on the auto car no less than the street car when you have a chance to walk. Walking is decidedly good; it is the best general exercise. It gives movements to all the parts of the body except the arms. If you hold yourself straight you give plenty of play to the muscles of the back. The propelling movement gives play to the abdominal and leg muscles. If you swing the arms with vigor you give play to the muscles of the arm, the superficial muscles of the thorax and the intercostal muscles.

"By inhaling properly you put plenty of fresh air into the lungs to drive out the impure air, and develop the chest. The muscles of the diaphram are given their share of exercise and grow strong. The average person should find his even gait in walking and try to keep it. A certain amount of running is good, because it contracts the abdominal muscles, develops the muscles of the legs and brings the poisonous secretions to the surface. For this reason it is a good form of exercise for the man or woman wanting to reduce.

"Young children should do their share of walking and running every day. These are their chief exercises and they develop the muscles of the arms and legs as well as those of the chest. As they grow older they commence to have their games and their indoor sports. If they go in for baseball and football, tennis, golf and swimming they need to walk and run less.

"Though they do all this they should be made to walk to and from school. Under no circumstances should they be allowed to use an auto car or street car instead of their two legs. It is a painful sight these days to see the children of the rich riding to and from school in auto cars and the children of the middle classes in street cars. One reason why golf is such a splendid exercise is it forces men and women to walk over a great area without any conscious effort. If you can play eighteen holes of golf and feel refreshed you ought to get the same pleasure and recreation from a five-mile walk.

"Walking is a splendid exercise for old people, because it keeps the blood quickened and the muscles relaxed without putting any special strain on the vital organs of the body. You will get benefit from walking at all times.

"The early morning is a very good time to walk, because it stimulates the body. It makes you wide awake and creates a feeling of hunger. Walking in the evening is also good if done in moderation, because it relaxes and refreshes the tired muscles and the contracted parts of the body. If you cannot get up enough enthusiasm to do your share of walking alone join a walking club. Others will teach you to get pleasure from walking if you cannot learn this alone."

If you have ever visited the foremost sanitariums and hospitals in this country and Europe you have found out that physicians are making more and more use of exercise, fresh air and water. When it comes to the treating of lung diseases and nervous troubles they use fresh air and exercise more than anything else. A part of the treatment is to rest in the open, to work and walk in the open. Take a hint from these patients and keep well by walking.

YOUR Costume Has Much to Do With Pleasant Walking. Make Yourself Comfortable First, Then Strike Out.

How to Walk Correctly

TO GET the most from walking, you should learn to walk erectly. Be sure to hold your chest and head high. Keep your arms to your side or let them swing modestly.

You should have an energized carriage and the right way to get it is to get your movement from the hips. Walk with your legs, not by a swing or swaying of the whole body.

Step into the length and do not turn the knees out so much. See how smoothly you can glide along and take natural deep breaths as you move.

This will give you the feeling that you are being wafted through space instead of laboriously treading on hard earth.

Tip the upper part of your body slightly forward to partly cover your feet. Try to forget your feet and create a desire to attract attention to your head instead.

Strike down with the heel, but let the weight slip to the outer and fore part of the foot and this will break the jar on the sole of the foot and lessen the strain on the arch.

If you are not a walking enthusiast, begin your regime gradually. Start to cover a mile, then two and gradually work up to five or six. Any man or woman should be able to walk five miles and even six or eight without feeling any bad effects.

Why Uncle Sam Pays $157,325,160 in Pensions

THERE is no country which carries so large a pension list in proportion to the size of its army as the United States. The pension system was started early in the life of our nation and was enlarged tremendously by the civil war and the late Spanish-American war.

In the year 1866, immediately following the close of the civil war, the appropriation by Congress for the payment of pensions amounted to a little more than $15,000,000. In 1911, or forty-five years later, the amount paid out on account was $157,325,160.35. Annual pension payments on account of the civil war have increased ten fold fifty years after the close of the war and continue on an ascending scale. Since the close of the war in 1865 pension payments on account of service in that war aggregate upward of $4,000,000,000.

When pensions were first provided for in this country they were supposed to reach the real veterans who were disabled through wounds or disease. As years went by the resourcefulness of the pension list was increased to include the deserter, so long as he did not leave his command while in the presence of the enemy.

The short Spanish-American war swelled our pension list greatly. The report of the commissioner of pensions shows that between July, 1861, and June 13, 1900, invalid pensions were allowed under the general law to 556,255 volunteers, and under the act of June 27, 1890, to 451,531, a total of 1,007,786. During the period from July 1, 1861, to Jan. 1, 1901, pensions were allowed to 30,266 regulars, including the wounded and invalided men of more than thirty years of almost constant Indian warfare.

To make the comparison intelligible, the total number of volunteers who enlisted in the civil war, reduced to a basis of three years' service, is 2,324,516 men. The total number of men on the rolls of the regular army during the whole period from 1861 to 1901 is 577,000, including reenlistments.

Up to June 30, 1900, 1,007,786 volunteers out of 2,324,516 were in receipt of pensions, while only 30,266 regulars out of 577,000 were recipients of such bounty. This shows that the regulars have been singularly free from pension seeking, and the volunteers have not.

The increase of expense for short-term volunteers arises not only from pensions but from waste and injury of public property. Washington observed such conditions at the very beginning of the revolutionary war, when he wrote from Harlem Heights on Sept. 24, 1776, the following:

"It becomes evident to me that as this contest is not likely to be the work of a day, as the war must be carried on systematically, and to do it you must have good officers, there are no possible means to obtain them but by establishing your army upon a permanent footing, and giving your officers good pay."

To Escort Imperial Potentate.

This gaudy-garbed patrol of Shriners from Atlanta will represent Atlanta at the imperial council meet, and the band had been asked to compose a special escort for Imperial Potentate Fred Smith, of Rochester, N. Y., at Seattle.

The Shrine patrol and band leaves on the morning of July 5 by special, all-Pullman trains.

On July 19, at the Golden City, Cal., the officials of the Panama-Pacific exposition have requested the concert band of the Atlanta Shriners to give a special musical program at 2 p. m. in the court of the University of Nations building, where all visitors to the exposition from Atlanta will gather to celebrate "Atlanta Day." The Atlanta Shrine patrol has also been requested by the exposition officials to give an exhibition drill, and Potentate Forrest Adair will deliver an address, in acceptance of a beautiful medal which the exposition officials will present the Atlanta Shriners.

Every Atlantan who is in San Francisco on July 19 is cordially extended an invitation to attend the Shrine concert, after which the exposition officials have planned an elaborate reception in honor of the Atlanta delegation.

Young Atlanta Architect Wins Rome Scholarship In Nation-Wide Contest

A national academic distinction has been conferred upon an Atlanta youth, in the "Rome scholarship" awarded to Philip Trammel Shutze, a graduate of Georgia Tech and assistant in the firm of Hentz & Reid, Atlanta architects.

Less than twenty-five years of age, and only three years out of college, young Shutze, a native of Columbus, Ga., in competition with brilliant minds throughout North America, won one of the most enviable international scholarships held forth to aspiring students. Upon the opening of the next scholastic season, he goes to Rome, Italy, to take his course in the American Academy of Architecture, with full expense paid and $1,500 annual expense funds.

P. T. SHUTZE.

Brilliant Student.

For the past year young Shutze has been attached to the Hentz & Reid offices. Prior to that time he was an assistant in the Georgia Tech faculty, from which he graduated in 1912 with signal honors. He was distinguished as one of the most promising students in the institution, and Professor Francis P. Smith, instructor in architecture at Tech, pronounces him the most brilliant pupil he had ever observed.

"Rome even more than Athens is the fountain-head of inspiration for the architect, for there were gathered up the precious threads of the Greek style, which, woven with other strands equally valuable, produced a fabric which is almost inextricable in its richness and suggestion. The masterful planning, composition and construction of the remains of ancient Rome, with all their wealth of ideas, form perhaps the most precious heritage of the profession of architecture. There are to be found the great fundamental principles of design which have dominated the greatest structures of all nations since the close of the middle age.

"It was some such thought as this in the far-seeing mind of the late Charles Follen McKim that led to his founding of the American Academy in Rome. He, too, had seen the vision of Brunelleschi and had followed him to Rome. As his great forerunner had given a new style to Florence and to Italy, so McKim offered a new ideal to America. Better architecture is being produced in America today than in any other country of the world and it is safe to say that our pre-eminence is due to the unrivalled example of the work of McKim's firm. The superlative excellence of their work is owing to their thorough and intimate knowledge of Roman and Italian work at first hand. Such careful study has resulted in their producing structures of the first class, based indeed upon tradition, but nevertheless quite American and contemporary in their character. These are the qualities we must strive for if America is to have a genuine and lasting style of her own.

Opportunity for Young Artists.

"The great purpose of the American Academy in Rome is to accomplish exactly this: It offers to the most gifted young artists of our country the opportunity of prolonged study and research in classical lands under the most favorable conditions possible. To win the 'Roman Prize' is perhaps the highest honor that can be bestowed upon a student of architecture, sculpture or painting, and in being awarded the prize in architecture this year Mr. Shutze has proved his worth against the best talent in America.

"In the spring of each year the academy conducts a preliminary competition in each of the three arts to select the contestants who shall enter the final competition. These preliminary problems are open to unmarried college graduates only.

"The subject of the architectural problem this year was 'The Decorative Treatment of an Island.' The requirements were that a commemorative monument, an open-air theater, formal gardens and a great bridge were to be incorporated in the design, but great freedom of arrangement and treatment was left to the competitors. The contestants were required to present a design for this problem, made in fourteen consecutive homes without any criticism or reference to books or drawings. The preliminary competition in Atlanta was held under the direction of the department of architecture at the Georgia School of Technology, of which Mr. Shutze is an honor graduate.

"From the scores of entries throughout the country, the best four designs were selected by the academy jury in New York. Those who saw Mr. Shutze's drawing here were not surprised when it was learned that he had secured one of the four coveted places, as it showed a firm grasp of the problem and was remarkable in its presentation.

Warm Praise From Meade.

"The four 'logists' were allowed six weeks in which to restudy their solutions and make the final drawings at a large scale in water color. The only word of criticism regarding the designs that has been heard, came from William R. Meade, president of the academy, who said that Mr. Shutze's design was the finest piece of student work he had ever seen.

"The great prize carries with it residence at the Academy in Rome for three years. The value of the fellowship is sufficient to cover all expenses during this time. Unless the European situation necessitates a postponement, Mr. Shutze will report in Rome about the first of October. The academy now occupies its perfectly appointed new building adjoining the grounds of the Villa Aurelia. There the fellows in architecture, sculpture and painting live and work together under the direction of experienced advisers. In addition to the splendid library facilities of the academy, the students have access to all the great libraries and collections in the capital, affording an unequalled opportunity for research work. Intelligent study of the actual monuments of Rome forms a great part of their work, and the inspiration derived from this can scarcely be overestimated. At least one collaborative problem by architect, sculptor and painter is done to bring out the real unity existing among the three arts, and an exhaustive study is also made in the restoration of some building or group of buildings. Certain months in each year are devoted to travel and study in Italy, Greece and other classical lands. A more comprehensive or efficient rounding out of an architectural education would be difficult to imagine.

"The American Academy in Rome is still in its infancy, but it has already accomplished results that should be far-reaching in the development of our architecture, and we firmly believe that the high hopes of the honored McKim will be realized. Fresh torches will be lighted at the altar of Rome and brought back to give better light to the new world."

Seven Men Accepted For Marine Service By Atlanta Station

Seven recruits for the United States marine service have been accepted by the Atlanta branch of the marine recruiting service during the week ending June 26. The seven men who have come from all parts of Georgia have been sent to Norfolk, Va., where they will be placed in training.

Those who successfully passed the examination at the Atlanta office were J. L. Smith, H. P. Babb, W. E. Gallagher, W. M. Merriman, R. M. Johnson, M. G. Huff and G. L. Hintod.

"The people in general are more patriotic in regard to enlisting at the present time," stated the lieutenant, "than I have seen them for many months. We are having far more applicants now than we have had in some time."

When asked just what bearing the European war had on that enlistment, Lieutenant Colvocoresses stated that he felt sure it was mostly due to that influence that the number of applications has increased.

Terminal Section Growth One of Atlanta's Marvels

DEVELOPMENT NOT "A BUBBLE OR A DREAM"

In the transformation of a mountain wilderness into a metropolis, when the rugged peak of the Piedmont became the great city of Atlanta, many magic-like changes took place, and from time to time sections of the city that were obscure and little known suddenly became either live business centers or beautiful home parks.

But in all this wonderful development, there has probably been none that has equaled the marvelous changes that have taken place in what is known as the "Terminal Section."

By the "Terminal Section" is meant that part of the city adjacent to the new Terminal Station. In it can be included the business section along the following streets:

Home Sites of Pioneers.

Many years ago this section was occupied by some of the homes of pioneers. The two blocks bounded by Madison avenue, Peters, Forsyth and Nelson streets and by Nelson, Madison avenue, Forsyth and Mitchell streets was once the site of the old Inman home. It was the extension of Nelson street through this property and the erection of many fine stores by the late Sam M. Inman that did more than any other factor to develop the "Terminal Section."

Of course, it was the building of the Terminal Station that brought about the wonderful change in that part of the city. No sooner had it become known that the new Terminal Station was to be built on its present site than real estate on surrounding blocks jumped up in values. A few of the wise ones had secured options and some well authenticated stories have been told about small fortunes having been made.

Before Developments Began.

Before the Terminal Station was built Madison avenue was known as Thompson street and it was scarcely more than a back alley filled with old shacks and inhabited by worthless whites and negroes. Alabama street from Forsyth to Madison avenue was not much better. Forsyth street between Hunter and Mitchell was not considered in the business class. Mitchell between Broad and Madison avenue was occupied by cheap stores and shoddy lodging houses. There was no Nelson street between Madison avenue and Forsyth street.

The entire section was outside of the business district and real estate values were as low as anywhere in the city.

Then came the wonderful change. The Terminal Station was built. Immediately the old structures in that section were torn down and the erection of large buildings was begun.

Now, where there had been old shacks and vacant lots, there are some of the finest business houses in the city, including retail and wholesale houses, hotels and manufactories.

The business center of Atlanta was moved westward when an almost deserted area was transformed into a stirring, moving and hustling mart of busy business men.

Not Even Fires Could Stop It.

Not even a great conflagration could stop the remarkable development. One of the most disastrous fires that ever occurred in Atlanta swept over the Terminal Section a few years ago and many of the finest buildings were reduced to smoldering ruins; but not for long did the wreck remain, for immediately the debris was cleared away and new buildings, even more costly than the others, were erected.

That was like Atlanta, it was pointed out—always rising higher when the torch tried to work a ruin—as was the case when Sherman's army became a little too careless with fire back in the sixties. On the city's seal is the Phenix rising from the ashes, and when the fire came into the Terminal Section once more did the city rise like the Phenix.

Nothing could have emphasized more the permanent development of that part of the city than did that fire.

It has been estimated at the city tax office that within the past fifteen years real estate in the Terminal Section has increased about 800 per cent. That means that a piece of property which was worth $1,000 fifteen years ago is worth today $1,000,000. Looks a little like an Aladdin and his wonderful lamp proposition, doesn't it? But it is nevertheless true. Can any other city in the south show such a wonderful development of any part of its territory?

Many Leading Business Houses.

Take any one of the streets in that section, Forsyth, Mitchell, Madison, Nelson, Broad or Hunter, and you will find there some of the leading business houses of Atlanta. That men with an eye to business should locate there is ample proof that an almost disused section or Atlanta has become a business center. And these merchants and business men are prospering. They are where they can command a good trade and they are taking advantage of it.

The railroads, knowing what a change was to be made of the Terminal Section, were quick to improve their terminal facilities and have erected large and up-to-date freight depots.

It is a wonderful story that the Terminal Section tells of a growing city's prosperity, and the best of it is that it is not a "bubble or a dream," but a great reality that redounds to the credit and glory of the Gate City of the South.

Striking Terminal Section Scene

TERMINAL SECTION TRADE IS GROWING

Now Has Ninety-Three Mercantile Establishments, Eight Hotels, Six Manufactories and Three Cafes.

Ninety-three mercantile establishments, eight hotels, six manufactories and three cafes.

That is the business showing today of a section of Atlanta that only a few years ago had shacks and shanties and unpaved streets. That section is the Terminal district.

If that isn't development, then there is no such word in the business vocabulary or mercantile lexicon.

Take West Mitchell from Broad street to Madison avenue. Along that thoroughfare for the two blocks you will find 49 mercantile establishments, three hotels, two cafes and a realty company.

On Madison avenue, from West Hunter to Peters street, there are four hotels, ten mercantile houses, one cafe, two freight depots and one of the largest bakeries and candy manufactories in the south.

Business in Terminal Section.

On Nelson street on the block from Forsyth street to Madison avenue there are four of the leading wholesale concerns in the city.

On Broad street between Mitchell and Hunter streets there are 14 mercantile houses.

On Forsyth street between West Hunter and Nelson streets there are 16 mercantile establishments, one hotel and a social club.

All of this in a section of the city that was fifteen years ago hardly on the municipal map.

In this section you can find every branch of trade. It is a business district to itself and one can do a day's shopping and buy everything wanted without leaving its confines.

What speaks well for the Terminal section in a business way is the fact that it contains no cheap or shoddy stores.

For over forty years there stood on West Mitchell street, near Thompson street, now Madison avenue, a two-story frame house, said to have been just after the war the home of an Atlanta pioneer. From 1885 to 1895 it was used as a boarding house. Then it fell into disrepute and became a very cheap lodging house. When the Terminal revolution took place a brick store was built adjacent to the old lodging house and one day the excavations caused the house to totter and tumble.

Scene Was Typical.

The scene was typical of what has taken place on all the streets in the Terminal section. Old ramshackle houses were made to tumble to give place to modern and up-to-date stores and hotels.

And what is more, the improvements in that section are not at a standstill but developments continue. Trade continues to improve and traffic increases.

What is to be the future of this part of Atlanta no one can say, but it seems certain that it will keep on improving and developing as the whole city grows. It seems destined to always hold a place among the prosperous sections of Atlanta.

DRAUGHON'S PRACTICAL BUSINESS COLLEGES

ATLANTA, GA. Cor. Mitchell and Forsyth Sts.

MONTGOMERY, ALABAMA Court Square

25 Years Successful Operation

Which Would You Rather Do?

Go to school and confine yourself to dry text-books learning, thereby limiting your education not only to theory, but to limited book knowledge?

OR, attend DRAUGHON'S, which is more like taking a trip through some of the largest and most modern business offices, to secure your business and shorthand education? It is not like going to school at all—more like sitting alongside of the business man's desk—learning his methods—getting the benefit of his keen insight into the very business transactions he has to contend with every day.

This is one of the many advantages of pursuing a course at DRAUGHON'S PRACTICAL BUSINESS COLLEGE. Can you imagine anything more practical? Do you appreciate the full meaning of learning shorthand, typewriting, bookkeeping, banking, commercial law, penmanship, etc., in such a business-like manner?

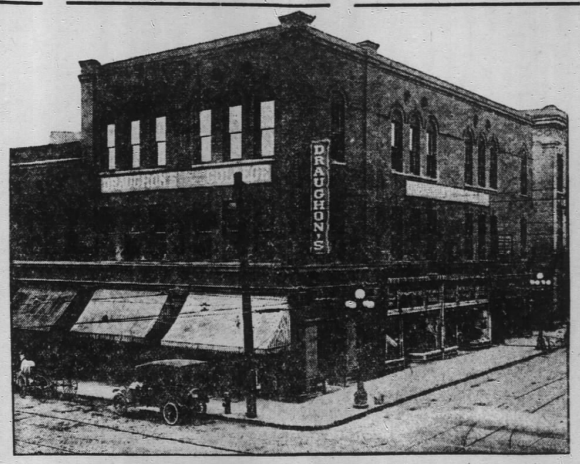
This practical and personal instruction is the primary reason why Draughon graduates secure better positions and command larger salaries than graduates of other schools. This is why a beaten path leads to the College door.

It Is a Fact

That there are two classes of business colleges in the south—DRAUGHON'S and others; you have your choice.

That Draughon's Practical Business College stands supreme, above, before, beyond any other business college in America. It is the very acme of business training efficiency.

That to do life's work the best, you need the DRAUGHON TRAINING—no price is too high to pay for it—no price can compensate for the lack of it—the opportunity is yours—DECIDE TODAY.



HOME OF DRAUGHON'S COLLEGE, ATLANTA, GA.

Where Draughon Graduates Are Employed

GO TO THE BANKS, and you will find that DRAUGHON graduates are their cashiers.

GO TO THE FACTORIES, and you will find that DRAUGHON graduates are their accountants.

GO TO THE WHOLESALE HOUSES, and you will find that DRAUGHON graduates are their managers.

GO TO THE RAILWAY OFFICES, and you will find that DRAUGHON graduates are their chief clerks or officials.

GO TO "UNCLE SAM," and you will find that DRAUGHON graduates are his most trusted servants.

GO WHEREVER BUSINESS requires the most efficient office help, and there you will find DRAUGHON graduates.

THE AGGREGATE annual income of the graduates of DRAUGHON'S great chain of Colleges, at an estimated average salary of $75 a month, is ONE HUNDRED AND EIGHTY MILLION DOLLARS.

Send the names and addresses of five or more young people likely to become interested in a business education and receive Senator Bob Taylor's Love Letters to the Public—Free!

Opportunity

The door of OPPORTUNITY swings both ways. One side is labeled "Push;" the other, "Pull." Whether you enter from the "Push" side or from the "Pull" side, and whether you work on the farm, in the shop, or in business, you will, every day, need BUSINESS TRAINING. That's what the Draughon Training is—BUSINESS TRAINING.

How He Built a Fortune

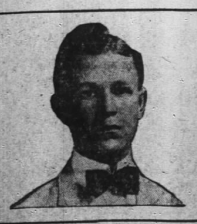
One of the most successful men of America, when asked as to the chief thing to which he attributed his success, replied: "I built my fortune on the dial of my watch. Seconds became pennies; minutes became dimes; hours became dollars. I never PROCRASTINATED; I never waited for other people to get ahead of me. I don't know that there is any particular rule or law of success, but I'm pretty sure that one of the foundation principles is, 'DO IT NOW.'"

Shakespeare Says:

"There is a tide in the affairs of men which, taken at the flood, leads on to fortune." Will you launch your boat on the swell of that tide and be carried forward with it, or will you wait until it has passed and be swamped in the undertow?

You should be receiving a salary of from $800 to $1,000 one year from this date, and two years from now you should be drawing a salary of from $1,000 to $2,000. Make a note of this assertion. Two years from now pass judgment on yourself, but don't plead the excuse, "I didn't know."

You can, under our direction, begin a plan of action which will absolutely force the business world to deliver to you One Thousand Dollars or more each year in return for your services. Will you begin that plan of action today by purchasing a scholarship in DRAUGHON'S—America's greatest business schools?



Mr. Hutchison says:

When my mother decided to give me a business education, we made a thorough investigation of the different Business Colleges, and it is a source of great pleasure to me now that we selected Draughon's, in preference to all others.

After six months' study in bookkeeping and shorthand combined, I accepted a position as steno-bookkeeper, where there are two other Draughon graduates employed, with the Ragan-Malone Company, Atlanta, one of the largest wholesale dry goods houses in the south, where, as far as I know, I am giving entire satisfaction.

Miss Pearl Brown says:

"When I decided to take a business course, I was at a loss to know where to enroll, but on investigating, I readily decided on Draughon's. On the completing of my course the college secured me a position as stenographer with the National Life Association, Atlanta, at an attractive salary, and I have since been made secretary and treasurer. I give Draughon's College, with its thorough system and able instructors, credit for my success."

STARS AND STORIES OF THE FILM PLAYS

Conducted by L. E. Winchell.

KLEINE'S "SPENDTHRIFT" COMES TO THE STRAND

Irene Fenwick, Star of "Song of Songs," Enacts the Leading Role.

Atlanta moving picture lovers will find this week's bill at the Strand one that includes new releases from the best producing companies and the leading parts placed in the hands of the world's best screen players.

On Monday and Tuesday George Kleine presents Irene Fenwick, in Porter Emerson Browne's celebrated play, "The Spendthrift." Wednesday and Thursday the Metro Pictures corporation presents Jane Grey and Lionel Barrymore, two distinguished stars, in "The Flaming Sword." Friday a return engagement of Betty Nansen in "A Woman's Resurrection." Saturday Marion and Madeline Fairbanks, the Thanhouser twins, in a circus drama "The Flying Twins."

George Kleine's latest dramatic offering, "The Spendthrift," filmed from the famous Broadway success by Porter Emerson Browne, will be the attraction Monday and Tuesday.

"The Spendthrift" is straight from the Kleine New York studios, having been but recently completed. The story is told in six parts by a strong cast of players. Such prominent names as Irene Fenwick, Cyril Keighley, Malcolm Duncan, Mattie Ferguson and J. C. Hackett are sufficient to stamp "The Spendthrift" with the familiar Kleine insignia of the best at any price.

The entire production has been staged on a magnificent scale in keeping with the reputation of the house that made it and the splendid story it tells.

Irene Fenwick will be seen in the role of the sweet-natured, true-hearted but extravagant Frances Ward, whose reckless disregard of her husband's money leads to mischief, a part well suited to the extraordinary talents of the dainty "Song of Songs" star.

Jane Grey, who is to be seen Wednesday and Thursday in B. A. Rolfe's production of "The Flaming Sword," is at present playing the leading role in Willard Mack's great Republic theater success, "Kick In." Miss Grey is costarring in "The Flaming Sword" with the well-known actor, Lionel Barrymore.

"The Flaming Sword" is the latest production of the B. A. Rolfe company and the most recent output on the Metro program. Miss Grey made her first appearance on the screen in "The Little Grey Lady," and so great was her popularity in that production that she was sought after by almost all the large producers, and B. A. Rolfe made the most attractive offer.

"The Flaming Sword" is in 200 scenes and required a cast of sixty principals and numberless minor players.

On Saturday the wonderful Thanhouser twins, Madeline and Marion Fairbanks, whose beauty has won them a unique place in the affections of the picture fans, are presented by Edwin Thanhouser as the particularly featured players in a four-part Mutual Masterpicture, "The Flying Twins." This production was made at the New Rochelle studios under the personal direction of Mr. Thanhouser himself and has an unusually excellent cast. Harry La Pearl, long famous in circus circles, has one of the most prominent parts in the play, that of the villainous circus acrobat. Among the well-known picture favorites appearing as the various characters are Boyd Marshall, Ethel Jewell, Lorraine Huling and Morris Foster. Eleanor Spalding and Bertha Leon also have major roles.

Mayor John Purroy Mitchel, of New York, has been posing in a municipal efficiency series for the Vitagraph company. These pictures are designed to show the inside workings of the government of New York city.

MARY FULLER MONDAY AT ALPHA THEATER

Beautiful Mary Fuller will continue to delight her thousands of admirers when she will start at the Alpha Monday as the circus queen of "Mary of the Circus." In this prise circus story the remarkable beauty is set off by the tinsel and spangles of a circus rider queen. Her adaptability in this role is wonderful. She is seen walking a tight rope; she is seen as a bareback rider and in other unusual capacities in which she acquits herself admirably. In addition to "Circus Mary," the last installment of "The Black Box" will also be shown.

In this last episode all of the mysteries are solved. Craig having died in the fourteenth episode, Quest looks for the mysterious contents of the black box. This is found and points to Professor Edgar Ashleigh, whose peculiar actions have doubtless been under suspicions many times during the serial. The denouement furnishes a satisfying conclusion, the explanation being that Professor Ashleigh had been bitten by an anthropoid ape, developing a murderous hydrophobia as a result. The serial has been finely pictured throughout, and contains a good mixture of mystery and excitement.

Tuesday "Larry O'Neil, Gentleman," the comedy-drama, will be the vehicle in which delightful Violet Mesereau and William Garwood will be featured. This very pleasing story tells of a millionaire trying to experiment on the plausibility of clothes making the man. Accordingly, he chooses a good looking young ironworker (William Garwood), dresses him in fashion and introduces him in society. The young ironworker makes good, and wins an heiress in addition; the latter remains true after his confessed deception.

With this refreshing comedy-drama, an L-Ko comedy will also be offered Tuesday. The fourth story, "The Love Liars," in the "Who Pays?" series, the serial that is causing so much favorable comment for the Balboa-Pathe producers, will be seen Wednesday. "The Love Liars" depicts the penalties resulting from marrying for money. The culminating scene, wherein is shown the young doctor, about to leave the home of the millionaire, whom he has restored to health, in order to further avoid seeing the bride, and the millionaire, made mad by his suspicions, brands them both as "Love Liars," renders a fitting climax for this serial of vital import.

SUMMER PLANS OF IRENE FENWICK

Irene Fenwick, star of this season's greatest Broadway success, "The Song of Songs," and featured in the George Kleine film production of "The Commuters" and "The Spendthrift," last week finished her long engagement at the Elliott theater, in New York, and for the rest of the summer will devote her talents solely to the forthcoming Kleine features.

"I am looking forward to the summer's work with a great deal of pleasure," says Miss Fenwick, "especially the several water parts I am to play. I will allow me to prove my abilities as a swimmer and a horsewoman. Because of my diminutive size I suppose many of my friends refuse to believe that I am really quite athletic."

Several of the roles which Miss Fenwick will play in Kleine features this season will offer her opportunities to display her athletic powers and theatergoers who have never seen her in any but the drawing room parts she does so beautifully on the speaking stage, will see an entirely new Irene Fenwick in some of her forthcoming appearances on the screen.

Some Striking Scenes in Thrilling Picture Plays Which Will be Shown in Atlanta Houses This Week

(1) Scene from "When Broadway was a Trail," at the Victoria on Wednesday; (2) Victor Moore, in "Chimmie Fadden," at the Grand on Wednesday; (3) Scene from "The Spendthrift," featuring Irene Fenwick, at the Strand Monday.

LASKY TO PRODUCE "THE CHORUS LADY"

Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play company announces that it has acquired the photodramatic rights for two of the greatest comedy successes ever produced on the American stage, "The Chorus Lady" and "The Traveling Salesman," both by James Forbes and both originally produced under the management of the late Henry B. Harris.

"The Chorus Lady" was the sensation of New York city for two seasons, and continued on the road for several years after its New York hit. The name became a by-word on two continents, and the financial returns on the piece positively broke all records over any comedy producing in recent years.

This play brought James Forbes into the very foremost ranks of American dramatists, establishing his present great reputation, and also did much for the fame and fortune of Henry B. Harris.

"The Traveling Salesman," also by Mr. Forbes, followed "The Chorus Lady," and attained a success of equal proportions. It seemed almost impossible for one author to provide two such widely different character studies as the title roles in these two comedies and hit the bull's-eye of popular favor on both occasions.

The acquisition of the rights of these two comedies is in line with the determination of the Lasky company always to supply for its share of the Paramount releases, a certain proportion of very high-class humorous photoplays.

The same spirit of fun which was so skillfully attained in the photodramatization of "Snobs," with Victor Moore as the star, has set a standard which the Lasky company not only hopes to maintain but to eclipse in the near future.

AT ALAMO NO. 2.

Vera Fuller Mellish Appears in "The Bondwoman."

Many good things in the way of pictures are in store for the patrons of Alamo No. 2 the coming week. On Monday, Vera Fuller Mellish, the Broadway favorite, will be shown in a three-reel Broadway Favorites' Feature entitled, "The Bondwoman." Tuesday Anita Stewart and Earle Williams will appear in the Eighth Episode of "The Goddess." "The Hand of God," a two-reel Vitagraph, will also be on the program for that day.

Thursday, Friday and Saturday, the three greatest comedians on the screen today, Marie Dressler, Charles Chaplin and Mable Normand, will be shown in "Tillie's Punctured Romance." This six-reel comedy has played to thousands throughout the United States. It is a roar from start to finish. Newspapers have lauded it to the skies as being the funniest ever.

In "The Bondwoman," Vera Fuller Mellish makes her debut upon the screen. This popular actress, who recently captivated New York with her work in "The Blindness of Virtue," serious story contemplates abandoning the legitimate stage in favor of the silent drama.

Born in England, Miss Mellish came to this country when a child and received her education at the Villa Maria. Her desire to become an actress was manifested at an early age, and she frequently appeared in amateur theatricals.

Upon her graduation, Miss Mellish succeeded in securing a position in a Boston stock company. After several seasons of this work, the charming young actress was engaged to appear on Broadway with Billie Burke, in "The Mind-the-Paint Girl."

PAVLOWA TO DANCE FOR THE UNIVERSAL

Carl Laemmle and George Kann, representing the Universal Film Manufacturing company, and Max Rabinoff, representing Madame Anna Pavlowa, the incomparable classic dancer, last week attached their names to a tremendous contract. Its amount is unprecedented, even in the motion picture industry, where thousands of dollars for salaries of stars are spoken of lightly.

The subject will be Aubers grand opera, "The Dumb Girl of Portici," presented at the Metropolitan opera house, New York city, twenty-one years ago. This work, strong of plot and rapid of action, will be a splendid vehicle for the wonderful dancer and her collection of artists.

For many months Pavlowa persistently refused to consider the offer to appear in the films, and consented only after being assured by the Universal that every means would be employed to make this screen production an artistic success.

The picture will be in eight reels, and orchestral scores and full orchestras will accompany the picture at its tour of the biggest theaters in the world.

Lois Weber, admittedly the finest scenario writer and a supremely capable director, will produce the big feature.

The interior scenes will be begun on July 3 in Chicago, during the engagement of Pavlowa in that city. A full company of forty-seven dancers will be used, in addition to many motion picture folk who will be added to the ensemble.

Following the taking of the Chicago scenes a special train will take the troupe to Universal City, near Los Angeles, Cal. On this train will also be the large retinue of wigmakers, costumers, cobblers and others who forever have to keep tinkering away at the outfit to keep it in proper exhibition condition. On the trip Madame Pavlowa will have a special car for herself, her two maids and her secretary. At Universal City she will be provided with a bungalow, with quarters for servants, automobiles, etc.

Special outdoor sets elaborate to an extreme will be built at Universal City at an expenditure running into many thousands of dollars.

BURR M'INTOSH ON THE SCREEN

"Colonel Carter of Cartersville," the long, imminent Burr McIntosh five-reeler on P. Hopkinson Smith's witty story of southern life and sentiment, will soon be seen on the screen. Matter of fact, it is about due for release. "Mc" thinks it a heavenly production, reminding us of a story about heaven. Thus: Sandy: "Eh, and what like o' place was heaven, Sandy?" Sandy: "Eh, mon, I thocht heaven was jist a wee sma' room, all full of pipers, and all playing different tunes." Donald: "Eh, mon, that must have been heavenly!" And "Colonel Carter" is really a very nice picture. It's on the World Film schedule, of course.

THE REGENT THEATER TO OPEN SOON

The Suburban Amusement company, of which company P. F. Montgomery is at the head, are going rapidly forward with their plans for the opening of a string of moving picture theaters in the residence sections of Atlanta.

The Regent, situated at Peachtree street and North avenue, will be the first to open its doors to the public, which event will be in about ten days.

The Selecta, located at Peachtree and Tenth streets, is also being constructed, and will probably be ready about August 1.

These convenient amusement places will no doubt become very popular with the ladies and children in their respective neighborhoods, affording an easy method of securing amusement without the trip downtown, as when the chain is completed there will be one accessible to almost any part of the city.

The Regent, while not being elaborately finished, will be very attractive with its handsome front and white marble foyer. The aisles will be wide and commodious, wiff plenty of room between the seats. A program will be arranged that will be appealing to the ladies and children, none but clean, instructive pictures being shown. Nothing of a daring nature will be put upon the screen.

The building to be occupied by the Selecta is being constructed by George P. Moore, and will be used exclusively as a theater, except perhaps an ice cream and refreshment store may be installed next to the entrance.

"The Love Liar."

The fourth drama is a series entitled "Who Pays?" consisting of twelve plays of undiluted realism, is the tale of a woman who rushed in where angels had feared to tread, and of a senile invalid who thought he wasn't.

Love with the pyrotechnic spoon in her mouth, reared in the even more proverbial lap of luxury, the lady didn't know what it meant to make ends meet. But the time came when the lady had to choose between dread poverty and a wedding ceremony with a rich invalid whose only knowledge of youth was a distant memory. She was led to the altar where she mouthed the "till death do us part" words, and went to live out her lie with a man whose wealth was the only thing and went to live out her life with a man she didn't love would, under ordinary circumstances, have been difficult enough—it was the natural average of Youth for Age; but when, added to this, she found she had fallen desperately in love with her husband's young medical attendant, her life perforce became a torturous labyrinth of lies and fears of apprehension. It is at this point that "The Love Liar" makes its greatest appeal to your insistent demand for unflinching realism in the place of the usual lollipop romanticism. It is just this reverse twist in the most unexpected places that makes the "Who Pays?" series talked of from the Maine coast to the Golden Gate.

FOX FILM FEATURES AT THE MONTGOMERY

"Samson," "Kreutzer Sonata," "Clemenceau Case" and "Fool There Was."

The season's most pretentious offerings are booked at the Montgomery this week. Some of the greatest Fox Film features of the famous Box Office Attraction company brand, will be shown. Henri Bernstein, Alexander Dumas and Count Leo Tolstoi are the noted authors from whose prolific pens adaptations for the screen have been made.

The first to head the list Monday will be "Samson," by the great French dramatist, Henri Bernstein, the author of "The Thief" and other well-known plays. This modern drama of passion and finance is pictured in version of the famous play, produced by Charles Frohman at the Criterion theater, in New York city. William Farnum, as Brachard, the modern Samson, presents one of the most forceful and gripping portrayals in a dramatic story of superb intensity.

Tuesday's feature will be Tolstoi's masterpiece, "Kreutzer Sonata," with Nance O'Neil, America's great emotional actress, in the leading role, supported by Theda Bara and William E. Shay. Nowhere on earth could an artist more suited by appearance and temperament have been found than Miss O'Neil to play the beautiful character of Miriam.

"Kreutzer Sonata" is a photo-play that thrills and pulsates with great currents of life, that is unexcelled in dramatic intensity and forms a mighty symphony in human passions and emotions. Tolstoi considered "Kreutzer Sonata" his most significant work. In it he marvelously lays bare the disguise creatures who through weakness and environment do not adhere to strict morality; his idea of modern morality as concerns women is similar to that idea of feminine individuality that is found in Stanley Houghton's famed work, "Hindle Wakes."

The fourth story of the "Who Pays?" series, called "The Love Liars," will be seen Wednesday with Dick Rolland and Henry King in the leading roles.

The celebrated "Clemenceau Case" will be featured Thursday and Friday. This drama as picturized for William Fox by Herbert Brenon, director of "Kreutzer Sonata," is one of the most powerful plays ever written. Theda Bara, William E. Shay and Robert Holmes offer splendid delineation of the characters that make this adaptation from the novel by Alexander Dumas one of profound interest.

Passions rise and fall and clash throughout the production in a way that grips the spectator, holding him breathless in his chair, till the last great scene is reached and the wellnigh overwhelming story of "The Clemenceau Case" is brought to its tremendous end.

When Alexander Dumas wrote the book he said, in part: "I have tried to show that there is a Divine Being who punishes indulgence and rewards the good and the pure. I have succeeded in pointing out this in 'The Clemenceau Case.' I shall have gained my end."

Robert Hilliard's success, "A Fool There Was," by Porter Emerson Browne, a visualization of the famous Kipling poem, "The Vampire," featuring Edward Jose and Theda Bara, will be the attraction Saturday.

THREE WORLD FILMS AT THE VICTORIA

"Evangeline" Film Version of Longfellow's Beautiful Poem on This Week's Program.

Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday three World Film releases will be shown at the Victoria. Monday Longfellow's beautiful poem, "Evangeline," will be featured in film version with an all-star cast. This simple story so beautifully portrayed will arouse much favorable comment.

In the five-act photo play, "Money," scheduled for Monday, the money theme is treated in an out-of-the-ordinary manner. Astonishing in its evidence of cycloning and spectacular settlements, "Money" outlines a plausible solution of the failure of modern society or the society of the year 1921, when the action is supposed to take place. The story is of a prophetic nature. But the main incidents of "Money" are as true to-day as in the future.

The story narrates a bitter struggle between capital and labor, in which the latter eventually comes triumphant. It proves that capital is impotent without labor. This picture has been most lavishly produced, and the vast cast enters so thoroughly into the spirit of the story that a stirring film is the result. Carlotta De Felice portrays the leading role of Hope Ross, the heroine of the story.

"The Teacher of the People," booked for Tuesday, is another splendid five-part feature. It is produced by the Dryden Film Corporation and is presented by the World Film under the direction of George Dandy Hoxie.

The story illustrates how a marriage-de-convenance may end happily after the conflicting passions of twelve plays of undiluted realism, is the tale of a woman who rushed in where angels had feared to tread, and of a senile invalid who thought he wasn't.

Love with the pyrotechnic spoon in her mouth, reared in the even more proverbial lap of luxury, the lady didn't know what it meant to make ends meet. But the time came when the lady had to choose between dread poverty and a wedding ceremony with a rich invalid whose only knowledge of youth was a distant memory. She was led to the altar where she mouthed the "till death do us part" words, and went to live out her lie with a man whose wealth was the only thing and went to live out her life with a man she didn't love would, under ordinary circumstances, have been difficult enough—it was the natural average of Youth for Age; but when, added to this, she found she had fallen desperately in love with her husband's young medical attendant, her life perforce became a torturous labyrinth of lies and fears of apprehension. It is at this point that "The Love Liar" makes its greatest appeal to your insistent demand for unflinching realism in the place of the usual lollipop romanticism. It is just this reverse twist in the most unexpected places that makes the "Who Pays?" series talked of from the Maine coast to the Golden Gate.

Rose Cogian will celebrate her fiftieth year on the stage next October. Age does not seem to affect her, for in "The Sporting Duchess" she is as sprightly and as full of vim as the youngest member of her company.

Terminal Section Has Had Most Interesting History

There stands on an elevated site, just west of the railroads and near the Terminal station, the old Collier home of colonial style and built before the war.

On the front porch of the old home there sat for many days John W. Collier, one of the foremost among the pioners of Atlanta. From that porch he viewed many changes in what is now the Terminal section of Atlanta. He marveled then at what was going on, but if he lived today he would marvel more. He would see the Terminal station, new freight depots and long rows of fine buildings, where, in his time, were only cottages or open fields.

The development of the Terminal section recalls other changes that have taken place in and around Atlanta, and brings up reminiscences of which the old-timers have spoken.

Atlanta in 1839.

"When I arrived in this place in 1839 the country was entirely covered by forests. There was but one house here at that time, and that stood where the old postoffice was formerly located. It was built of logs and was occupied by an old woman and her daughter. I found also a man by the name of Thurman living nearby. I went to work and built a small store. First one moved in from the country and then another, until we thought we had a right smart little town. The people around here were very poor. There were a great many of the women who had no shoes at all. We had dirt floors in our homes.

"As the place grew up the present Whitehall street was the place for drinking and fighting. I sold out and went to Griffin, but returned in 1844 and went into business on Marietta street. At that time Jonathan Norcross had a horse sawmill which was regarded as a curiosity, and people came for many miles just to look at it.

"The first event of importance was the attempt to incorporate the town. A charter was procured, but some of us objected to the laws that were spoken of. We paid a lawyer $50 to bust up the whole thing, and we went along without a charter. In 1846 we got together, had the town incorporated and named it Marthasville."

A Lot in Terminal Section.

"At one time," stated Mr. Thrasher, "while I was absent from the town, my brother-in-law bought a piece of land 30 feet long, running back 200 feet, between Mitchell and Hunter streets, next to Jones' building, for $60. I was very much provoked when I heard of it, for I had previously refused to give $5 an acre for the same land, and he had given at the rate of $2 a foot for it. A little while after that he sold the same land for $90, and I told him the fools were not all dead yet, and never to buy another piece of property in Atlanta by the foot."

The piece of property referred to by Mr. Thrasher is now worth $25,000.

Mr. Thrasher mentioned that the lot on which is located the Kimball house once sold at auction for $250.

Here is what H. C. Holcombe, another old pioneer, had to say:

"In the year 1844 I was in Atlanta, then Marthasville, and found only a few small houses on Decatur street, opposite the site of the Kimball house, two or three on Kile's corner (Five Points), and some few scattering shanties at other points. There were no railroads at that time.

256 People in 1847.

"In 1847, on the 4th day of May, the population of Atlanta was 256. The grounds on which stand the depot of the state road was covered with a forest of sturdy oaks. In the midst of the forest was a marsh where grew cane and reeds. Cows often mired up in the marsh. The place has been filled up, for it was 30 feet lower than at present. There were but two houses on Alabama street."

In this connection, while speaking of the Terminal district, it might be interesting to tell how the streets in that section were named.

Broad street was so named because it was at that time the widest street in the city.

Forsyth street was named for William Forsyth, a pioneer citizen.

Hunter street was named after a pioneer citizen.

Madison avenue was named for President Madison, when Thompson street had disgraced the honored name it bore.

Nelson street was named for a pioneer.

So was Mitchell street.

NICOLSON TO SERVE IN PARIS HOSPITAL

Has Been Chosen for Interne Service in the American Hospital.

William Perrin Nicolson, Jr., well-known young Atlanta man, who is in his fourth year at Columbia university, sailed from New York Saturday for Bordeaux, France, and will later go to Paris, according to a telegram received by his father, Dr. William Perrin Nicholson, Sr.

Mr. Nicolson was recently chosen for interne service in the American military hospital at Paris. This institution is said to be doing a great work for wounded soldiers, and many American physicians are now seeing service there.

When the war began last summer Mr. Nicolson was in Germany pursuing special studies, and he is not unfamiliar with the service he will enter. He will be in Paris until October, and, if conditions warrant, will remain until Christmas.

THE HOME GARDEN

Conducted by Prof. R. J. H. DeLoach,
Director Experiment Station, Experiment, Ga.

CONTINUATION OF LAST WEEK'S ARTICLE ABOUT SCHOOLS AND FOREST NURSERIES.

Can the school undertake to aid in developing the forest interest? There seems to be no doubt about this, even though it has been tried very little. The teacher that can interest a community in the planting and preservation of forest trees has accomplished a great public service, and the young are the ones who will soon have control of our forests. The schools should, therefore, be the first to become interested in such work. The ideas should be strongly set before the children while they are impressionable, and they will not have to be convinced when they are older. Last week we gave the general idea and the importance of such work. This week we shall try to give more detailed information about how to begin such work.

Mode of Procedure.

First, set aside some good small space for planting a small forest nursery, remembering that the seed require good, deep rich soil if they would succeed with the young plants. Such a place should be thoroughly spaded up and fertilized and then pulverized, and the manures and fertilizers worked into the soil.

Second, select trees of which the entire community will soon know and which will grow well in the community. Do not try to begin with some novelty. The usefulness of which will have to be established after it is grown. Get something that is well known to every body, such as maples, locust, ash, elm, oak, basswood, hickory, walnut and yellow poplar. It is easy to try some pines, which, however, are so slow of growth with them you can only make a beginning.

Third, plan early just where many of the trees are to go. Some of them should by all means be planned for the sides of public highways. Care then would be to make the schools serve the people as a unit in this way: Do things that will help the entire community. The public highway belongs to all the people, and when you make it better and easier to travel, you help the entire community. Every effort should be induced to plant all the unused land in some kind of useful trees. Even where fences are already growing, many times it would pay to start a new forest under and in older trees.

When to Collect Seed.

Most seed ripen in the fall and should be gathered then. Red and silver maples are exceptions. As a general thing we should gather seed immediately after they are ripe, so many things happen to them to make them ineffective, and to cause poor germination, if they are left on the trees any length of time.

How to Store Seed.

This is a problem. Acorns are sometimes stored in sand to keep them from drying out, but it is generally advised to keep them on a dirt floor, where there is little or no danger from getting too moist. All kinds of nuts can be kept in this way. They should be examined frequently to see if they are molding.

When to Plant.

Plant in spring as early as you can after danger of frost is over. In the case of maples and elms, however, the new seed are in, but for most other trees arrange to plant the seed that grew that year just as early as possible after the frost is over. In the case of hardwoods, maples and elms, they will not keep and must be planted a few days after they fall from the trees in May.

How to Make the Bed.

For the nursery, make the rows about four feet apart, and put the seed in deep and good rich bed for planting. Plant more than you think will be necessary as all do not germinate. Do not transplant to permanent place till the trees are two years old.

GET THE RIGHT MAN FOR THE RIGHT JOB

If every employer could get the right man on the right job, the problem of running a business would be settled.

The lost motion resulting from the wrong man or the wrong job would be eliminated and the time and money wasted would be saved.

Perhaps such a condition will never prevail, but every time a "Help Wanted" ad is inserted in The Constitution a move is made in that direction.

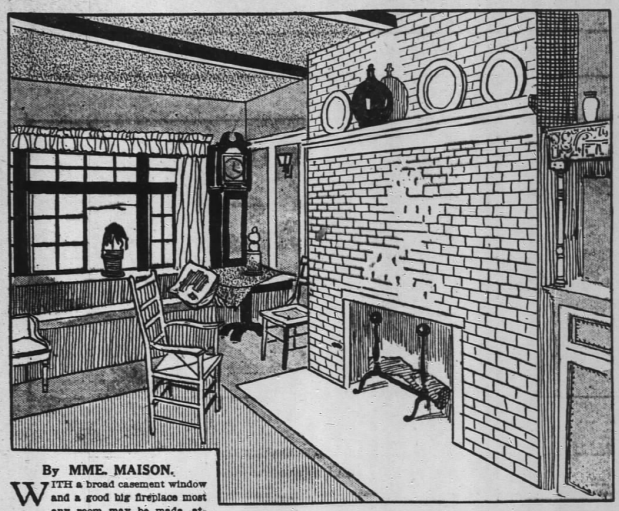
The Housekeeper's Council Table

A Page of Practical Talks On the Home, Conducted by Dorothy Dolan

Using a Broad Casement and a Big Fireplace to Add Cheer and Comfort to the Entire House



By MME. MAISON.

WITH a broad casement window and a good big fireplace most any room may be made attractive and comfortable. It is now quite the thing to combine the use of two rooms into one big one, like a living and dining room, a hall and living room, etc.

This may be a very happy combination if care is taken in selecting the furniture so that all appearance of overcrowding is avoided. The wall may be paneled with strips of molding which is used as a picture molding, allowing a drop in the ceiling if the walls are nine feet in height. Have the fireplace extend to the ceiling with a rather high mantel shelf of wood. Beams if not too many or too heavy for the size of the room are good in this type of room.

If the size of the room is from 33 by 16 feet two beams will be sufficient. Stain the same as the woodwork. A few old pieces of pewter or rare old china plates may stand on the mantel and a grandfather's clock will be perfectly at home in the corner near by, with a table at the end of the window seat built under the casement window and ample enough to permit of a tufted cushion and pillows so it may be used as a couch to rest one's weary self when so inclined.

I remember a dear old lady once saying: "It is so handy to have a place where one can lop down and not spoil the bed," so an essential in a living-room is some such place, and I always advocate pillows and cushions to be made of washable fabrics.

A valance and side draperies are all that is necessary at the windows if the view outside is a lovely one and no neighbors near enough to make close screening a necessity. It is a delight to frame our outdoor pictures by windows as free from curtains as possible, especially in the summertime.

A rush-bottomed, high-backed chair may invite one to the fireside, which may have black andirons if brass are too expensive—in fact, if the bricks used are dark red I rather like the black fire things best.

A Combination Living and Dining Room.

Please advise me in regard to furnishings for a small dining-room to be used as a sitting-room. Would a rug, chairs, dining table, buffet and refrigerator be appropriate or too much?

RUTENE.

All the articles mentioned are quite necessary in a combination sitting-room and dining-room except the refrigerator. You will have to place that in the kitchen or in a place specially built for it where it may be filled from the outside.

Napkins to Match.

I have come to you again for advice. This time I have a lunch cloth, round, forty-eight inches, the size of my table; then it has heavy hand-made lace about seven inches wide around it. This hangs down just from the edge of the table. I am going to put a large initial on it. How large shall I make it? I have plenty left for luncheon napkins. How can I finish them to match the lunch cloth? I thought of scalloping the edge and putting a small initial in the corner. Would that be all right, or can you think of a prettier way? How large will the napkins be? A READER.

You may use a letter four or five inches high on the cloth. Use the same style of letter on the napkins, only smaller. You may make them twenty-two, twenty, eighteen or sixteen inches square and finish with a narrow edge of cluny lace or the scalloping. Both ways are equally good.

Cabbage Salad—Take half a head of cabbage, shred very fine and plunge into cold water until crisp. Drain well and put in a bowl. Make a good salad dressing of half cupful of cream. Add a tablespoonful sugar and one teaspoonful salt. If you like a sour flavor, put in a teaspoonful of vinegar.

Rice Croquettes With Cheese Sauce—Boil a cupful of rice in two and a half cupfuls of milk. If not tender, add more milk. Season with two tablespoonfuls of butter, a pinch of salt, a dash of paprika and mix with two beaten egg yolks and chill. When cold and stiffened mold into cones, balls or cylinder forms. Dip in crumbs, then in egg whites and in crumbs again. Cook the sauce well before adding the cheese. Serve as soon as it is melted.

Carrots—Peel and cut in rounds, in cubes or long strips. Cook in boiling salted water until tender. Serve with cream sauce or toss the carrots in the following mixture: For two cupfuls of the cut carrots take one tablespoonful sugar, lemon juice, a little salt and pepper. Pour into a saucepan and shake till the mixture is absorbed. Carrots and peas served together are appetising.

How to Make a Wooden Wedding Much More Interesting Than Its Commonplace Name Would Indicate

By DAME CURTSEY.

THE seventh wedding anniversary is celebrated by the wooden wedding, and it can be made a much more enjoyable affair than the name indicates. For the table centerpiece have a large cake; if it is placed on a fern-decorated box to raise it up the effect will be more pleasing. On the top put a doll dressed as "Little Bo-Peep" and a lot of tiny woolly sheep, which may be purchased for a penny apiece at a toy shop. At each place, or as souvenirs for the guests, have a little sheep with a bell on a ribbon around the neck.

For amusement prepare a number of cards about seven by five inches in size; have needles and various colored worsteds ready. Tell the guests to prick any design they wish in the card and then work it with the wool after the kindergarten method. Allow a half hour for this and then collect the finished creations and pin them up to be judged after the artists have signed their names. Award a prize for the best and poorest. After the refreshments pass a hugs ball of yarn to a person whom you know to be a good story teller and request him or her to spin a yarn as the ball is unwound until a package is reached; then that person appropriates the "find," passes the ball to the next person, who continues the story where it was left off until he, too, is stopped by an obstacle in the ball. There are any number of small favors that may be used in making this ball.

Tiny mutton pies may form a feature of this entertainment, as they are suggestive of "wool." Any of the essays by Charles or Mary Lamb would be suitable for prizes; also a drawing or a framed sketch of the ever adorable "Mary" and her immortal "lamb."

Novel Shower Scheme.

This is a pretty way to present the gifts to a bride at a shower if the articles are small, like hosiery or handkerchiefs. Make a Jack Horner pie in the colors the hostess wishes to have and when dessert time comes (if the occasion is a luncheon) ask each guest to pull her ribbon, and as the package is forthcoming each one has some excuse to find like "This piece of pie is too large. Please hand it to Miss B——" (the honored guest). "My piece is very much too small. Just pass it to Miss B——." This makes loads of fun and opening the parcels adds zest to the occasion. It is well to have an appropriate sentiment written on the donor's card to be read aloud. Handkerchiefs and stockings may be rolled and concealed in tissue paper with fringed ends and so look like the snapping motto favors so popular at all social functions, the ribbons tied around each one and all put within the pie.

I have been a reader of your department in the paper every Sunday, so I am coming to you for advice. I am a girl of almost 17 years and when I am introduced to anyone should I always rise and should I always offer my hand? SEVENTEEN.

It is polite to rise when being presented; if to an older person I consider it the proper thing to offer one's hand. In fact, I am very old-fashioned about many things and I think the extended hand is symbolic of courtesy always, especially in one's own home.

Questions From the Juniors.

The Juniors are going to give a reception for the Seniors, and intend to have everything Japanese in the refreshment-room. Now, we would like to carry this scheme out also in the refreshments. Can you suggest some? Do you know of a Japanese game that we could play?

Thanks very much for your former help to us. JUNIOR.

Cherry ice or sherbet would be delicious, with a candied cherry on the top of each portion. You know cherry blossom time is a great festival in Japan. Serve with small frosted cakes, or you can get, in large cities, real Japanese wafers made from rice meal. They are packed in small boxes and are easily transported. Our neighbors in the flowery kingdom are very fond of ball games, but I do not know any well enough to describe them.

A Long Vacation for Mother Without Leaving Her Own Home

By DOROTHY DOLAN.

PERHAPS you have never stopped to consider your greatest asset as a housekeeper. Since this question is being so forcibly presented you doubtless will either say that good cooking or skill in other lines associated with housekeeping is your greatest asset. Since you are a capable and conscientious housekeeper it is only natural for you to feel that way.

The truth of the matter is that your health is your chief asset and should be your chief consideration. You are the center of your home and everything that goes on in your home gravitates about you. Your housekeeping has run so smoothly through the winter, there has been so much sunshine and so little unhappiness within the quarters of those walls, that neither your husband nor children begin to realize how much planning and thinking it has taken to keep the wheels of the machine running so easily and smoothly.

You yourself have been so busy supplying their material and social needs that you rarely realize how much energy you have expended in that direction. It is only since the fine summer weather has made its appearance that you feel tired, and that you are working with your nerves instead of with your muscles.

If you are to continue of service to your family and friends you must take this tired feeling and jaded nerves as a word of warning. Experience, courage and brain are only a part. Good health and steady nerves must be there if you are to continue in even measure day after day.

You are surprised to discover that much of the cooking and the washing are now a burden after you have looked after the children and the household. This means you have come to a point where you should rest. If you feel you do not want to close up your house and take the children away for the summer you must get your vacation at home.

No, not for a week or ten days. This is not nearly enough for a hard-working wife and mother. You must have a good, long rest of four weeks and longer if you wish. This means that you are to have your breakfast in bed, served on a dainty tray, as though you were a semi-invalid or a lady of leisure, at least.

Your husband can prepare the morning meal, and if he has no knowledge of cooking you should take a maid to substitute for you while you are resting if your means will permit it.

It will come hard for you to be inactive for a week at least and then you will begin to enjoy the novelty of the situation. If you are to get the full benefit of this rest you must take the whole day or as much of it as you like for yourself.

Instead of tidying up the house, starting the luncheon and making up the bedrooms, your temporary housekeeper is to do this for you. You are going to work among your flowers and in the vegetable beds. Before you are tired of this delightful and absorbing occupation you are to slip into a hammock swing on a shady veranda or between the boughs of two large trees.

You have pushed aside many interesting books and magazine articles all winter because you had so many other interests that absorbed your time and attention. Now the time is at hand when you should enjoy all the romances and other special articles you like. How peaceful and sweet is the movement of the hammock and the freshness of those breezes as you read on and on, soon to find yourself in the land of dreams.

If you jump up with a start, almost angry because you have taken several hours of rest, you may enjoy an extra bit of nourishment. Let this be a tumblerful of milk and a couple of biscuits. When you tire of this diet alternate it with a plate of fresh fruit.

How splendid by way of variety to sit down at the table with the children feeling that you have not done one thing to put the house in apple-pie order nor to prepare the luncheon. To make the most of this holiday you will want dainty summer dishes instead of those wholesome, nourishing meals which you have been planning and preparing all winter and spring.

While you are resting and taking life easy you will enjoy a number of cheese dishes, such as cheese pudding, cauliflower and cheese, cheese toast and cheese omelet. Though you have had your quota of salads all winter you still want them, especially when they are made up of a number of luscious fruits, and such vegetables as tomatoes, asparagus and others that have been extremely scarce all winter. You never enjoyed ice cream and cake so much in your life. You are worse than the youngest of your children when it comes to the enjoying of these goodies. The flavor comes in the knowledge that these desserts have been prepared for you. You have not had a hand in their making as you have been doing.

To the Girl Who Works

MOST women who are working, besides looking forward to their weekly wage, are trying to gather a little capital for future use. This is a worthy ambition and still there is one that is often neglected which is really worthier and more important. However interested you are in your and wages your health should be of first consideration. Your highest hope and ambition should be to have good health and to keep it. Health is a coveted asset to all women, and most of all to the woman who works.

This thought should always be with you, and especially now when the opportunities for improving your health are close at hand. The easiest and best way to get health and to guard it is by enjoying plenty of fresh air, which you can get for the mere asking. When you look into the mirror you complain that your cheeks have not a slight suggestion of rose leaves. The only sensible way to make your complexion healthy and pink is to fill your lungs the livelong day with plenty of fresh air and to destroy all the waste and poisonous tissues.

Make it your business to fit up a small and inexpensive sleeping porch and sleep out of doors all summer. If you have a small sleeping porch leading off the room, be sure and make use of it. If you live in the country and your house has a large veranda, turn this into sleeping porches and insist on the whole family sleeping out of doors.

You may have been humoring yourself with the idea that you cannot take cold baths in winter time; the shock is too much for your heart action. If your heart is strong, summer is a good time for you to get used to cold water. Perhaps when you once get accustomed to it you will want to keep it up all year round. It is worth while trying over the summer at least.

Taking cold baths may stimulate the desire for swimming, especially if you have a good natatorium or small lake near by. After you once learn you will find it a delightful sport, and it is as healthy as it is pleasurable.

This is only a small part of your exercise for the summer months. If you are seated all the time or most of the time at your work you need movement, exercise, to energize your muscles. You should count on five miles a day at least, and more when you have a half holiday off or on your vacation. This will keep you strong of mind no less than in body. To enjoy all the pleasures of walking, go in the parks and in the country whenever you can. Do not be thwarted in this desire because you have to take a trolley or a train to get there. You will be liberally compensated by this extra expenditure of energy.

If you are a real athletic girl, as you should be, you will have the desire to take more exercise. I should either recommend tennis or golf. Both are pleasurable and healthy provided they are done in moderation. Tennis is somewhat more energetic, and it is especially good if you desire to reduce in weight. On the other hand, golf is an easy and good exercise. It makes for grace and strength both.

Vivian's Heart Chats

THE other day one of our council friends said in a letter: "I am very much worried about the feeling my husband has for my mother. He is jealous of our affection. He accuses me of giving my mother more thought and love than him. I blame him the more, because he knew that I am an only child and I have been all in all to my mother ever since I lost my father. I am so exasperated at times by my husband's folly that I want to leave him and go back to mother."

I should pass this question, merely answering the young woman, had not a number of such cases come to my notice. It is the height of folly for any man or woman to be jealous of the other's affection for his or her family. If they are normal-thinking men and women they will understand that it is far more natural for us to care for our own flesh and blood than to be indifferent about them. This is especially true where a mother is concerned.

As children we are not conscious of the sacrifices and responsibilities that come to the average good and loving mother. Usually it is only after a man or woman is grown and considers the social relations of life somewhat more seriously that he commences to acknowledge to himself that, however devoted he is to his mother, he can never do enough for her. Now if most men realize this important truth, certainly women do, and it is only natural that they should want to give expression to this feeling by love and plenty of attention.

If a man really loves his wife he should be fond of her people, especially of her mother. When this feeling is not natural he should try and cultivate it. He should realize it is very hard to give up loving the one you have clung to in affection from the day you were born. Should he for some real or supposedly real reason not be able to have a genuine feeling of affection for his mother-in-law, he should not foolishly interfere between wife and daughter or do anything that might shake this loyal and natural bond of love.

He should go further and realise that it is his duty to be considerate.

The M. P. News carries the following:

"Josephine Earle, of the Vitagraph players, is a lovable and charming girl, in spite of the fact that she is invariably cast for vampire roles. Miss Earle scored a hit in the role of Jennie, the gangster, in 'The Return of Maurice Donnelly.' It was there the first vampire she had ever played, her previous work being in the light comedy role of the 'Beauty Doctor" in the famous "Jarr" series. After her characterization of Jennie, she was cast for vampire roles. She is an exceptionally accomplished impersonator of the sinister type."

FINE PROGRAM AT GRAND THIS WEEK

"Chimmie Fadden," "Sins of the Mothers" and "Little Pal" Present Noted Stars.

The startling success of the Grand theater, and the widespread eminence it has attained in the moving picture world, is to be attributed to the strict policy it has observed of serving the public the biggest and most pretentious of picture productions; the system of comfort it provides each and every patron, and the courteous, skilful service that greets the thousands who enter its doors each day and night.

In accord with the Wells policy originally outlined when the Grand first opened its doors, the management has never failed to serve patrons with any but the biggest photo-drama releases that were put upon the market. To this end they gained control of—and still hold—such monster film combinations as the Vitagraph-Lubin-Selig-Essanay, World, Paramount, Balboa and other famous booking agencies.

The program this week is one of the biggest of its career. Monday and Tuesday Victor Moore will appear in "Chimmie Fadden," the stirring Lasky release.

Thursday and Friday comes the Vitagraph masterpiece, "The Sins of the Mothers," a startling film sensation that set Broadway in a furore, and promises to set an attendance record in Atlanta that will have been unequaled.

Friday and Saturday comes the idol of the screen, the peer of all favorites, Mary Pickford, in "Little Pal," her most noteworthy vehicle.

Do you remember that old song, "On the Banks of Allan Water?"

It is the Bowery of those days, some twenty-five years ago, that is pictured in Jesse L. Lasky's picturization of E. W. Townsend's world-famous comedy, "Chimmie Fadden."

Mr. Townsend, who is now a United States congressman from New Jersey, was at that time a star reporter of The New York Sun. Every now and then he wrote a "Chimmie Fadden" sketch, telling incidents in the life of an Irish-American Bowery "rough diamond." The paper printed those sketches, and they achieved such popularity that Townsend soon found his creation and himself both national figures.

"Chimmie Fadden" is not only a screamingly funny film, but veritably a historical record of what was once the most famous street in America.

"The Sins of the Mothers" won the $10,000 prize scenario contest run by The New York Sun. It has no equal as a moral lesson. It deals with an inherited vice—the passion of gambling, which is found to entrap the beautiful young daughter, who, upon leaving the convent in which she has been reared, discovers she has a mania for the races, the roulette table and all games of chance.

It is thrilling, sensational, stunning. The leading roles are portrayed by those illustrious stars, Earle Williams and Anita Stewart, the direction by Ralph Ince, and the production was staged under the personal supervision of Albert E. Smith and J. Stuart Blackton.

"Little Pal" provides Mary Pickford with one of the most unique roles in which she has ever been presented. The photoplay is one of primitive emotions and primal passions, and evidences a hitherto unsuspected aspect of Mary Pickford's astounding versatility.

Jacques Jaccard has completed the production of his first picture since returning to Universal City. "Learning to Be a Father" is the title of the comedy drama, written by John Fleming Wilson. It is a story of the sea, as are so many of Mr. Wilson's, and in it there is plenty of range for good comedy. Daddy Manley, Lydia Yeamans Titus, Val Paul, Clarence Burton, Doc Crane and Doris Pawn play the leading roles.

THEDA BARA

Celebrated actress who portrays leading parts in "The Clemenceau Case," and "A Fool There Was" at the Montgomery this week.

Marie Tempest.

Marie Tempest, the famous London actress, has signed a contract to appear in a big Universal film feature. This is but another in the long list of well-known celebrities who has left the glare of the footlights to play for the silent drama.

Miss Tempest commenced her career as a musical student and played in the Paris Opera Comique some years ago. Since then she has starred in many comic operas and finally gave up the singing stage to become one of the foremost comediennes of the present age. This clever actress has to her credit the starring roles in nearly fifty big successes, her biggest hits being Kitty Carroll in "The Red Hussar," Nell Gwyn in "Enaclish Nell," Polly Eccles in a revival of "Caste," Kitty Silverton in "The Marriage of Kitty," Pegsy O'Mara in "All of a Sudden Peggy," Becky Sharp in "Vanity Fair," and in the all-star revival of "London Assurance," given in aid of King George Actors' Pension Fund, in London.

Since renouncing musical plays, Marie Tempest has won fame and distinction as one of the leading comediennes on the English stage, and the Universals are to be congratulated on their good fortune in securing such an artist for their program.

Bryant Washburn wishes it to be distinctly understood that his excellent performance as the crusty, crabbed old bachelor in "The Little Deceiver" is a gross libel on his real character. He is not crusty, crabbed nor has he any intention of doing this bachelor stuff.

The "Lady Baffles and Detective Duck" stories are so good that they are being run as the first number by the Strand theater in New York. This is considered the criterion of merit, taken.

"THE CHEVAL MYSTERY" WEDNESDAY AT SAVOY

Harry Myers and Rosemary Theby Featured Drama of Hypnotism and Mystery.

Splendid features are on the program at the Savoy the coming week. Chief among the good things offered is the great photo-play, "The Cheval Mystery," written by Harry C. Myers.

The fifteenth and concluding episode of the Universal special feature serial "The Black Box," will be seen Monday. This last episode contains the startling disclosure that Professor Ashleigh, the apparently harmless old scientist, has been a veritable Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde, and all the crimes supposedly committed by Craig were in reality the professor's handiwork.

For Tuesday, the fifth episode, "In the Name of the King," of the "Under the Crescent" series, will be shown in all its lavishness and minute attention to detail. These beautiful visualizations of Egyptian life are becoming more and more absorbing with each installment and in the fifth episode the sumptuousness and the magnificence of these superb photo-films is unexcelled. The progress of the unhappy princess towards freedom is still retarded by adventures that are as plausible and as realistic as they are picturesque.

"The Cheval Mystery" for Wednesday, featuring Harry Myers and Rosemary Theby, is said to equal any photoplay put out by the big "U." It presents a murder mystery, with hypnotism as a supposed incentive. The opening scenes show the body of a man lying in the woods murdered. The girl is accused of the murder, but it later develops that her uncle, who is a hypnotist of the Svengali type, exerts an hypnotic influence over her, and she is made to act according to his directions. The situations that lead up to the climax are of great intensity and hold the audience spellbound, there is never a lagging moment. The great mystery is solved in a feasible manner and this drama of exciting interest grips the audience until the final picture fades from view.

HART'S MIGHTY FIST KNOCKS THEM OUT

William S. Hart's mighty fist again dealt dumbfounder to one of Inceville's biggest men recently when the noted actor of the New York Motion Picture corporation was enacting the part of Dakota Dan in "Tools of Providence," a two-reel Broncho release of the Mutual program, July 7. In one of the scenes a husky assistant hostler (the daughter of a minister who agrees to tend bar for Dan, providing he will go to church. The tough one was being interpreted by Edward Kenny, a mammoth youth weighing more than 200 pounds. Dan, according to the story, punishes the insulter with a beating. Hart wanted to play the part as prescribed by the scenario. So he waded into Kenny and with lightning-like dexterity didn't get out of the way in time and caught Hart's fleet one on the jaw. He went out like a light, and when he came to wanted to know if the scene had to be retaken.

After much negotiation, Bert Adler, manager of the Coyotesville Universal studios, succeeded in gaining the consent of "Oscar," the famous manager of the Waldorf Astoria, to film some important scenes in the "Earl of Pawtucket," in which Lawrence D'Orsay is playing the leading role. The famous hostelry plays an important part in the play and a great amount of realism will be injected into the film version by using the hotel proper for the settings.

"THE ETERNAL CITY"

At the Montgomery Week of July 5.

The management of the Montgomery theater announces for the entire week, beginning July 5, the photo spectacle, "The Eternal City," with Pauline Frederick.

It is the most pretentious subject ever produced by the Famous Players' film company. The first concern to present famous plays and celebrated stars in motion pictures. It represents the first time that a prominent American actress has ever been sent abroad by a film producing company for the production of a motion picture. It was directed by Edwin S. Porter, "the father of the photoplay," who produced the first dramatic story in motion pictures eleven years ago, in collaboration with Hugh Ford, the noted stage director, whose first picture experience it was. It is the first time in the history of the motion picture that the Vatican gardens, the coliseum, the Castle of St. Angelo, St. Peter's and other historic spots in the imperial city have been used as settings for a screen drama. It is the first time that a regiment of the Italian army, or an actual military body of any government, was loaned to a motion picture producers to pose as film actors in a screen drama.

Added to the beauty of the subject is the vital, timely interest derived from the fact that many of the ancient and historic buildings that were injured by the disastrous earthquake in Italy form the background of the screen production of Hall Caine's stirring romance.

BIG MOVIE COMPANY HAS NARROW ESCAPE

The Henry McRae company of 101-Bison (Universal) players has returned to Universal City from the Santa Barbara islands with several thrilling tales of adventure, shipwreck and hardship. The Universal recently paid $1,500 for the wreck of the Norwegian steamer "Aggi Nord," which went aground off the Santa Barbara islands. The owners of the vessel put the vessel on the market and the Universal jumped at the chance to film some feature productions around the steamer despatching the Bison players at once to the Santa Barbara islands.

The company arrived at the islands only to find that seas were breaking over the ship and slowly pounding her to pieces.

Early in the morning it was seen that the heavy seas were abating and Director McRae loaded up a launch with players and started off. On attempting to board the ship Mr. McRae and the party in his boat, comprising Allen Watt, assistant director of the Bison company; Don Meaney, and Curley Stecker, were washed out of reach of the others and drifted to a coral reef about a half mile away where they were forced to land and bail out their boat. It was two days later before they were able to beat their way back against wind and waves to the wreck.

While the girls and some of the less adventurous of the players were taking a number of scenes along the rock-bound coast and among the caves, Director McRae and his party went aboard the liner and secured some of the most realistic scenes of a sinking ship ever taken. Although the boat threatened to founder at any moment, Director McRae and his cameraman went down into the hold of the vessel where, under the sunlight streaming through the open hatches, a drama, half of real life and half of reel life, was enacted before the camera's lone eye.

Henry King, co-star with Ruth Roland in "Who Pays?" series, is now busy in Los Angeles as a director, working on "A Gentleman's Agreement," a moving picture within a moving picture, and quite novel. Ruth Roland is also in the exposition city enjoying her two weeks' vacation, after the completion of the big serial in which she and Henry King starred.

"The Imposters."

The next picture to be produced at the World Film studios by M. Albert Capellani is "The Imposters," which Capellani has just completed "The Face in the Moonlight," which was prominently associated on the speaking stage with Robert Mantell, and in the picture version of which Robert Vivian plays the dual stellar role.

"The Imposters" is taken from the play of the same name by Douglas Murray, which was successfully performed on the speaking stage.

Miss Jose Collins, the famous singer and actress, enacts the part of the gypsy, "The Tearer." This is Miss Collins' first appearance before the camera and experts say her tests show her to be as charming on the screen as on the stage.

Mr. Alec B. Francis will be featured and will play the dual part of Sir Anthony Gregson, the crusty old English nobleman and his wayward twin brother, known as "Blink."

Miss Dorothy Fairchild, who will be remembered for her appealing work as the wife of Porkey McCoy in "The Boss" in which Holbrook Blinn and Alice Brady are starred, portrays the ingenue role of Mary.

"The Cannon Ball' is the latest Keystone picture, and it is a knockout, according to advices received from Mack Sennett headquarters. It simply out-Keystones any Keystone that was ever mortared together. In it a big concrete bridge is dynamited.

The sixth and last episode of the Princess Hassan "Under the Crescent" series is called "The Crown of Death," and is by far the most exciting and satisfactory of the entire Universal series.

"Who Pays?"

Continues to be the most-talked-of series of feature subjects from the Maine coast to the Golden Gate.

Prof. Todd Successful Manager Of Draughon's Business College

With its thousands of graduates holding responsible positions in various industrial and commercial institutions throughout the south, and with an ever increasing demand for the young men and women who complete their course of studies in Draughon's Practical Business College, in this city, this institute occupies an enviable position among the leading business institutes of the south.

For the past five years under the personal supervision of Professor H. R. Todd, himself a graduate many years ago from one of its branches, assisted by a corps of able instructors, themselves being specially trained, the Atlanta college has made splendid progress in its work of training and fitting the young men and women of this section for the business duties of life.

The college is located at the corner of Mitchell and Forsyth streets, and has enrolled continuously a large number of students, practically every one of whom, as their courses of study are finished, is placed, through the aid of the institution, in good and lucrative positions.

Professor Todd is originally from South Carolina. For five years he was in charge of the Columbia branch of Draughon's chain of colleges, and also spent several years in Texas in the same work. He has proven himself not only a capable and successful manager of business colleges, but his several years of exprience in literary schools has been a great aid to him in imparting knowledge to the students who have been under his direction in the Atlanta branch of this big chain of colleges.

Mr. Todd is prominent in the social as well as the business circles of this city, where he has made his home for the past five years, and his permanent connection with the Atlanta college is an assurance to each student that they may feel confident of every possible assistance from him necessary to future success.

PROFESSOR H. R. TODD.

Monday Is Give-Away Day At Mitchell Street Stores

"Give-Away" day, what can it mean? Inquiries have come from every direction the last week to The Constitution as to what it was and when it was to be. Well, the secret's out. Tomorrow is "Give-Away day."

Merchants in the Terminal district have built up Mitchell street from a few small stores until at the present day it is lined from Whitehall to the Terminal station with large department stores and big retail establishments. These merchants believe that there are many residents in Atlanta who do not realize to what extent this thoroughfare has grown. In order to stimulate interest in this section, they have decided upon tomorrow, Monday, June 28, as "Give-Away" day. Every merchant on the street will participate in the distribution. Souvenirs will be presented by many of the stores to all who call; others will offer merchandise at give away prices.

Anyhow, a big crowd is expected, and preparations made to accommodate all who can crowd into the stores.

In today's Constitution a portion of the paper is devoted to photographs of the district and information regarding the concerns located there. Advertisements telling of the many and varied bargains to be had tomorrow will also be found in this section.

Surely you are going to join the throngs who journey to West Mitchell street tomorrow. "Give-Away day."

ROGERS, WHO KILLED HIS BROTHER-IN-LAW, GIVES HIMSELF UP

Valdosta, Ga., June 26.—(Special.)—Woody Rogers, who shot and killed his brother-in-law, John Myers, in the northern portion of this county, about six weeks ago, and who has been at liberty since then, surrendered to Deputy Sheriff Hodges here today.

Rogers came to the city and went to the office of his attorney, E. K. Wilcox, from where he telephoned the officer to come and get him.

Rogers married Myers' sister and the two families were living and farming together when the killing occurred.

GA. AGRICULTURISTS TO MEET AT MOULTRIE

Waycross, Ga., June 26.—(Special.)—The annual convention of the Georgia State Agricultural society will be held at Moultrie on the 11th and 12th of August. Judge John A. Cobb, of Americus, president, is now securing speakers for the occasion.

The initial organization year of this society was in 1810; in 1846 it took on a new form of life and projected and conducted the first of a long series of state fairs at Stone Mountain in 1847. The society has clung steadfastly to its original purpose to assist in the upbuilding of the agricultural and industrial interests of the state. The record it has made is a brilliant one.

Power of Attorney to Sell Real Estate, Absolute Sale

WE HAVE been given power of attorney to sell the entire property of Mrs. Ada J. F. McLeod and Miss Marion McDowell, located opposite Grant Park on South Boulevard, Atlanta, Rosedale, McLeod, Marion and Home Avenues.

There are three choice bungalows on the property, all in excellent condition, which we will sell at bargain prices and on very easy terms. They are modern in every way, well built and exceedingly attractive.

The vacant lots in this property are offered in single lots, five or ten out of a block, entire blocks of fifteen to twenty lots or the whole property to any prospective purchasers. Terms will be given on any purchase made if customers so desire. There are about 75 or 80 lots to be sold.

PAVED STREETS, SEWERS AND CITY WATER.

We want to make quick sale of the property as it is necessary for this to be done. In order to do so we shall offer any of the property wanted at prices unprecedented in that entire section and you have only to confer with us and we will show you that we mean absolutely what we say.

We have recently sold twenty-one of these lots, and at the prices sold, every purchaser can double his money. This opportunity will not last long. If you want to buy for a home or for speculation or investment, now is the time, and here is the opportunity. Will you take advantage of it?

A few of the streets need some grading and we want to exchange three good lots for this work. If you have a friend who will do the work send him to us.

This property makes a beautiful residence park, and we are thinking of offering a handsome premium in a bonus being given the purchaser of his lot who will suggest a name for the park which is accepted and adopted by us.

Titles to the property are absolutely good, and you may depend upon it. The Atlanta Title Guarantee Co. or any good lawyer will approve the title. We know all about the title ourselves.

Come and get a plat, make your selection and we will name a price that will induce you to buy.

Housekeepers & Hotel Men Attention!

Here Are 338 Dozen Bath Towels & Mats at 1/3 off

THESE are the identical numbers in bath towels and mats that we sell every day at full prices. This lot comes to us under price because they are the mill's accumulation of "seconds"—towels with a slight oil spot, a dropped thread, an uneven border or other slight mar. TERMINAL STREETS ARTERIES OF TRADE

Teeming With People and Vehicles Day and Night. Are Among Busiest Thoroughfares in City.

The development of the Terminal section, made of almost obscure streets, great arteries of trade and commerce. Streets that before were very little traveled became among the busiest thoroughfares in the city.

Just look at West Mitchell, North Broad, North Forsyth, West Hunter, Nelson and Madison avenue. You will find them teeming with people and vehicles all day long and often late into the night.

While it is true that many who traverse these streets are going to or leaving the Terminal station, yet a great many are there for the purpose of patronizing the stores in that section, for it has become such an important business district that shoppers go to Broad, Mitchell, Forsyth and Madison avenue, just as they do to Whitehall and Peachtree streets.

Busy Arteries of Trade.

Mitchell street has become a real business artery, leading to Forsyth and Broad and Whitehall streets from the Terminal station. Forsyth, Broad and Whitehall all catch a part of the flow of people who throng Mitchell as they go to and from the station. Thus the four streets constitute on the south side of the city arteries of trade.

It did not take the city government long after the Terminal station was built to recognize the fact that a wonderful change would take place in that part of the city, and so Madison avenue was regraded and paved, Alabama street, as it leads into Madison avenue, was repaved and graded. Mitchell street was paved with a smooth pavement. Forsyth street was regraded, so as to remove a steep hill, and then repaved. Hunter street was graded and repaved.

These public improvements were demanded by the development of the Terminal section and they quickly imparted a new impetus to the already rapid growth of the surrounding territory.

Where the Traffic Passes.

All the traffic from the Terminal station and the two railroad freight depots must pass along either West Mitchell street to Forsyth, Broad and Whitehall, or along Madison avenue to West Alabama street. The great bulk of it takes the West Mitchell street route.

Upon leaving the Terminal station, the traffic can turn down Forsyth and find an outlet that reaches all the hotels, the postoffice, the city hall and Peachtree street.

If, from Mitchell, the traffic takes South Broad street, there is the same outlet to hotels, business offices and Peachtree street.

The Terminal station could not have been more conveniently located when it comes to having streets that connect with other important thoroughfares.

One Thing Not There.

There is one thing that the streets of the Terminal section rarely have. They can boast of fine buildings, mercantile houses, hotels and manufactories. They can brag on fine pavements. They can lay claim to a large, moving population, but there is that one thing—

What is it?

If there is any one thing that stands for prosperity and plenty it is the absence of rent cards, for when the cards are not in evidence then business is good and there are no vacant stores.

It was no less a person than Horace Greeley who said:

"When I visit a city I look for rent cards. When I find many I know that that town is not growing; when I find none I know that prosperity has a home."

MOON'S SHOE STORE WILL ATTRACT MANY Popular Shoe House Announces That It Will Give Away a Present Worth While.

Visitors to the Terminal district on Monday, thousands of whom will be attracted by the announcement made in today's Constitution that the merchants along Mitchell street and in other sections have instituted a big "Give-Away day," will do well not to overlook a drop-in at Moon's shoe store at 29 West Mitchell street.

Mr. Moon has been engaged in the shoe business in the Terminal section for several years, and has built for himself a most gratifying and increasing patronage. His store, in size, appearance, artistic and convenient arrangement, as well as in the quality and price of his goods, will compare most favorably with any shoe house in this section. When the idea of a "Give-Away day" was suggested to the merchants along this thoroughfare, Mr. Moon entered into it enthusiastically. He announces in his large advertisement in this issue that he will give away a present worth while to lady visitors on Monday. In addition, he announces "the Moon has gone down on prices," and friends and customers will find many attractions at this popular shoe store during the "give-away" festival, which will continue all of Monday.

GEORGIA LUMBER CO. TO BUILD RAILROAD IN SUMTER COUNTY

Americus, Ga., June 26.—(Special.)—The city council of Americus has granted a franchise to the Georgia Lumber company to operate a railroad into Americus. The right of way for the new road has been secured and according to officials of the Georgia Lumber company, actual construction work will begin within sixty days.

The new road will run from Byromville, on the A., B. & A., across the Flint river and on into Americus. A standard gauge, 90-pound steel rail track will be constructed. A modern steel bridge will span the Flint river.

The Georgia Lumber company owns several million feet of timber on both sides and this new road will run through their property. The road will be 25 miles long, through one of the richest sections of Sumter county, between Americus and the river. It is proposed later to extend this road to Tifton via the proposed Americus, Tifton and Atlantic survey. The new road, which will probably be called the Americus, Flint River and Gaina, will establish shops and headquarters in Americus.

VALDOSTA WILL HAVE $50,000 HOSIERY MILL

Valdosta, Ga., June 26.—(Special.)—Stock subscriptions for a $50,000 hosiery mill in this city have been closed, and the announcement is made that the mill will be in operation within the next ninety days. Work on the plant will be commenced at once and will be pushed to completion as rapidly as possible.

Secretary J. M. Ashley, of the Valdosta Chamber of Commerce, and H. R. Buckey, industrial agent of the Georgia and Florida-railway, were the men initiating the movement for the establishment of the enterprise in Valdosta. J. T. Blalock, president of the Southern Bank and Trust company, and his institution became actively interested, together with other business men here, with the result that the capital was subscribed in a short time. R. H. Oliver and Knox Burger, of Maryville, Tenn., who are among the leading hosiery manufacturers of the south, are heavily interested in the enterprise. It is stated tht the mill will give employment to 150 people, and with an annual payroll of $40,000 to begin with. A brick building 50x200 feet, with provision for enlarging as the demand indicates, will be erected and equipped with the latest knitting machines, together with a complete dyeing and finishing plant. The mill will be operated by electricity throughout.

LIVED YEAR IN SWAMP ON BERRIES AND FRUIT

Douglas, Ga., June 26.—(Special.)—For more than twelve months, avoiding as far as possible all human sight, wandering in the forests and swamps of Coffee county, occasionally, from fierce hunger, venturing into a farmer's house to beg for bread, subsisting on berries, green corn and fruit, Mike Locker, a native of France, about 40 years old, has been assigned by City Court Judge Lankford to the state farm at Milledgeville. Officers Strickland and Stevens say that Locker's is the most pitiable case they have ever been called to deal with. His only relatives are two aunts in San Francisco.

TEXAS OIL WAREHOUSE AT VALDOSTA IS BURNED

Valdosta, Ga., June 26.—(Special.)—The main warehouse and office of the Texas Oil company in this city was burned this afternoon, together with large quantities of oils and greases in storage.

The fire was one of the most spectacular that ever occurred here and was extremely hard to handle, the blazing oils spattering over a wide area as the barrels and containers exploded. By hard work the fire department kept the flames from spreading to a large gasoline tank in the yards.

LAGRANGE GIVES PAGEANT BASED ON INDIAN LORE

LaGrange, Ga., June 26.—(Special.)—The beautiful pageant, "The American Indian, in Lore, Legend and History," given by 300 LaGrange people Friday afternoon on the LaGrange college campus, met with a much larger degree of success than was even anticipated. This beautiful play was given under the auspices of the LaGrange Woman's club, under the direction of Miss Eula Bradfield, instructor of expression at the LaGrange college.

The scene was fittingly laid on the spacious college campus and pine trees were placed as a background. Although a threatening shower came about the time that the pageant was to begin, clear weather soon prevailed and there was nothing to mar the play and the seats which were placed all around the campus were filled with a crowd of about 500 strong.

TAXABLE VALUES SHOW PROSPERITY OF SECTION

Increase in Twenty Years Has Reached Nearly Eight Hundred Per Cent.

A look at the city tax digest tells more plainly than anything else of the great and wonderful development that has taken place in a few years in the Terminal section of the city.

In taking the figures from the tax books it must be borne in mind that these do not represent the true value, but that fully 40 per cent must be added.

The block bounded by Forsyth, Mitchell and Nelson streets and Madison avenue is owned by the S. M. Inman estate. It was formerly a part of the old Inman home property. When Nelson street was extended from Madison avenue to Forsyth street, the late Sam M. Inman had the entire block built up with fine modern stores. The block is assessed at $475,000.

Other Large Assessments.

The south side of Nelson street, between Forsyth street and Madison avenue, also a part of the old Inman home property, was built up by Mr. Inman with fine storehouses, which are today assessed at $150,000. The rest of the block, bounded by Peters, Nelson and Madison avenue and the Southern railroad, is assessed at $150,000.

To get an idea of the value of the property in this section, you can start at the northwest corner of Forsyth and Peters street, go along the north side of Peters street to Madison avenue, thence along the east side of Madison avenue to Nelson street. Here is how the property on that block is assessed:

Madison Avenue Property.

Mitchell Street Property.

On the northwest corner of Mitchell and Forsyth, 107x109, owned by Thomas M. Clarke, $90,000.

E. H. Inman, 49x163, $20,000.

R. Z. Phillips, 50x163, $20,000.

Paul Breitenbucher, 50x163, $23,000.

Mrs. C. S. Bratton, 25x100, $10,000.

I. P. Bradley, 25x100, $10,000.

Property on Hunter Street.

On the southeast corner of Hunter street and Madison avenue, 81x105, owned by N. H. Bulloch, $35,000.

On the south side of Hunter, 75x141, owned by Waithall & Hood, $27,000.

On the south side of Hunter, 38x141, owned by J. B. Hightower, $13,500.

Take the above figures that come from the city tax digest, and bear in mind that they represent about 60 per cent of the real market value of the properties, and then go back to the old digest of some fifteen or twenty years ago, and you will find that the increase has been, as stated, something like 800 per cent.

Now you have the Terminal section development in actual cash values of the Atlanta dirt upon which it rests.

WAR AND EMIGRATION TO THE UNITED STATES

Subject of Less Interest to France Than to Other European Countries.

Paris.—(Correspondence of the Associated Press.)—The effect of the war on emigration to the United States is a subject of less interest to France than other European countries. In late years the average of Frenchmen who have gone to America annually was less than 10,000. The French are an emigratory race, and in the opinion of a great many thinking people they will have more than ever reason to remain at home after war, when everyone looks for a great commercial and industrial impetus.

On the other hand, there are competent authorities who hold that the simultaneous liberation of fifteen millions or more of soldiers will drag the labor market in all countries, and particularly in France and Belgium, where the demand for labor will for a considerable period feel the effect of the devastation of its industries. During the reconstruction and readjusting period these authorities expect that a considerable proportion of labor will be attracted by the higher wages paid in the United States.

Monsieur Dal Piaz, director of the French Trans-Atlantic line, whose functions require him to be posted on emigration problems, thinks that the United States, having been least of all the great industrial countries affected by the war, will be in shape at the end of hostilities to absorb a considerable percentage of the unemployed labor of Europe. That labor, he thinks, instead of waiting for the transition period to pass will emigrate in a large proportion.

Monsieur March, treasurer of the Federation of Labor Unions, admits the force of these arguments as applied to other European countries—Russia, Germany, Austria and Hungary, for instance—but he believes war will have no effect upon the emigration from France.

Aside from a few miners from the north who go to the United States, most of the French emigrants are from the south along the Spanish border. As for the former, they will all be needed as soon as hostilities end to bring the fuel supply up to requirements. There is no danger of others emigrating, because they will find plenty to do while industries are being restored in helping to rebuild.

The labor situation in France, Monsieur March thinks, will be much relieved by the elimination of Germans who were employed in considerable numbers in France before the war. All hotels will have to be reconstructed, the staffs. The great proportion of the jewelry workers in Paris were Hungarians, who must be replaced. They were also continually in Paris considerable numbers of Germans, particularly in offices, working voluntarily without pay in order to learn the business and the language. No one considers the eventuality of these coming back, and the demands for French help in all branches will be proportionately increased.

Labor leaders do not now, nor have they ever, encouraged emigration, because they have been in closer touch with labor conditions in the United States than anyone else, and know that work is not always to be had there, while there is always something to be done at home.

Persons familiar with sociological questions in general need not fear that in case France is victorious, civic pride will be stronger than it has ever been since the constitution of the republic, and will constitute an additional tie upon its citizens. France vanquished would naturally change the whole situation, and yet the example of 1870 is there to show that, even beaten, a commercial and industrial boom is likely to set in and keep the entire population busy.

A Victory for German Ideas.

(From Collier's.)

A person given to epigrams might reasonably say that the victory for big-business units involved in the decision in favor of the United States Steel Corporation was a greater victory for German ideas than any triumph of their arms can be. The idea of big business minutely and effectively organized, and thoroughly regulated by the government, is one of many German ideas with which Germany, in an intellectual sense, was conquering the world until her progress was interrupted by the folly and wickedness of her military caste. This decision, it is pretty safe to say, will commit the United States to one of two policies, between which it has been wobbling for nearly a decade. It will commit the country to the economic ideas of Mr. Perkins and the progressive party, that society should permit big units of business—but should regulate them. President Wilson's dogma of the restoration of competition is diametrically opposed by this decision of the United States courts. As between the two, we think the decision of the court more nearly represents prevailing public opinion. Big units, well conducted, mean economy and therefore, at efficiency. In the modern world the man who fights these things is fighting the stars in their courses.

He Has Nothing on Us.

(From The Baltimore Sun.)

Villa seems to be making a noise like a man who has had enough.

For serving condensed milk a tubular handle has been invented that is forced into the top of a can, a valve closing its entering aperture dust except when it is tilted for pouring.

According to a parliamentary committee that investigated, the production of all of London's electric power in a few large stations would save 2,000,000 tons of coal a year and greatly reduce the smoke nuisance.

An electric machine has been perfected to count and to wrap coins, of different denominations, in suitable packages for ease in handling.

MOTHER AND SISTER OF HARRY K. THAW CONFIDENT HE'LL BE DECLARED SANE

THAW'S MOTHER AND SISTER. THAW (INDICATED BY ARROW) ON WAY TO COURT.

Harry Kendall Thaw, now 45 years old, backed by a great array of legal talent, began his greatest effort to procure his freedom from the madhouse to which he was ordered when he was acquitted of the murder of Stanford White, whom he shot to death on Madison Square roof nine years ago. Great crowds thronged the New York court-house, and a special force of bailiffs had to be summoned to handle them. Another huge crowd followed Thaw and his guards when they went to a Park Row restaurant for luncheon. The prisoner seemed absolutely undisturbed by the attention paid him. He declared he was confident he would never be returned to Matteawan. It was with an easy indifference of manner more marked than in any of his other appearances at the bar that Thaw came into court. Four deputy sheriffs from Ludlow Street jail accompanied him. Immediately behind him came his mother, Mrs. Mary Copley Thaw; his sister, Mrs. George Lauder Carnegie, and his half brother, Josiah T. Thaw. They took seats at one side of the court close beside Jerome's desk, with the witness stand full between. Close upon the heels of the Thaw party came the legal guns who are to spend many hours in bombardment over the release of Harry Thaw. In the accompanying illustrations are shown Mrs. Mary Copley Thaw, Thaw's mother, and Mrs. George Lauder Carnegie, his sister, on their way to court; also Harry Thaw, followed by a great crowd, entering the court room.

BLOUSES ARE IN AGAIN

Separate Waists and Skirts as Smart as One-Piece Dresses, When Topped With a Fashionable Silk Jacket.

New York, June 26.—In this day of revivals, it is not surprising that blouses again find favor. Summer suits foster their popularity. Indeed, the separate waist and skirt may be as smart as the one-piece frock, provided there is a silk coat to top the costume. Paris takes special delight in turning out new surprises in sheer waists. There is no name in blousedom that does not cover these transparent confections of the famous couturieres. Lingerie is too frilly, and tailored is entirely out of the question, for who would ever call a pin-tucked Swiss or organdy by so harsh a name? They are original in contour. Strange as it may seem, coming from Paris, the source of true color, they are white, pure white, crispness, the chief charm of the garment, bespeaking loudly the midsummer they are made for.

The magic charm of the French white wear is woven in every stitch of these waists; style is a secondary thought. They are Frenchy, white, and made for warm weather; further scrutiny seems a sacrilege. Since they come from the great fashion center, their long sleeves, and short sleeves, graceful V-neck, soft frills and delicate inserts of embroidery will be copied, modified and twisted about, again and again, in the blouses that are made on this side of the Atlantic.

Already the jabot frill, which originated in Paris, is finding favor here. One of the blouses above, made of white Swiss in true French fashion, shows this feature. It also has the famous two-in-one collar, which can be worn high or turned low, and the raglan sleeve, which has come to be regarded as a staple. It is rumored from the other side that drop-shoulders are the next step in blouses; in view, however, of the popularity of the regulation sleeve, it will take considerable time to bring about the change.

Certainly the comfort of the high shoulder in wash waists will not be relinquished readily, even if the drop-shoulder style is easier to make.

At the present time, the set-in sleeve dominates the fashion, so far as tailored blouses are concerned, except for now and then a raglan. The treatment of the neck marks the real difference in styles. Stocks and high collars were, in the early season, the ultra mode, but these have given way gradually to the broad Quaker collars, especially for the younger women. These collars come detached, to wear with any blouse or dress, or in sets with cuffs to match. The shops show them in organdy and Swiss, picot-edged, hemstitched, or with an inch strip of lace of colored organdy or figured cretonne around the edge. Whole collars of cretonne are offered, too; they are extremely attractive on the blue and pink linen dresses. The style of the waist must be plain to carry these broad collars well. Many of the new striped blouses show them. There is one model in particular, a striped awning stripe, which has been shown from one end of the town to the other—not always in the same material, but nevertheless always having the same general appearance, for all of these waists are cut absolutely plain. Sometimes the material is linen, again mulle, and now and crepe; but the stripes are ever the broad green, blue, pink or black, and the collar and cuffs always the same plain style of sheer transparent organdy.

This craze for stripes grows more pronounced as the season advances. Not only are the wide awning stripes popular, but the narrow blazer and candy stripes are featured, too, in crepe de chine and cotton crepes. There is an especially attractive crepe de chine on the market with satin stripes. This is made up mostly in the plain tailored blouses with the two-in-one stock collars.

Pongees are also used in this type of waist, as well as white, and baby flesh pink crepe de chine. Georgette crepes, and deener rose and soldat blue linens are the military hues shown in pongee with strapped pocket low in front. This waist has a stock collar of black silk with flaring points of white organdy. It is a stunning model for a pongee coat suit, especially when worn with one of the new white kid belts striped with black patent leather. The roar of cannon is echoed in other waists of the season. Rose and blue linens are used to carry out the effect. Either the waist is made of rose linen, with the collar and cuffs faced with blue, or vice versa, with brass buttons down the front.

None of these waists touch the vogue of the chiffon, net or lace blouse. Not even the French waist of white can take their place, for the dress waist must necessarily blend in with the color of the skirt to make a complete costume. When the coat is removed at the restaurant, theater or church, many of the few blouses give the costume the appearance of a one-piece dress. In chiffon cream, silk or gold, over flesh-colored chiffon. These are usually combined with silk.

The upper illustration is one of the very newest blouses of this type, showing the use of satin in a bodice effect under the net. The short sleeves are the flowing style, with the circular cuff, used so much where a dressy effect is desired. Some of the extreme models show low necks, with short sleeves; but like Mrs. Vernon Castle and her models, comfortable, few will follow the fad. Blouse styles seek the happy medium. Where the neck is really low, the sleeve is short; and with the V-neck and high collars, long sleeves are worn. Gloves, however, are invariably short, both with the short and long sleeve. Victorian styles are favored, the lace mitt being worn with the sheerest waists. White kid gloves are also quaint; often they are worn with a band of black velvet at the wrist. Already this idea of the black band at the top of the glove is being carried out in the glove itself. Some of the stores have in their fall stock, white gloves with black and colored bands at the top and the fourchettes between the fingers match this trimming. Heavy embroidered bars on the back are another feature, judging from this first showing, fall will be a season of fancy gloves, even as spring was a season of fancy shoes.

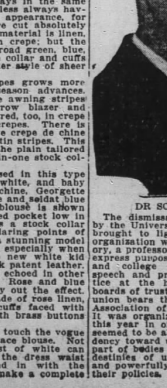
PROFESSORS TO PROBE DISMISSAL OF NEARING



DR SCOTT NEARING.

The dismissal of Dr. Scott Nearing by the University of Pennsylvania has brought to light the existence of an organization which is, in fact and theory, a professors' union, formed for the express purpose of securing university and college professors freedom of speech and protect them from injustice at the hands of unsympathetic boards of trustees. This association or union bears the name "The American Association of University Professors." It was organized at the beginning of this year in order to counteract what seemed to be a dangerous growing tendency toward ultraconservatism on the part of bodies controlling the financial destinies of universities and colleges and powerfully influential in directing their policies.

ATLANTA'S STRIDES FROM DAY TO DAY

This month's activity in the building operations of Atlanta have greatly exceeded all expectations, which were based on experiences of the last several months. Already June building has soared far past the $300,000 mark, and many large building permits are in view, which will safely boost the June aggregate building to the half million mark.

Activity Also in Realty.

Building alone has not been active, as the past week there were a large number of realty sales made, as well as a still larger number of transfers recorded. Recorded business increased considerably during the past week.

Contract Business Large.

But the actual business transacted and the exchanges of properties recorded hardly figure with the large amount of business now in the contract stage. Among all over the city report an immense volume of unclosed business, which will be announced within the next few days. The total volume of business pending reaches the $250,000 mark.

The M. C. Kiser agency reports that it will soon close a $40,000 deal, and the Turman & Calhoun agency announces that it is now working on four sales which involve $150,000.

Amos Braselton is figuring on a large deal, and Dr. Phinizy Calhoun is also bickering on a large purchase of property.

The Burdett agency is working on a sale involving $100,000. The A. J. & H. F. West agency has recently closed $25,000 worth of sales, while the Ben Evans-Cauble agency has done an equal amount of business within the past thirty days.

E. Rivers and Forrest & George Adair report a good business in residence and sales of lots. J. R. Smith & J. H. Ewing are also figuring in several important transactions.

McLeod-McDowell Lot Sale.

Hamilton Douglas, the well-known attorney, and James L. Logan, the popular real estate agent, have been given power of attorney to dispose of the McLeod-Dowell property as a whole or in parts. There are three attractive bungalows on this property and about sixteen lots in one of the most beautiful sections of the city. Twenty-five lots have already been sold and the balance are being offered at big bargains.

Electrically Operated Swing Bridge.

(From Popular Mechanics Magazine.)

What is said to be the first swing bridge ever built in which the opening and closing of the bridge as well as the entire work of controlling and safeguarding vehicular and waterborne traffic is performed electrically has recently been placed in service over the Forth and Clyde canal, between Glasgow and Clydebank, Scotland. This is a single swing span, carrying a double-track street railway, with the usual roadway and sidewalks. Every movement in the operation of the bridge is controlled by a master switch located in the operator's cabin, and so thoroughly is the controlling mechanism interlocked that it is impossible to open or close the bridge without following a prescribed sequence of operations and allowing the time for each operation to be completed.

Diving for the Submarine F-4.

(From Popular Mechanics Magazine.)

The sinking of the F-4 of the Hawaiian submarine flotilla, during maneuvers in Honolulu harbor on March 25, when it failed to rise after diving with twenty-one members of its crew on board, the first fatal disaster that has occurred to an American submarine craft, is "in making the unprecedented dive to the bottom of Honolulu harbor the naval operative were an ordinary diving suit. Altogether he was under the water for about two hours. The descent was made very rapidly, only five minutes being consumed after inspecting the hull of the submerged vessel and ascertaining how the lines were lying, he commenced to be raised to the surface. An hour and forty-five minutes was spent in doing this, so as to accustom him slowly to the decreasing pressure and the final change to the normal atmospheric pressure. This precaution is made necessary by the tremendous pressure a diver is subjected to when under a great depth of water. At 200 feet the pressure is approximately 130 pounds to the square inch aggregate load of about 60 tons. An aggregate loda of possibly 140 tons. A quick descent is possible, since an increase in pressure can be readily withstood by the body, up to a certain point, but on ascending every possible care must be taken to allow the body to become accustomed to the lighter load. This is the reason that seven-eighths of the time the diver was in the water was spent in raising him to the surface."

COMPULSORY EDUCATION IS URGED BY BRITTAIN

Forty-Third Annual Report of Department of Education Is Made to the Governor.

The forty-third annual report of the department of education has been submitted to the governor by Professor M. L. Brittain, state superintendent of schools.

The report is one of the most exhaustive and complete that has ever been made of Georgia's schools, covering in detail all matters pertaining to every educational institution under control of the state. The report fills 820 printed pages.

As the recommendations are of the most importance to the public school system, Mr. Brittain has devoted much time and study to the needs of the schools.

Speaking of the expense of the state's public school system, Mr. Brittain says:

What the State Expends.

"Uninformed persons frequently make statements in public so misleading about the great cost of our public schools, that it is but proper for the matter to be set right officially. Instead of our spending much for public education in this state, it is a matter of exact official record that only three states spend as little, and forty-four spend more. My purpose here at this point, however, is not to refer to this so much as to make distinct the truth that we are not only not anywhere near the first in educational expenditure, but instead, are among the lowest."

Mr. Brittain says that the educational interests of the state have suffered by reason of delay in the payment of teachers.

"The disappointment was greater than usual," he states, "because we had been led to expect help through tax equalization."

Favors Free Text Books.

Speaking of free text books for primary grades, he says that it would be better to furnish the free texts than to increase the school appropriation. In his report he says, along this line:

"The help would be more positive and practical if presented in the shape of free text books for one or two grades than by more funds to make the term a week or two longer. It would not be wise, even if we were able, to furnish these to all pupils at once, but it would be best to begin by supplying the basal books to the primary grades only, especially if we can secure a compulsory attendance law. Several of our towns already furnish the school books at cheap nominal fee and the state generally ought to have at least this opportunity. Twelve have free texts throughout the schools."

Referring to the effort that has been made to have the school books printed by the state, Mr. Brittain says, as to state printing:

"My own personal view has always varied from that of the educational forces generally, in the belief that the state ought, in justice to itself, to test this matter both as to publication outright and by the method of leasing plates also. With some text of local color like a civics, history, or reader, it could be tried with more chance for success. Curiously, despite this position, certain well-known influences have pointed to the state school superintendent as the chief enemy of this measure."

Great stress is laid upon the work being done by M. L. Duggan, who is making a survey of the school system. The superintendent believes that a great and lasting good is being accomplished. Mr. Duggan, he states, is still at work and will go over the entire state.

"Some good ladies," says the superintendent, "have given material aid to the domestic science training, among whom was Mrs. Walton H. Wirgs."

Mr. Brittain favors an illiteracy commission to look after the adults who have grown up without being able to read or write.

Compulsory Education.

For the enforcement of a compulsory education law, Mr. Brittain offers the following suggestion:

"The first is somewhat unusual, but it is so simple that it would seem to reach the trouble effectively. It is in effect that you consider the passage of a simple bill, a dozen lines in length, declaring that every father who neglects to provide his children with the necessary food, clothing, medical attention, and education to the extent, at least, of reading, writing, and the calculation of simple figures, may be adjudged guilty of a misdemeanor and on conviction may be fined not less than $10 or in default of this condemned to work the public roads not less than ten days."

The report embraces reports of county superintendents and the superintendents of all of the state's educational institutions. The information given from all departments is full and complete.

MRS. MARY BARTLETT DIES AT ALMSHOUSE

Fairburn, Ga., June 26.—(Special.)—Mrs. Mary Bartlett, widow of Judge William M. Bartlett, and aged 80 years, after a lingering illness, died Saturday at the county almshouse, to which she removed more than a year ago on account of her growing infirmities and vanishing means of livelihood.

She had been upon the pension roll of the state for many years as the widow of her confederate soldier husband.

There are no known relatives surviving her.

Funeral services at 3 o'clock Sunday afternoon by Rev. Bryan L. Collier, pastor in charge, will be held at the Fairburn Baptist church, and interment will be in the family lot beside her husband, in Fairburn cemetery.

PERMANENT HIGHWAYS ARE URGED BY SIBLEY

Indorses Andrews Bill for Commission—Says Better Roads Mean Less Maintenance.

"As Georgia always keeps pace in the march of progress in all things affecting her welfare, I am confident the bill to create a state highway commission will be promptly enacted by the legislature," said John W. Sibley, secretary-treasurer of the Southern Paving Brick Manufacturers' association, who has been attending the quarterly meeting of the association at the Piedmont hotel.

Mr. Sibley is an ex-Georgian, being a member of the Sibley family of Augusta, but has for many years resided in Birmingham, being president of its chamber of commerce in 1912.

"Walter P. Andrews is to be highly commended for his farseeing and patriotic wisdom in preparing and introducing this bill," said Mr. Sibley, "as the only way to intelligently and economically co-ordinate the work of road building by the various counties, is through a state highway commission.

Good Roads Save Expense.

"The annual cost of maintenance of temporary roads, especially in large counties like Fulton, would easily pay the interest on bonds to construct permanent and dependable highways like the vitrified brick road built by Fulton county last year, and the extension of South Pryor street, where the convicts are being successfully used in the construction work.

"Upon the recommendation of Governor Glynn in a special message in 1914 the legislature of New York approved the plan of discontinuing the waste of many millions of dollars on macadam roadways, and all the state highways are being built on permanent basis. This has long been the practice in Ohio and Pennsylvania and other progressive states, all of which have state highway commissions, with the most efficient and competent engineers in charge of same, under the control of the governor and other members."

Aid to Farmers.

Mr. Sibley said he recently visited Cleveland, Ohio, and inspected the splendid highways of Cuyahoga county built of vitrified brick, some of which have been laid for fifteen years, and have not cost the county anything for repairs and are good for many years more. This single county has over 500 miles of such highways and the adjoining counties, under the state highway commission, have co-operated in building an interurban highway between Cleveland and Akron, seventy miles, over which a motor truck service is operated on regular schedule, not only to the great benefit of the consumer, but the wholesale merchant and the truck farms.

"There is no sound reason why Georgia should not in a few years accomplish similar results, and it is eminently fitting that the great county of Fulton should take the initiative in this most important movement," observed Mr. Sibley.

HOSPITAL FOR CRIPPLES IN RECEIPT OF $100,000

Augusta, Ga., June 26.—(Special.)—Mrs. Minnie Battle Allyn, who will be the founder of the Georgia State Hospital for Cripples, is quite enthusiastic over the fact that her efforts have so far secured subscriptions of $100,000 toward the erection of the buildings. It is planned to place the institution in Augusta, where the noteworthy staff of the medical college and the climate will combine to make for comfort for the unfortunates who it is intended to reach. After a visit in the east, Miss Allyn intends to tour the state this summer and secure funds for the financing of the project.

POLICE PERSONALS

BY TILLOU FORBES

Captain W. F. Terry, not the oldest policeman on the Atlanta force, but the one having the whitest locks, has a new "hobbyhorse"—the captain is learning to drive the new Ford machine at police station. Captain Terry calls this car, which is used by the call officers and policemen stationed at headquarters, his "jitney bus."

Captain Terry says:

"Chief Beavers has his private car, and Mr. Morris has his, so I guess I will just adopt that young fellow for my own jitney bus."

It is not an infrequent sight on the streets now to see Captain Terry, his once famous horse discarded, rounding up his patrolmen in his so-called "jitney bus."

Mr. and Mrs. Swint, of Albermarle avenue, informally entertained at cards a few of their friends last Thursday evening, and among the guests were Chief Beavers and Assistant Chief E. L. Jett, the father of Mrs. Swint.

Call Officer B. R. Haslett, who recently shot himself through his foot by a bullet which had passed through the body of a mad dog and glanced from a can, is still walking on crutches. He is taking the Pasteur treatment for his third time, having been bitten by mad dogs on two former occasions when bravely attempting to check the onrush of the beasts on a crowd of small children.

Officer Bill McKinney, the smallest policeman of the force, has returned to work, after being confined to his home on crutches for two weeks as the result of a fall from his motorcycle while answering a burglary call. The officer broke a toe on his right foot in the fall.

Uncle Tom Taylor, who was run over by an auto recently at Five Points, is gradually recovering from his injuries. One of his legs was broken, and the other fractured slightly. He is at the Grady hospital.

Patrolman Powell, who was operated on at Grady two weeks ago, is reported as being much better.

L. O. Askew, who has been confined in the hospital from sickness for several weeks, is now much improved.

Detective George Garner, whose right leg was broken in nine places in an auto accident several months ago, will not be able to return to work for several weeks yet.

"CRIBBING" PROBE DRAWING TO CLOSE

Annapolis, Md., June 26.—A definite point in the "cribbing" investigation at the Naval Academy was reached today when Judge Advocate Watt at the close of the morning session of the court of inquiry announced that he had no further witnesses to call at this time. The defense, accordingly, will begin on Monday the examination of its witnesses from among the members of the regiment of midshipmen now quartered aboard the ships of the practice squadron.

It is considered probable that the cruise of the midshipmen to the San Francisco exposition will start within a week.

A complaint against Ensign R. Burhen, one of the defendants, was filed by Ensign J. L. McCrea with the commandant of midshipmen and today forwarded to the court by that officer. Burhen was charged with contempt of court in attempting to talk to a witness while the latter was segregated and under the guard of McCrea. Burhen submitted a written statement to the court in which he said he had no intention of breaking any rule of the court, but thought as a defendant he had a right to converse with any witnesses. The court stated that it would announce its action upon the statement at some later date.

LIVE FIGHT EXPECTED ON THE LOCKER CLUBS

Council May Bar All Those Established After Prohibition Began.

Indications Saturday pointed to a lively fight in general council Monday when, in adjourned session applications will be considered for locker club and pool room licenses. It was reported that the majority of the pool room applications will be turned down, since they are operated jointly with near beer saloons.

Of the twenty applications for locker club licenses, it is said that only five will be granted without contest. The five in question are those that were in operation before the prohibition law was passed in 1907. The five are: The Elks', Capital City club, Atlanta Athletic club, Piedmont Driving club and Transportation club.

Several of the council members have stated publicly that they may vote to license all of the clubs with the exception of the Owls' club, against which complaint has been made.

The mayor has deferred action on the 152 licenses granted last Monday for near beer saloons, until council takes action tomorrow on the locker clubs and pool rooms. He has been furnished with a list of all applications and is making an investigation of many of them.

GOVERNOR HARRIS QUITS LAW FIRM; SONS SUCCEED HIM

Judge Nat Harris announced yesterday, before being inaugurated as governor of Georgia, that he had severed his connection with the Macon law firm, upon the position that his membership in a law firm is incompatible with his tenure of the office of chief executive of the state.

The firm, which was formerly known as Harris & Harris, is now Harris, Harris & Witman.

The firm was formerly composed of Judge Harris, his two sons, Walter A. Harris and John B. Harris, and M. J. Witman. Mr. Witman's name did not appear in the style of the old firm. The only difference in the personnel of the firm now is that caused by the retirement of Judge Harris.

"I retired from the firm," said Judge Harris, "because I did not feel that I should be connected with any law firm while I was governor of the state."

BEN BANKS PARDONED BY GOVERNOR SLATON

Man Who Entered Wickersham Home Freed Through Mrs. Springer's Efforts.

After serving eighteen months of a ten-year sentence at the Conyers, Ga., convict camp, Ben Banks, aged 38, who was convicted of burglarizing the home of C. A. Wickersham, in College Park, a year and a half ago, was pardoned by Governor Slaton Monday morning. The pardon was secured by Mrs. L. Springer, who circulated a petition and presented it signed to the pardoning board, and later to the governor.

According to Mrs. Springer, Banks had been under the influence of liquor prior to the time of his arrest on the burglary charge. She stated that liquor accounted for his act and that he was a good man, taking care of a wife and four children, when not under its influence.

The pardon was so arranged by Mrs. Springer, that it came as a birthday present to Banks. He was liberated on his thirty-eighth birthday.

ACTIVITY HALTED IN WALL STREET

Anxiety Over German Reply, Russian Reverses and Huge Sale American Securities Heavy on Market.

New York, June 26.—(Special.)—The stock market was quiet, but prices as a whole were firm and a few stocks measured large advances to new high records during the week. The volume of business and general sentiment indicated that the general public and all of traders will keep out of the market until a reply is received to the last note to Germany. Another factor keeping down activity has been the recent success of the German-Austrian campaign in Galicia. At one period since the war started, success of the German side was a bear argument in the stock market. At present, it merely seems to put a damper on bullish enthusiasm and probably having a weakening effect because at present stocks are quite firmly held as a whole. However, some temporary weakness soon after the government was declared right by the supreme court in the case of the railroads holding coal properties under the Sherman act, but this was largely discounted as in all the issues affected later on the week.

English Liquidation of American Securities.

Preparations for the huge loan to be floated in England and France, assisted by many foreign securities, including many shares of corporations and bonds of this country, are one of the main reasons for this is that funds are not adequate to take up all of the offerings expected to complete the total needed for its purpose. It is predicted that possibly $200,000,000 in American stocks and bonds will be sold from Great Britain during the course of the next few weeks. Another reason for selling outside securities is that interest rate on the new loan that there, 4½ per cent, is higher than had been expected and is considered unusually attractive for a government issue. Foreign sellers at the present period of it has been well absorbed here, although that possibly is another reason for lack of activity in securities. As was the case soon after the exchanges reopened, the bulk of selling of all kinds has been for foreign account, other holders being inclined to sit back and wait before realizing on their shares, or bonds. Offsetting the various sources mentioned is existing reports of continued excellent business conditions, improving industrial conditions and higher prices for many kinds of manufactures for exports, and high prices for minerals, metals and many materials needed for other raw materials needed for use. These factors are all tending for a strong stock market sooner or later, and they are bound to have their effect in the end.

Surplus Reserves Grow.

The piling up of funds in all places where reserves compute, is also an increasing scale recently, with the members of the clearing house bank of New York alone having a $200,000,000 surplus reserve in excess of legal requirements of just $100,000,000. This is the more surprising in view of the heavy movement of funds to the interior during the month, and the fact that call money has continued under 2 per cent, time funds are in good demand, quicker for loans are very limited and some banks are going out of their way to find use for idle funds, buying commercial paper as quickly as it is offered by the people who, while in good enough, were not considered wholly satisfactory by many banks at this time. Quite true at that time anyone, no matter how honest and no matter how good his collateral security, could get the indorsements of his paper who did not meet all of these requirements. Now people, such as mentioned, are treated as well as the most substantial firms and individuals, and even then banks are hunting for ways to use their funds.

Foreign Exchange Still Declines.

Although a plan for a French loan here has been announced, franc exchange went to a new low level during the last week, as did sterling exchange, although the latter recovered somewhat in a few days. Also in this market of American securities held in Great Britain, and the French loan will be $50,000,000 or more. It will have American securities held in France as collateral, the trustees to hold the collateral to be either J. P. Morgan & Co. or some one appointed by them. Rothschilds, of Paris, will be the actual borrowers, though the French government will receive the money. Most of the securities to be put up as collaterals are in France, the remainder, being loans originally listed and only listed on the Paris bourse, and hence not saleable through the New York or other American stock exchanges. It is expected that the British will establish a similar credit by deposit of American securities. There are some indications, too, that American investors will take a large amount of the British loan, although there have been no plans to bring it out in this direction here.

Trade Balance Will Exceed $1,000,000,000.

The trade balance of the United States for the fiscal year to June 30 will be at least $720,000,000 in excess of $1,000,000,000, having passed the latter figure early in the year. Offsetting this has been the expenses of tourists last summer and fall, small, or either in the autumn, winter and spring to date, remittances of money to Europe, and other items, the net imports of various kinds such as travelers' baggage; sales of American securities, etc. It is believed, however, that an actual debt of $500,000,000 for the year to be met from gold exports created during the fiscal year just closing, and this may possibly be as large as $500,000,000.

Supreme Court Decision on D., L. & W.

The supreme court of the United States held that the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western Railroad company violated the Sherman act and the commodities clause of the Hepburn rate law in selling its entire output of coal to its subsidiary company, and its action was ordered enjoined. The decision was followed by weakness, but later by strength in D., L. & W. shares, as it is believed that both the road and the company if formed, now as an independent concern, will be able to make just as large profit whether the latter takes the road's entire coal output contract or whether it buys what it needs and the balance is marketed to best advantage elsewhere.

Melon Cuttings "Juicy."

A number of companies went into increased disbursements on their stock during the last week, with several important initial dividends and several large extra dividends. The most important initial disbursement was in the preferred stock of the Interborough Consolidated corporation, which started with 1 1-2 per cent for the third quarter of this year, or at a rate of 6 per cent a year. A stock dividend of 250 per cent is to be given to shareholders of the New Jersey Zinc company, which has profited greatly on extraordinary demand and unusually high prices for zinc. In July, dividends and interest payment of companies additional importance will be close to $175,000,000, or over $50,000,000 more than for July, 1914, indicating that as far as security disbursements are concerned, the country is back to where it was before the war started last year.

New York City Financing.

An issue of $71,000,000 New York city bonds next week will be made solely to redeem maturing debts of the city, and will not increase its net indebtedness save to a small extent. The outlook is stated to be good as far as bankers can tell for both oversubscription to the issue and a large premium per in the bids.

Germany in War Supply Market.

Metal market authorities have stated recently that agents for Germany were heavy buyers of zinc, spelter and other metals essential to the manufacture of ammunition, the idea being that they would thereby embarrass manufacturers supplying shells, cartridges and similar war supplies to the allies. The report states that this buying induced a great impetus in production and a break in zinc, lead and spelter followed the abandonment of the scheme. Whether this is true or not, the market has weakened considerably in the last ten days, although the influx of war orders has been on an increasing scale. Locomotive, car and manufacturing and other plants are rushing new equipment for turning out shot and shell and putting up new buildings for that purpose. A large order for ammunition for Roumania and large coal orders for Italy are among the new orders for Europe reported during the last week.

Wabash Sale Held Up.

The foreclosure sale of the Wabash railroad has been postponed from July 8 to July 21. A reorganization plan is to be put into effect by which the present bondholders will buy in the property. No other bidder is expected at the sale.

Missouri Pacific Prospects Brighter.

Missouri Pacific bondholders have been invited to organize for protection in view of the contemplated reorganization of the road. Although it is believed that the measure of organization is merely precautionary and that the property will be subjected to rehabilitating the road's finances without receivership or bankruptcy it will be found satisfactory to all security holders. It is believed that the affiliation of the Missouri Pacific and the St. Louis, Iron Mountain & Southern will be one of the results of the reorganization. It is understood that the management will announce its contributory to the balance of the notes due June 1 are deposited for extension. This balance amounts to $1,500,000 of the total of $24,845,000.

Copper Inquiry Slackens.

Buying of copper has not been heavy during the last two weeks, but the market has not weakened any, as practically all producers' supplies are for the present period and for some time ahead had been sold up long ago. By the end of June the falling off in sales does not decrease, it is expected that there will be no easier feeling in the market, but large purchasing is looked for with, in the next week or two. The present price of 21 cents per pound is being held to by the largest sellers, and the cheapest copper being sold is at about 20 cents.

Steel Inquiry Holds Up.

Improvement in the steel market is steady and gradual, with a total of use by members of the industry. The United States Steel corporation now is operating at above 85 per cent of full capacity in many departments and is furnishing more employment than at any time before. The 1915 production of ingots will be over 25,000,000 gross tons, or tons of steel, which is nearly 1,000,000 less than the record, but this total for 1915 if made will be remarkable in view of the fact that the year opened with the corporation at the rate of only 9,000 tons a year. If present conditions continue through the last half of the year, it is probable that the Steel corporation will make more than 15,000,000 tons, which are for ingots. Steel manufacturers are now receiving an average of $1.30 to $1.40 per hundred for their finished product than they did for the first part of the year, and the steel trade is not use in shrapnel, prices are now about $3 to a ton higher than at the low point of the year, and the indications at present there are orders for 50,000 to 100,000 tons of steel for shrapnel shells to be worked on or just placed and that there are large orders for other steel which will be placed soon. In many cases the corporations have stated that by the end of 1915, continuing in the industry if continued as at present will have a steel plant equal to the boom period of 1907. About one-third of the orders received during the last month have been for export, and counting steel used in various manufactures and in other forms to be sent abroad by the end of the year, half of the country's steel output will be exported.

Wheat "See-Saws."

The wheat market received some report when the July delivery at this center touched $1.20 a bushel, and that foreigners have again entered the market, buying from all over the world and in the near future. Shorts have made a large profit on the rise, only to cover on all developments favorable to higher prices, but bull interest in the market is kept in check by large receipts from all quarters showing that the winter wheat crop will be as large as estimated.

Cotton Situation Puzzling.

Cotton goods have a selling from abroad and because of lack of support due to the continued uncertainly brought about by the sinking of the steamer from Germany to the last American note. Price activity in July delivery cotton is reported to have been responsible for selling by Liverpool here recently.

SIGNIFICANCE OF D., L. & W. DECISION

Will Decision of U. S. Court at Trenton Be Reversed by the Supreme Court in Steel Case Also?

New York, June 26.—Wall street believes that this week's decision of the supreme court against the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western road will turn out as a landmark in the government's long fight to separate the railroads from the business of mining and selling coal. Since the "commodity clause" law was passed exactly nine years ago this month, several railroads, notably the Pennsylvania, have voluntarily taken steps to divorce their transportation business from the business of mining and selling coal, and there are other companies, however, employing the highest-priced legal talent in the country, that have contested every inch of ground won so far by the government.

"Commodity Clause."

Since the "commodity clause" law was placed on the books, there have been at many contradictory rulings as it turns in the fight between the coal roads and the government. It is hard to understand this week's decision it is necessary to go back a few years. In the winter of 1895-1906, a well-known New York banker returning from a western trip spoke of mining and selling bearing of the insurance scandals on the financial situation. He said that how distrust of a life insurance company could possibly affect investment securities elsewhere. He added that "People generalise, especially in the west, and think every one is that way." The railways must be as bad, and some day they may take a hand in politics. In such a way he comes the question of the market." If that bank prophesied true to be a failure. It will never be able to see clearer into its future. In one way or another he was involved in the railroad end of the money trust investigation, and he was also implicated in the Rock Island, Frisco and Alton scandals. Within a few days after the foregoing prediction was made, the Pennsylvania investigation was started, and disclosures of that investigation, which was the first affecting the railroads formed the basis of things before. The 1915 production of ingots will be over 25,000,000 gross tons of steel, which is nearly 1,000,000 less than the record, but this total for 1915 if made will be remarkable in view of the fact that the year opened with the corporation at the rate of only 9,000 tons a year. SENTIMENT MIXED ON STOCK EXCHANGE

Investment Shares Strong. Secondary Railway Stocks in Poor Demand—Reading Shows Unusual Strength.

New York, June 26.—Strength in investment shares and renewed weakness in secondary railway issues and United States Rubber furnished the opposing movements of today's brief but fairly animated session. Buying of Reading was the most impressing feature, transactions in that stock maximum gain of 4 points. Other high-grade railway shares were in moderate demand and advanced of a point or thereabouts, and United States Steel, Amalgamated Copper and American Smelting & Refining with few specialties, also reflected absorption.

United States Rubber added 3 points to the recent sharp setback, declining to 51¼, against 66¼ at the week's opening. Rumors persist that the dividend is to be cut, if not entirely passed, at next week's meeting of the directors.

Routine news included another break in the Mexican exchanges on which London also fell off, likewise francs, but neither was at recent record quotations.

For the first time since early in May, bank funds failed to show an actual cash gain.

Bonds irregular with more sales for "Canada" or foreign account. Total sales, par value, $7,288,000.

PROFESSIONAL VIEWS ON COTTON SITUATION

New York, June 26.—(Special.)—Liverpool was better under buying, but the bearish view in Great Britain that the Allies' blockade of the Central powers must decline. Here we decline but slowly, but because of the belief that the northwest, Oklahoma and Arkansas and Texas, increasing complaints of shortage, more noticeable than in many season. While these advices check selling, they do not decrease the bearish sentiment as there are no forward sales this season of cotton as usual when the new crop comes forward it will press heavy upon the market. The entire world has gone upon a cash basis for everything; these are smaller supplies on hand than ever before, from the mill to cotton goods than ever before, and if there are any reductions in the trade and no further business done with the distant positions it is probable there is only one fact a potential buying power far beyond estimate which may suddenly will become buyers of cotton and cotton goods.

New York, June 26.—There was a further decline in the cotton market here today with prices closing steady at a net loss of 3 to 9 points.

Liverpool was again lower than due, and the local market opened steady at a decline of 6 to 8 points under liquidation and scattering local pressure. October sold off to 9.44 at the first call and seemed to attract some trade buying which was attributed to spinners calling or fixing prices. This developed into a steadying factor for over the week-end proved sufficient to cause light rallies during the early trading periods, but the market failed to hold to much gain in Oklahoma, but no aggressive support and the rallies had prices soon turned easier, selling about 4 points were lower, and at the lowest point reached so far this month. Covering by near month shorts caused slight rallies in the close but last prices were at practically the low point of the day on later deliveries.

The detailed weather reports from Oklahoma showed a rather general rain but the precipitation was not very heavy and except for the complaints from that section of crop news was considered generally favorable.

Private Liverpool reports indicate in Liverpool but press advices said there was some improvement in the demand for goods from India and China in Manchester. Domestic trade accounts were considered favorable, with yarn mills reporting some business from all of the American markets. Mills were said to be working very nearly to full time capacity.

New Orleans Peers Bureau Report.

New Orleans, June 26.—Again spite of bullish week-end figures and too much rain in the belt, cotton showed a decline throughout the session today, closing within a point of the lowest and a few points above the bottom. Support was almost wholly from covering shorts, little fresh buying being apparent. Lack of bullish support was generally attributed to expectations of favorable weather in the coming bureau reports on acreage and condition.

Liverpool was considerably lower than due, which opened the local market at the decline. The tone was steadied by the wet reports over the belt and the good showing made by the week-end statistics. Private reports from Oklahoma pictured the crop of that state as being in a bad way through lack of sunshine, the ability of farmers to cultivate. Texas complained of too much rain.

Mill takings for the week were larger than expected, Hester putting them at 115,000 bales, against 156,000 this week last year, while Liverpool spot sales of 71,000 bales, against only 28,000 this week last year, caused much comment. The only effect on these figures, however, was to steady the market.

Maintenance Budget Adopted By Trustees of University

The University of Georgia, including all of its allied branches, will follow this year the closest economy in its demands upon the funds of the state, as is indicated by the action of the board of trustees which met at the University club in Atlanta last week and made up its budget for presentation to the general assembly.

The trustees, recognizing the need of holding the state's expenses down as low as possible during the existing conditions caused by the war, will ask this year not a cent of special appropriations, with the exception of $4,500 for an infirmary at the State Normal school. Moreover, the general appropriation asked will be increased but $47,500 over the last appropriation. This is the smallest increase that has been asked in many years.

The board announced its approval of the appropriation of $25,174 for the first year, and $46,150 for the second year, necessary to supplement the federal appropriation under the Smith-Lever bill. By making such an appropriation Georgia would receive from the federal government duplicate amounts for the agricultural college, in addition to a flat federal appropriation of $10,000, whereas, if these sums are not appropriated by the Georgia general assembly, Georgia will receive from the federal government only the flat appropriation of $10,000 each year.

The following is the budget for maintenance for the next two years as adopted by the board of trustees:

Institution.	Present General.	Appropriation: Special, 1914.	Asked this year.	Increase.
North Ga. Agricultural College	$21,500		$ 36,500	$ 2,000
Georgia School of Technology	80,000	$10,000	100,000	10,000
Georgia Medical College	30,000		30,000
Ga. Normal and Indus. College	52,500	5,000	67,500	10,000
State Normal School	47,500	5,000	57,500	5,000
Indus. College for Colored Youths	5,000		5,000
South Georgia Normal College	25,000		25,000
College of Agriculture:
Maintenance	60,000		60,000
Extension	40,000		40,000
Serum plant: serum to be sold to farmers at actual cost	2,000		2,000
*Field Meetings and Farmers' Institutes			2,500	2,500
University of Georgia:
Maintenance	52,500		65,000	12,500
Summer School	5,000		7,500	2,500

The board approved the amount of $25,174 for the first year and $46,150 for the second year stated by the Agricultural College as necessary to supplement the federal appropriation of the Smith-Lever bill, and the legislative committee is requested to give these amounts the proper direction before the legislature, either in the general appropriation bill or a special bill, as may be legal and proper.

The board also approved a special bill asking for $4,500 for an infirmary at the State Normal School.

Dixie Highway Western Route Reported in Great Condition

The western route of the Dixie highway south of Macon, Ga., is in a condition "vastly above expectation," according to a report just made to Clark Howell, of Atlanta, and W. T. Anderson, of Macon, Dixie highway commissioners for Georgia, by E. Y. Clarke, secretary of the Brooks County Industrial club, and Joseph G. Gardiner, secretary of the Thomasville Commercial association, who have just traversed the route from Macon to Thomasville by automobile.

Their report states that the condition of the road is a "magnificent justification of the commissioners in the selection of this as the western route." The road, says the report, is in almost perfect condition, with the exception of a total of about five miles scattered at various points of the route between Macon and Albany.

The party left Macon at 11 o'clock in the morning and arrived in Thomasville the same night. The time made was from thirty to sixty miles per hour.

South of Albany to Thomasville, says the report, heavy work is being done on certain stretches of the road, while other parts of the roads "are the finest we have ever traveled over."

Secretaries Clarke and Gardiner are taking up the matter of the improvement of the few miles of inferior road with the commissioners of the counties in which these stretches are found.

Macon Drum and Bugle Corps Serenades The Constitution

The Macon drum and bugle corps, which put up such a pretentious appearance upon the down-town streets and in the inauguration ceremonies Saturday, marched to the front of The Constitution building early last night and gave a serenade.

A large crowd of passersby was attracted. The Macon organization is one of the best trained in the state. Beginning with a blast of bugle calls and drum tattoos, the players wound up with a rendition of Tipperary.

HAL REID IN ATLANTA PROBING FRANK CASE

His Moving Pictures Were Wanted by Defense in the Thaw Case.

The Ansley hotel lobby, bustling with visitors to the inauguration ceremonies, was the scene of the Atlanta angle to the Harry Thaw trial Saturday afternoon.

Hal Reid, the noted playwright, author and investigator, was informed that the Thaw prosecution had announced it intended using a set of motion pictures photographed by Reid to establish the fact that Thaw was insane.

The playwright immediately got busy on the wire to New York. He was informed by John B. Stanfield, Thaw's chief counsel, that the prosecution planned to show by the pictures taken by Reid in the prisoner's cell that Thaw was subject to a nervous ailment that constantly caused his face and throat to twitch.

In a lengthy telegram Reid explained to the attorney for the defense that the pictures had been taken at a slow speed in order that full exposure could be gained to eliminate the defective light of the prisoner's cell, in which they were photographed, and that when the film was run off on the projection machine, which was naturally run at a greater speed, the figures were caused to jump in unnatural fashion.

Hal Reid is author of 100 plays. He is in the city investigating the Frank case, upon which he plans to write an analysis. He visited Milledgeville Saturday morning, where he had a talk with the prisoner and his wardens. He has already held two conferences with ex-Governor Slaton, to whom he was introduced by letters from the secretary of state and the secretary of war.

CHICKENS IN QUITMAN HATCHED OUT BY SUN

Quitman, Ga., June 26.—(Special.)—Eleven little chickens were hatched in Quitman last Thursday with the sun playing the role of mother.

A hen belonging to Lilla Johnson, a colored woman who lives on West Bartow street, deserted her nest after setting on the eggs exactly two weeks. Lilla could not make the hen return to the nest, and deciding the eggs were a loss, drew the box containing the nest out of the hen coop. She neglected to throw the nest and eggs away, and they were left exposed to the sun. At the end of a week the eggs began to hatch out. Within two days every egg had hatched, and the entire eleven chickens are as lively as if they had been reared beneath the maternal wing.

RAY TAYLOR ENTERS THE PUBLICITY GAME

Well-Known Newspaper Ad Writer Opens Office in the Empire Building.

After spending eighteen years in the advertising game for some of the leading clothing and furnishing houses in the state, and making in addition a special study of artistic window displays and conducting special sales, Ray Taylor, one of the most popular young men of the city, has entered business for himself, with offices in the Empire building.

In Mr. Taylor's experience in his special lines he has been connected with some of the largest concerns in the state, and for the past few years has held responsible positions with some of the strongest establishments in this city. He has had large experience in writing newspaper advertisements, circulars, booklets, package and letter enclosures, his work in this line standing out with the distinct earmarks of a man of original and artistic ideas.

Mr. Taylor is also recognized as an expert in window dressing, and many of the beautiful displays that have in the past attracted the passers-by in this city have been of his creation. He announces also to his friends that he expects to make a specialty of putting on special sales, being able, through his experience, to handle this feature for any department or any line.

One of the features of Mr. Taylor's work will be the attention given to handling the advertising accounts of out-of-town customers.

Personally Mr. Taylor is a genial and affable gentleman, who makes and holds friends easily, and they are predicting for him much success in his new line of publicity and sales promotion work.

AMERICAN ZIONISTS GATHER IN BOSTON

Boston, June 26.—Several thousand representatives of Zionist organizations of the country arrived here today for the opening session tomorrow of a conference regarded as the most important ever held by American Zionists, according to leaders of the movement. Zionism in Europe has been seriously affected by the war, and as Jews there are unable to bear their portion of the burden of Zionist work, added responsibility for the success of the movement devolves upon American Zionists. It is contended that at the end of the war there will be keen competition for Palestine, and that the logical disposition of it should be to assign it to the Jews.

Louis D. Brandeis, president of the allied conventions, who was one of the speakers at a reception tendered the delegates outlined the purpose of the Zionist movement, pointing out that it was not intended to compel Jews to move back to Palestine, but was designed to give them more freedom. This freedom, he said, was expected to give Jews rights now enjoyed by other peoples, and the privilege of living at their option in the land of their fathers or in some other country.

The organizations represented in the convention include the Zionist Provisional Committee conferences, the Federation of American Zionists, the Intercollegiate Zionist conference, Misrachi, Young Judea and Hachoona. The formal opening exercises will be held tomorrow morning. The delegates will be greeted by Dr. Harry Friedenwald, honorary president of the American Zionists.

GEORGIA FARMERS BUY MANY REGISTERED BULLS

$12,000 for 69 Shorthorns, and Impetus Is Given Diversification and Cattle Raising.

Albany, Ga., June 26.—(Special.)—Sixty-nine head of registered Shorthorn bulls and cows are being shipped out from Albany to purchasers from all over Georgia who attended the convention and sale conducted by the American Shorthorn Cattle Breeders' association in this city, on Wednesday, which was attended by several hundred farmers and stockraisers.

At this most propitious time for beginning the raising of registered cattle, Georgia farmers invested nearly $12,000 in breeding stock, the average price paid for the cattle being $171 per head. Many of the farmers who came to Albany stated that they have such large crops of grain and forage this year that they decided this year was the best to start cattle raising.

The convention and sale, which were held under the auspices of the Albany Chamber of Commerce, by the Albany Chamber of Commerce and the agricultural department of the Central of Georgia railway, with the active assistance of the bureau of animal husbandry of the state college of agriculture, was highly successful. Among the speakers were Governor Hugh M. Jaden, of the Georgia Chamber of Commerce; Prof. L. A. Niswonger, editor of Southern Farming, and Prof. Milton P. Jarnagin, in charge of the department of animal husbandry of the State College of Agriculture, who, with T. G. Chastain, agricultural agent of the Central of Georgia railway inspected all of the cattle before they were brought to Albany and put up at auction.

Casino Skating Rink Will Be One of Best In South, Say Owners

"The Casino" is to be the name of the new skating rink and hippodrome house soon to be opened on South Pryor street. The building is practically completed, workmen now laying the hardwood floor, which will make it one of the most ideal skating rinks in the entire country. The building is owned by John W. Alexander, who is also interested in the operation of the place, and its wide expanse will afford ample room for 600 skaters on the floor at once. The dimensions of the building are 185x128.

In the front will be rest rooms, check rooms, refreshment stands and all conveniences for skaters. A large organ, costing more than $5,000, will be installed in the rear and a smaller one in the front. It is proposed by those behind the project not only to make it a pleasure resort of a high character for skaters, but to give nightly special hippodrome acts and feats showing the highest types of physical development, in addition to bringing to the city some of the fanciest skaters in the country. The building is located on South Pryor street, near Mitchell, and will be thrown open to the public about July 1.

FOOD AND CLOTHING NEEDED FOR ALLIES

The following is a quotation from a letter just received from H. O. Beatty, doctor general of the American Relief Clearing house in Paris, with which organization the Georgia war relief committee for France and her allies, 501 Grand Opera house, in Atlanta, is affiliated:

"We understand that a report is in circulation in the United States that warm clothing is no longer necessary. Such is most erroneous and should be corrected at once. This is particularly the case with respect to refugees who in every instance have practically left their homes with only the clothing they had on their backs, which is now in tatters. There are at present in France 600,000 French refugees and about 200,000 Belgian refugees. In addition to these 800,000 refugees, there are now returning from Germany the French civilian prisoners. The condition of the refugees is so painful that it is impossible to give an adequate description of their sufferings, but if the situation of the refugees is bad, that of the returning civilian prisoners is infinitely worse. These prisoners are returning at the rate of about 10,000 a week in rags, almost naked, covered with vermin and half starved.

"We are called upon in so many emergency cases, where immediate action is necessary to save life, that we must ask you if more money cannot be sent to us for use in these emergency cases. Can you send us more money and clothing?"

TROUP TAX ASSESSORS HAVE COMPLETED TASK

LaGrange, Ga., June 26.—(Special.)—After a continuous grind, the Troup county tax assessors have finished their business this week. The amount of taxable property in Troup county, according to the books of the assessors, is $8,016,705. The amount last year was $8,298,986. This shows a decrease of $282,281. This decrease can be accounted for by the fact that the supply merchants and mercantile companies in general have smaller stocks this year. Two hundred mules were also shipped from this county this year to the war zone and none at all were shipped into Troup county.

The amount of found tax this year was $25,164 and the amount of omitted tax was $21,416. These figures made by the assessors over the returns from the entire county totaled $34,580 for the white tax payers and $10,748 for the colored.

48,000 VOLUMES ADDED TO HARVARD LIBRARY

Cambridge, Mass., June 26.—In connection with the announcement today that 48,000 volumes had been added to the Harvard University library during the past year, it was stated that some of the gifts were unique.

By a bequest made by the late Mrs. James F. Fields, the university received a rare collection of original manuscripts, including the manuscript of "The House of the Seven Gables," the "Bigelow Papers," by Lowell, "The Titmouse," by Emerson, and "The Dickens of Uncommercial Traveler."

Daniel B. Fearing, of Newport, R. I., gave a library of 12,000 volumes on angling, fisheries, yachting and whaling. In this collection are 160 different editions of Walton's "Compleat Angler," including 3 copies of the first edition, published in 1653.

OATH IS ADMINISTERED TO ATTORNEY GENERAL

The first official act of Governor Nat E. Harris, who himself Saturday took the oath of office as governor of the state, was to administer the oath of office to Mr. Walker, attorney general-elect. The oath was administered directly after the inaugural ceremonies in the governor's office in the presence of Mr. Walker's mother and several relatives and friends.

HON. CLIFFORD WALKER,
Georgia's new attorney general, in two characteristic poses.

That the vote of the people of Georgia enabled him to do this was due not only to his genuine worth as a man, his lovable qualities of character and his ability as a lawyer, but also to one of the most remarkable campaigns ever conducted in Georgia.

Mr. Walker, in his campaign, visited practically every county in Georgia, from Rabun Gap to Tybee light, and shook hands with easily more than one-half of the actual voters in the state, to say nothing of their families.

While Cliff Walker is one of the youngest men who has ever run for an important statehouse office in Georgia, he undoubtedly knows more people personally than any other one man in the state today. And with his faculty for meeting people, he is possessed of that rare power of making and keeping friends, all of which portends higher honors in years to come.

MEMORY FOR NAMES AND PEOPLE.

Mr. Walker's memory for people and names is remarkable. One day not so long ago he was at lunch in an Atlanta restaurant. His eye fell upon a gentleman who was facing away from him. He went over and spoke to him. When he returned he said:

"That is Dr. McIntosh, of Thomasville."

He had met the doctor but once, and that more than a year before, but he knew him as soon as he saw the back of his head.

As one talks with Mr. Walker it is easily understood how in a first statewide campaign he could get 125,000 Georgians to vote for him, could carry the counties with a popular majority of 65,000 votes, against a worthy opponent then in office. His clear brown eyes bespeak a genuineness that is inspiring. After his characteristic handshake—and somehow it fails of that solicitous quality of the politician's pump-handling—and a few earnest words he rarely fails to enlist the interest and maintain the friendship of those he meets.

DEMOCRATIC IN LIFE AND IDEALS.

Born of parents of good circumstances, though not wealthy, a college graduate, he is essentially democratic in his ideals and life. He has incorporated into his character a principle taught by his father—that a man who is honest and works hard is all right, however humble his source or plain his clothes. For years he gave his leisure hours to work in the factory district of his town, finding his greatest happiness in bringing joy to the children, leading them in their songs on Sundays, their Christmas trees and their picnics in the springtime. Though he will not talk of it, it is known that from his limited means he has contributed to the education of many struggling young people.

Like Abou Ben Adhem, he might well be written as "one who loves his fellow men!"

He is not only democratic in spirit, but a hard worker. He is no genius. His attainments have been accomplished through long and painstaking effort. The people of Monroe will tell of the days, when, as a boy, he was the town's route carrier, delivering to their homes all the evening papers received there, often after night in the rain and cold. Five gold medals attest the efforts of his school days. Governor Harris was led to violate the usual neutrality of candidates in an exclamation of admiration for his unyielding energy when, in returning from a campaign engagement at Balnbridge, he found that while he spent an hour at early supper at Millinger and another at breakfast at Smithville between trains, Walker had shaken hands with every voter in the two towns!

While much of his success is attributable to this energy, he gives much of the credit to his mother and father. An admirer writes from Forsyth that in a recent address to the Bessie Tift college graduates he paid a tribute to his mother which would have done credit to Henry Grady in his prime. Though his life has been thrown along different lines, his father is like that. A strong business man, Mr. Walker, Sr., has never made a public speech nor held an office; he spends his time literally slipping around hunting for chances to do some act of charity or deed of love which he could will know or nothing about. He would be rich but for his superb generosity.

With such an inheritance and such ideals, with the years of his prime just before him, the new attorney general will take good care of the legal affairs of the state, and his admirers believe he will be called to higher honors before long many years go by.

HAS GATHERED INTIMATE KNOWLEDGE OF STATE.

In his campaign for the office of attorney general political success was not all that he found. He gathered a store of intimate knowledge about his own state and his own people which is a treasure that but few men possess.

In talking with a Constitution representative several days ago he outlined some of his most salient impressions, as follows:

"The most significant impression made on my mind was the real greatness of Georgia. I had been over the state more than the average non-traveling man; I had heard speakers orate and had read articles galore on Georgia's wonderful soil, climate and resources and her greater glory, her splendid people, but I found that I had had no conception of her real strength. In almost every community I found men who could successfully run a state as governor or command an army in war. Consider all these hundreds together with the thousands of other strong men of character and ability though less fortunate in opportunities and you can realize some slight conception of Georgia's true greatness.

"And unless you have made a special study you will be surprised at the territorial greatness of the state. You have been told that Georgia is the largest state east of the Mississippi. But this generality gives but little conception of its proportions. Accustomed as we are to a distance of 75 to 30 miles from county site to county site, who in this part of the state would believe that in one instance in south Georgia—from Jesup to Folkston—the distance is 60 miles?

"Again, to really know your Georgia you must follow Sam Jones' advice and travel some—not to Buckhead, but to the four corners of the state; you must come in heart-touch with the pure-minded and brave-spirited citizenry of the mountains, the people who worship nature's God and send forth leaders of men; you must commune with the yeomanry of extreme South Georgia, with the stalwart sons of Echols and Clinch and Charlton not overlapped and isolated from the great centers and not blessed with some of their advantages, are yet splendid Georgians, loyal and true.

"Incomplete, indeed, is the view of Georgia who does not include an afternoon under the hospitable shades of Georgia's ante-bellum county seats. Any man—in plain view of the beautiful city of Cartersville, Ala., yet with a distinctive social life of her own, a people of high intellect and sweet spirit; or a day among the sturdy Salzburgers of Effingham, who, slow to promise, are sure to perform; modest in demeanor, but jealous of their honor, a strain of blood which is a credit to the best traditions of the state; an automobile ride through the county of the beautiful valley, Dade—one must go out of the state to get into it, but as in the case of other mountain regions, it is worth the trouble—a county of fine farms, of beautiful homes and royal people; or a few days buried on the bluff, the proud little city by the Altamaha, with her quaint buildings and generous hospitality recalling the fine old antebellum days; or Lowndes county, at present the capital of the state, with its slave-mart preserved intact in the center of the square, home the Phillips and the Hardemans, of the Gambles and the Prices where lawyers vie in commending each other, where the people love and honor and find life too short to hate, a charming place, where life is worth while!

WHERE TRAVELING ISN'T VERY FAST.

"The variety of soils and resources is no greater than of conditions. In one county in south Georgia it required three hours to travel nine miles, while in north Georgia, from the railroad terminus at Helen to Nacoochee, in Towns county, 20 miles, it took six hours—three hours in climbing six miles over the Blue Ridge mountains—and it was worth it, too, so much so that I traveled it again this spring. Learning that my wife's people were reared in Towns, that county recorded just two votes against me, and I thought such beautiful loyalty deserved any recognition I could give. Another story could be told of these royal-hearted people of the wonders of their climate, the beauty of their valleys, the developments following the railroad building, the great schools of Sharpe at Young Harris, of Ritchie at Rabun Gap, of Elgin at Blairsville, of Johnson at Hiawassee, of Thompson at Waleska, the Morganton institute and others. I frankly believe that an investment of $10,000 at any one of these schools would practically complete their equipment and do more permanent good than in any other field I know.

"The most amusing feature of my race to me was the antics of my relatives. Though I had a large family connection, and some of them had ever dabbled in politics; merchants, farmers, bankers, ministers, engineers, business men—all of them active, but what novices in politics they were! Some of the plants they set out were amusing and some were most effective. I remember them that they were most likely to be embarrassed if they took any special interest in the other races then being hotly contested; one of them wrote me as if proud of his political sagacity that he had been invited to a public meeting to be held to nominate his candidate for 'state's attorney' for governor, but he had made a good excuse and saved the day by staying away! Another enterprising one commandeered a wagon-body for election day, turned it on end, plastered in big alternating lines of photo posters and commendatory newspaper clippings and placed it where each voter on approaching the polls must see it; a city kinsman who had hardly voted prior to that time conceived a really artistic poster, centered with a flattering photo, had a number fixed to upright standards, enlisted a squad of boys and had them display the standards to each voter as he approached the polls at the different voting precincts. Another poor fellow, all aroused to political ways, drew the task of feeding all of the precinct where my worthy opponent spent the day (not in his home county). Though embarrassing, the novice fought, pleasantly, but gamely, through the day without stopping for lunch, and the count of the votes was quite complimentary to his energy and loyalty."

French Criticism.

(From Yale Review.)

The French are supposed to revel in general ideas, by which it is often understood that they soon grow weary of facts, have no love for "solid earth" and build intellectual castles in the air. It will not undertake to examine how far this opinion is supported by their history and literature taken as a whole. But I believe that their criticism—or, at least, the special criticism with which I am now concerned—shows them in a very different light. Angellier, for instance, has absolute reverence for and loyalty to the facts provided by his subject. He is such an enemy to vagueness that he has said: "In criticism one should always have the screwdriver in hand, and turn it up." But he never rests content till he has raised facts to that height from which a pretty wide range of psychology or mortality is discovered. Strange to say, a Frenchman is apt to wonder, when reading foreign—or shall we say, English?—criticism, how that wealth of facts and details as such, in the raw state, is at times compensated by fits of mysticism, so that the reader has the hard soil of reality under his feet, and far above, at almost immeasurable distance, heavenly visions or absolute judgments not always very easily connected with the humble facts that gave them rise. French criticism has its upgrade of general ideas, it is true, but such as are half way between earth and heaven, the link between them remaining apparently all the time.

What the Farmer Did.

(From Judge.)

A city man recently visited with his "country cousin." The man from the city, wishing to explain the joys of countryfolkian life, said: "We have certainly been having fun for the last few days. Thursday we autoed to the country club and danced until dark, then trolled back to town and danced until morning."

The country cousin, not to be outdone in the least, began telling some of the pleasures of the "simple life": "We have had pretty good times, too. Each one went to the woods to Uncle Ned's and went out to the back lot, where he has a basket picnic that afternoon. And in the evening we smoked up in the attic and stayed until morning."

A sturdy old farmer, who was listening and who was not to be stumped in the least, took up the conversation at this point and said: "Well, I reckon some fun about this time myself. I invited the corn-field and pea-shovel until sundown. Then I supposed until dark and piped until 9 o'clock, after which I meditated until 11 o'clock fived, after which I breakfasted until it was time to go mulling again."
